Arnold W. Brunner, 101 Park avenue, Manhattan, is at work on plans for a pier, freight shed and office building to be erected at the foot of State street, Albany, New York, for the Hudson Navigation Company, 32 North River, of which John W. McKinnon, is president and Campbell Carrington secretary. The construction will be fireproof, of brick, steel and stone. The pier and pier shed will be 1,200 feet long and 30 feet in width. There will be offices on the second floor 200 feet long.

Big Apartment House on Park Avenue.

Schwartz & Gross, 347 Fifth avenue, were selected architects this week for a twelve-story apartment house which the Putnam Construction Company, Samuel A. Herzog, 299 Madison avenue, is to erect at the southeast corner of Park avenue and 54th street. The building will be one of the finest houses, architecturally, on the avenue. The size of the plot is 100x115 feet. Plans will be ready for estimates in about three or four weeks. The owner will have the general contract.

Call for Subway Bids.

Bids have been called for by the Public Service Commission to be opened April 24th at 12.15 p. m., for the construction of Section No. 2 of Routes Nos. 4 and 36, the Broadway subway in Manhattan, for operation by the New York Municipal Railway Corporation. This subway is already under construction from the lower part of Manhattan to Broadway and 26th street. Section No. 2 extends under Broadway from 26th street to about 38th street. On this section there will be a local station at 28th street and an express station at 34th street.

NEW WEST SIDE APARTMENT HOTEL.

PRIVATE dwellings in the neighborhood of West 86th street are rapidly disappearing, to be supplanted by twelve-story apartment houses which, owing to the width of the street, makes buildings of this type feasible for that thoroughfare. The improvement of the plot, 309 to 311 West 86th street by the Waitt Investing Company (W. E. Waitt, president, 165 Broadway) with a twelve-story apartment hotel was started this week, the contract for clearing the premises having been awarded to the C. H. Southard Company, of Ninth avenue and 15th street. There will be suites of one room and bath, two rooms and bath and three rooms with two baths. On the ground floor will be doctors' offices, restaurant and reception rooms, and two electric elevators.

The interior finish will be highly ornamental, and every up-to-date convenience has been planned for. The exterior will be of granite and limestone to the third story, and terra cotta above. The foundation work has been placed with Clark & Company, of 225 Fifth avenue; structural steel to the Hedden Iron Construction Company, 30 Church street; terra cotta to the Conkling-Armstrong Terra Cotta Company, 1133 Broadway, and limestone to John Hutchingson, of Philadelphia, Pa. The cost will be around $250,000. Laurence A. Ball, 19 East 24th street, is steel engineer. William R. Hearst, who owns the twelve-story house, 350 West 86th street, will make general renovations throughout the building, plans for which have been prepared by Charles E. Birge, 29 West 34th street.

The two large houses which the Almore Realty Company, Benjamin Mordecai, president, 30 East 42d street, is building at 149 to 193 West 86th street, at a cost of about $500,000, from plans by Rouse & Goldstone, are now being trimmed. In West 87th street, 302 to 308, work is in progress on a nine-story house for the Coast Construction Company, of which Samuel G. Hess, 149 Broadway, is president, to cost $200,-000.

In 85th street, the south side, 100 feet east of West End avenue, the nine-story house which the Woolsey Realty Corporation, A. Kahn, president, is erecting is now being roofed. This will cost $200,000.

Another twelve-story apartment hotel, which Julius Tishman & Sons, 299 Broadway, are building at 324 to 326 West 84th street at a cost of $200,000, will probably be ready for occupancy before midsummer, the mason work being up to the roof line.

Klein & Jackson, 149 Broadway, are having plans prepared by Rouse & Goldstone, 38 West 32d street, for a nine-story apartment house and two residences, to be erected at the north corner of 88th street and Riverside Drive. The Excelsior Holding Company, Samuel Levy, president, 600 West End avenue, has plans for an eight-story house at 311 to 317 West 89th street on a plot 80x84 feet, to cost $200,000. Wallis & Goodwillie, 346 Fourth avenue, have prepared the plans.

TRADE LITERATURE

Mechanical Pioneer Specialists.

Though specialization in manufacturing is generally believed to be of recent origin, it found application with the pioneers in the mechanical field in the United States. It is found recorded in Harper's Encyclopedia of United States History that in 1643, two hundred and seventy years ago, General Robert Sedgwick with John Winthrop, Jr., established the first furnace and ironworks in America, at Lynn, Mass.

For ten generations, except when called to the defense of their country in the Colonial and Revolutionary wars, the Sedgwicks have continued in the craft, manufacturing from metal and wood machines and mechanical devices which have contributed largely to the wonderful progress of the United States, handing down from father to son the skill and experience accumulated during more than two and a half centuries of specialized effort.

In 1844, Charles Henry Sedgwick, the seventh direct descendent of General Robert Sedgwick, brought the business to Poughkeepsie, N. Y., its present location. Some years later, Alonzo Sedgwick, son of Charles Henry Sedgwick, associated with Justus Ingersoll Wakelee, erected a new plant and concentrated their united energies on the manufacture of hand power elevators and dumbwaiters with which they have been nationally identified ever since.

An attractive catalogue of absorbing interest has just been published by the Sedgwick Machine Works. It is interesting because of its historic value, and shows the wonderful progress made in the mechanical field, and particularly the development in hand power elevator and dumbwaited manufacture and adaptability. This booklet will be sent upon request.

To Rehabilitate Metal Products Co.

President Turner of the United Metal Products Company, in his annual report to stockholders, gives assurances that it will be only a short time when advances may be resumed on the preferred stock. The company is said to be making satisfactory progress in the rehabilitation of its credit and business and further progress is indicated in a plan which the president has in mind for scaling down the capitalization of the company by a reduction in the $5,000,000 common stock. Speaking of this plan Mr. Turner says that he suggests that when the proper time comes the common stock will be reduced to such an extent that the good will account may in a large measure be eliminated. The capital account of the company shows that "good will" has been capitalized at $3,813,365. The common stock outstanding is $5,000,000, which is owned to a great extent by interests identified with the Assets Realization Company. The entire amount charged to the good will account, including organization expenses and patents, totals $4,543,274. The income account for the year shows net profits of only $33,659, before considering losses on contracts aggregating $63,000.

Boycotts and the Labor Struggle.

In view of the recent decision of the courts in the Danbury Hatters' case, and the consequent concerted action which is being taken to amend the Sherman Anti-Trust act so as to exempt trade unions from liability from damages in boycotting cases, the volume on "Boycotts and the Labor Struggle", written by Harry W. Laidler, a member of the New York bar, and published by John Lane Company, New York, is just now of special interest to all employers of labor. The author deals exhaustively with both the economic and legal aspects. The book contains an introduction by Prof. Henry R. Seager, professor of the trust problem and the labor problem at Columbia Universty.

Mr. Laidler traces the interesting origin of boycotting; describes its employment in America, both by traders, employers and working men; examines the present status of the common and statute laws, both on trade and labor boycotts; sets forth with impartiality arguments for and against the legality of boycotting; presents a cross-section of the labor struggle, showing what weapons are used in labor disputes, both by workingmen and employers, and describes all of the trade and labor boycott cases and other conspiracy cases decided by the federal courts and higher state courts.

New Ceresit Booklet.

The Ceresit Waterproofing Company, of Chicago, Ill., has issued an interesting booklet entitled "Waterproofing for Concrete Houses." The use of cement stucco and the necessity for safeguarding against dampness has been dwelt upon exhaustively.

The Building Height Problem.

Electus D. Litchfield, architect, who was named eight years ago by the Board of Aldermen as a member of a commission of experts to revise the Building Code, and who was chairman of the special committee having in charge the particular work of the limiting of height and area, believes the solution of the heights of buildings problem is a matter of trial and error and slow growth.

"Many of the earlier structures were designed by men who were not masters of their profession," he told the members of the Brooklyn Municipal Club, "and even the leaders in architecture found the successful treatment of these towering structures for the time beyond them. Moreover, to the man in the street, these tremendous constructions seemed unsafe in the extreme, and so many of the American cities passed restrictive ordinances prohibiting the erection of any buildings beyond a comparatively moderate limit of height. Boston, Washington, Indianapolis and other cities were among the number.

"Fortunately no such law was passed by the City of New York. Of itself, there is nothing evil in the high building. It is only when it is improperly designed that it is bad, esthetically, structurally or from other points of view.

"Take away the towers of New York, from the now modest Giralda of Madison Square to the towering shapes of the Metropolitan and Singer towers, and the splendid bulks of the Candler Building, the Liberty Tower, and the Bankers Trust, and much of the outward evidence of the glory of New York would disappear."

Mr. Litchfield, however, commended the work of the members of the Heights of Building Commission, saying that the legislation they have recommended is fraught with great good to the people of the city.

BUILDING MATERIALS AND SUPPLIES

LOWERING OF LOCAL INTEREST RATES MAKES MONEY EASIER AND BUILDERS HOPE FOR BETTER BUILDING CONDITIONS.

Brick Buying Much Better — The New Market Bill Passes—Inquiry Strengthening

TRANSACTIONS on the Building Material Exchange this week were barely above the sluggish levels reported during the last three months, but distributors reported a firmer inquiry for summer deliveries. Plan filings in the various boroughs reflected the improvement in the money market to some extent, Buyers of building materials coming into the market between now and July first will find price and supply conditions ample for their needs, but those who expect to defer action until later in the year on plans already filled may look for terms far stiffer than those that may be obtained now. In the first place, the western Portland cement manufacturers have advanced the price of their commodity again. The reason Lehigh Valley producers have not followed suit is because of the stagnant condition of the building and general construction market here, but local agents freely predict that if the money situation continues to ease and building construction goes ahead, there will be no good reason why eastern manufacturers should not enjoy the higher mill price levels that the western interests are now commanding.

Steel and common brick seem destined, on the other hand, to remain at or near the present levels for the present Competition in these two lines is still keen, and demand is light Lumber prices show little or no fluctuation, but there is a short supply both here in the distributing market and at the producing centers. Wholesalers say that there never was such a favorable time for dealers to stock heavily, but the dealers say they have no inclination to speculate with plan-filling as sluggish as it has been of late. This makes the consumers subject to the slightest fluctuation in prices. Window glass may be expected to run to higher levels at almost any time, and the same is true of linseed oil. Paints are beginning to stiffen owing to the upward movements of white lead and oil.

Material men were interested in the passage of the bill at Albany empowering the city to erect markets, the first to go up being the Gansevoort, Manhattan; Harlem River Market, The Bronx; Wallabout Market, Brooklyn; St. George Market, Richmond, and another at Greenpoint, Brooklyn, or Long Island City. The members of the commission are Mayor Mitchel, President McAneny of the Board of Aldermen and the President of the Borough of The Bronx, Douglas Mathewson.

If the money market is accorded the same assistance from the government treasury as was given during the stress of last fall, namely the deposits of public funds in the banks of the agricultural sections of the country during the crop moving periods, lenders of building money at present foresee no reason why the present lowering tendency of interest rates should not continue and construction work resume its normal gait. It was pointed out that call money is being held at 1¾ per cent as a minimum, with the banks showing no disposition to compete by offering lower figures. Meanwhile time money on maturities extending into the new year is available at 3½ and 4 per cent. The Stock Exchange demand for funds is unusually light, and the mercantile and industrial requirements are also much below normal. This is a condition that usually follows trade reaction and is, furthermore, a condition that remains until the prices of iron, steel and other important products decline to attractive prices and encourage the renewed use of funds for building as well as other uses.

The price of building commodities is practically at bed rock now, therefore, if precedents count for anything at all in the present situation, the lowering of the rates of money here in the east cannot help but forecast an improvement.

CRUSHED STONE.

Quarries Have Resumed Operations—Demand Strengthening.

THERE are indications in the crushed stone market that the demand for both traprock and bluestone will be such in the near future as to tax the capacities of the crushing plants. The requirements of the subway and other large engineering works in this vicinity keep this department busy, and any marked improvement in building construction will result in a sharp stiffening of prices. There has been no change in quotations.

HARDWARE.

Wholesale Market Feels Spring Activity in the Suburbs.

HARDWARE distributors report a slightly improved market for ordinary building grades of hardware. The volume, however, is not sufficiently great to indicate any unusual building conditions and is mostly confined to dealers replenishing of stock. Building orders for New York City show little improvement except in outlying territories, but inquiry for big building equipment has shown a slight gain.

Wire nail trade is fair, but far below what it should be for this month. Prices quoted this week were $1.85 to $1.90 per keg base. Cut nail prices are being well maintained on the basis of $1.85 per keg out of store.

IRON BUSINESS HOLDING OFF.

Pig Market Is Active in Consumption, But Replenishing Is Restricted.

WHILE the reports of the steel requirements for the Metropolitan district show little if any change for the better, strengthening indications are to be found in the pig iron market. The consumption of pig iron, according to dealers, continues in large volume and the mill production has not abated to any extent, but there is almost entire absence of buying. Equipment interests such as fire-escapes, radiators and pump manufacturers apparently are holding off until such time as they can get a better line upon the fall requirements. Deliveries over the second quarter are reported to be still running actively but third quarter business is still confined to inquiry so far. Prices current for shipment over the second quarter for 1914 are 15.25c. and 15.75c. for No. X foundry northern; 14.70c. and 15.25c. for No. 2 X foundry northern; 14.25c. and 14.75c. for No. 2 plain foundry; 15.25c. and 15.50c. for No. 1 foundry southern and 13.75c. and 14c. for grey forge.

The output of blast furnaces last month was 2,341,551 tons, a gain of 452,944 tons, compared with February. The steel works, or non-merchant furnaces, which make pig iron for their own use, relighted 16 stacks in March and made the larger gain. The gain of 13 stacks was achieved by the end of March over February.

The significance of this rather contradictory condition of affairs in the pig iron market is interpreted as indicating continued conservatism pending the settlement of legislative issues that are now generally affecting the general freedom of business. In the meantime, however, there is a decided shortening in reserve stocks at manufacturing centres which would seem to indicate that simultaneous with any general improvement in building conditions, should be a favorable reaction in the steel and other basic building material departments.

STRUCTURAL STEEL.

Contracts Continue Light With Subway Contracts Predominating.

STRUCTURAL steel contracts for the week were practically negligible. Most of the business was in 300 to 500 ton quantities, among the latter being the steel equipment for the Waitt apartment house at 309 West 86th street, Schwartz & Gross, architects, which will take 300 tons from the Hedden Iron Construction Co., 50 Church street. Bids will shortly be taken for 5 000 tons of steel for the Broadway-Fourth Avenue Subway branch. Other subway steel requirements are expected to be made known before the end of the month. Prices for structural steel are weak on the 1.31 and 1.36 basis.

PORTLAND CEMENT.

Some Price Shading Here—Quotations Up in the West.

WHILE the Portland cement market is steady at the present time in this section of the country, a further advance is reported in this commodity in the west. Chicago is paying an advance of ten cents, owing to the improved demand. One reason why the price here has been kept low is because certain interests have been shading quotations in order to keep their mills going. There is some talk of ripping open the market in another price war, but the more impetuous producers are being restrained by conservative minds, who foresee the fearful results of another price war at a period of recovery from a general depression. The current basic quotation for Portland cement in this market is still $1.58 F. O. B. in 500-barrel quantities alongside dock New York.

GENEBAL BUILDING CONDITIONS.

Country-Wide Building Plan Filings Shows Marked Improvements Over February.

AFTER studying the quarterly reports of building plans filed, with estimated costs of construction, in the Record and Guide of April 4, some of the dissappointment arising over the fact that New York had not made a better showing is removed by a review of the far healthier conditions prevailing in other parts of the country. Bradstreets April summary for March shows that that month made a better record both in numbers and values than any other month since March, 1913.

Expenditures of 121 cities for last March aggregate $73,628,348, as against only $43,314,104 in February and $70,366,543 in March a year ago. There is here shown a gain of 70 per cent. over February and of 4.6 per cent. over March last year, with 68 out of the 121 cities showing increases over the corresponding month last year and 53 showing decreases.

New York city returns for three boroughs are irregular. Thus the total expenditure for March in Greater New York was $13,186,707, as against only $7,106,028 in February and $15,264,288 in March last year, a gain of 85.5 per cent. over February, but a decrease of 13.6 per cent. over March, 1913. It will be seen that New York only provides $6,000,000 of the $30,000,000 gain in March over February, while the $3,262,000 gain at all cities over March, 1913, was made despite an actual loss of $2,100,000 at New York.

YELLOW PINE AT BED ROCK.

Consumers Will Find Market Ruling at List—No More Concessions.

CONSUMERS of yellow pine will find prices running close to list, with concessions harder to get. Prices for this commodity are as low as they can go in the wholesale market and if there is to be any change from now on it will be upward, and there is some possibility that by June 1 another dollar will be added to the present list prices.

North Carolina pine is weaker on demand, except from the outlying districts. Long Island dealers have been more active in the wholesale market.

COMMON BRICK.

Market Strengthening On Demand and Inquiry.

COMMON brick continues to show improvement, reflecting the freer building movement in all parts of the district. The week closes with only three bargeloads unsold at the wholesale docks and four were reported enroute yesterday morning. Manufacturers still have plenty of brick to meet building requirements here, but a scarcity of barges has prevented prompt forwarding, hence the moderate quantity on hand at the week-end. The demand in the Newark section of the district also shows some improvement. Unloading also shows a gain over last week.

Official transactions for Hudson common brick covering the week ending Thursday, April 9, in the wholesale market, with comparisons for the corresponding period last year, and a comparative statement of Hudson brick unloaded from barges for consumption here, follow:

REAL ESTATE RECORD AND BUILDERS GUIDE.

NEW YORK, APRIL 18, 1914

YONKERS A CITY OF HOMES AND INDUSTRIES

Many Real Estate Developments Are Drawing New Population From New York—Apartment House Work Hindered By Uncertainties of the Housing Law.

ADJOINING the northerly line of New York City lies Yonkers with an area of 22½ square miles, which is larger than Manhattan Island. The growth of the city, industrially and otherwise, has been influenced to a marked degree through the activities of the Chamber of Commerce, which comprises the best business elements in Yonkers. Their slogan has been "Yonkers—next to the largest city in the United States."

It is the sixth largest city in the State and from present indications should become, within a reasonable time, the fourth largest. As part of the port of New York, it has a wharf frontage on the Hudson River of four and a half miles—a deep-water channel, enabling large sea-going vessels to dock conveniently. There are in the city nineteen passenger depots for the various railroads which put Yonkers in touch with the greater city and other parts of the State. On the east is the N. Y. C. & H. R. R., Harlem division; on the west the main line of the N. Y. C. & H. R. R., and in the very center from north to south runs the Putnam division of the same system. Additional transit facilities are furnished by 36 miles of surface lines connecting with nearly all sections of Manhattan and the Bronx.

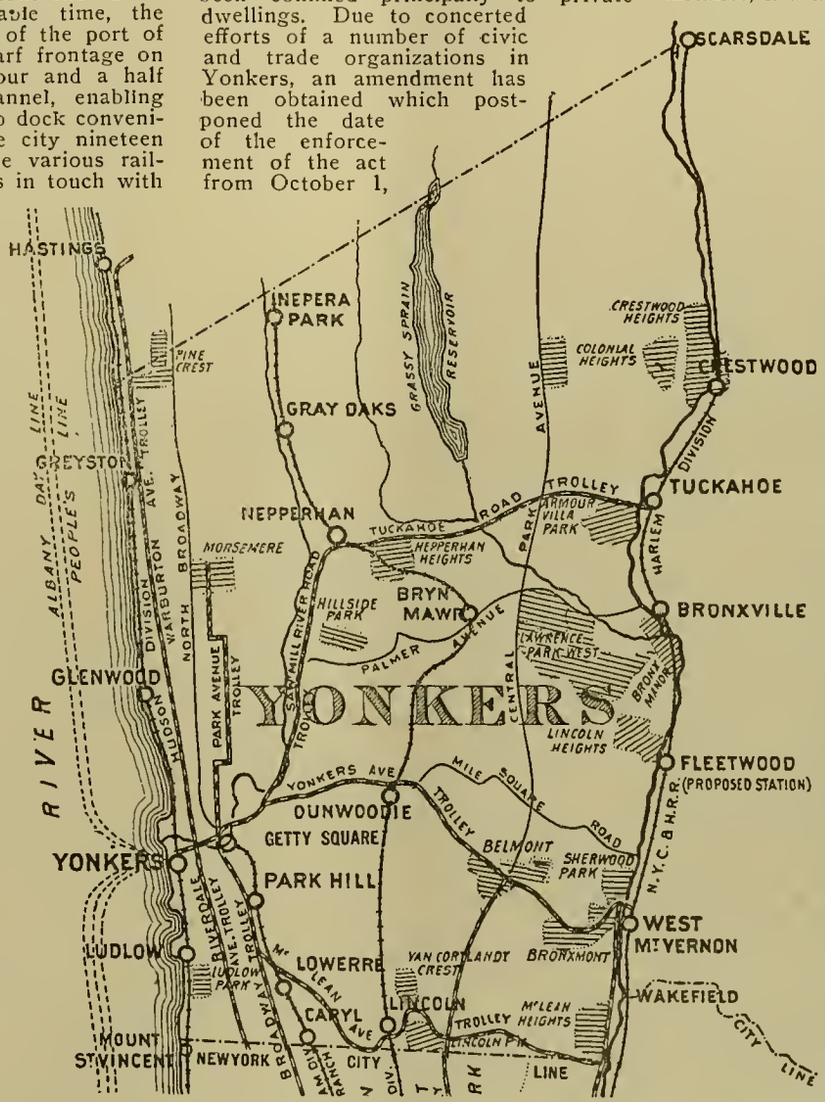
Conveniently scattered throughout the city are seven parks, one a fully equipped public playground for children, and in addition South Yonkers receives the benefit of Van Cortlandt Park, just over the city line. Other established institutions in Yonkers include 61 churches, of all denominations; 100 clubs and fraternal societies; 24 schools, including a high school; 6 banks, including three discount, one trust company and two savings banks, with estimated deposits of about $23,000,000.

The city in the way of municipal improvements has 130 miles of streets, of which 88 are macadamized and 7 of sheet asphalt, besides 45 miles of sewers and 80 miles of street lighting. Best evidence of the increase in real estate values of Yonkers and its growth and development may be obtained from an examination of the assessed valuations for the last ten years. In 1903 real estate in Yonkers was taxed for $43,463,760, in 1908 for $63,977,310 and in 1913 for $91,903,517.

With the population of 90,000 as compared with 79,000 for 1910 and 48,000 for 1900, and with a number of development companies offering attractive residential properties at moderate prices to home-seekers, the population is expected to reach 150,000 within a short time.

While real estate activity has not been deterred, the passage of the Housing Law (known as Chapter 744), "An act for housing people in cities of the second class," which became a law on May 31, 1913, has had a deterrent effect on apartment house operations, new construction in the last two years having been confined principally to private dwellings. Due to concerted efforts of a number of civic and trade organizations in Yonkers, an amendment has been obtained which postponed the date of the enforcement of the act from October 1, 1913, to February 1, 1915. The bill provides for the Speaker of the House to appoint two members, the President of the Senate to appoint two members and the Governor to appoint three to investigate the subject of housing in second class cities and to draft a new measure.

By this law the erection of private dwellings and two-family houses is particularly favored. Under the provision of the new law if an owner wishes to build a detached dwelling on a plot 40x100, the width of the house may be 30 feet and the depth 80, with a yard 5 feet wide on each side. It is obvious that it is possible for the architect to get in a building of that size any disposition or arrangement of the interior that may be desired. Should the plot be 50 feet wide the house may have a width of 40 feet.



The law, however, is said to make apartment house construction difficult for builders in cities of the second class. For instance, if a five-story building is to be erected on a lot 25x100, with a total area of 2,500 square feet, the law requires a rear yard 25x40 or 1,000 square feet, and a court 16x32 or an additional 512 square feet, leaving 988 square feet or 39 per cent. of the lot as a site for the building.

Yonkers builders contend that the allowable area is too small for a floor plan that will meet modern requirements, and considerable difficulty would be encountered in obtaining desirable tenants at rentals which would make a profitable investment. If the purpose of this law is to discourage the building of apartments on lots 25x100, that purpose has been achieved.

The report of J. S. Bartley, building inspector of Yonkers, for the year 1913 shows that plans were filed for 659 structures, to cost approximately $4,262,800, but no plans for multi-family dwellings of any description were filed, indicating an unwillingness on the part of builders to erect houses of this type until the status of the new housing law is settled.

Another provision of the law does not permit frame tenements of any description to be erected, and another section makes fireproofing compulsory in every structure more than four stories in height, which adds materially to the cost of construction.

Yonkers may be likened to one real estate development after another. The total area of 22½ square miles is dotted with real estate developments of all kinds. In South Yonkers are the Park Hill and Lawrence properties owned by the American Real Estate Company; also Van Cortlandt Terrace, Ludlow Park, Lowerre-Summit Park, Caryl, Lincoln, Lincoln Park, Van Cortlandt Crest, McLean Heights, Belmont and Bronxmont, the latter two holdings being owned by the New York Realty Owners. This company owns more than twelve miles of street frontage. The Belmont development contains about 3,000 lots restricted to residential purposes along the line of Jerome avenue, just north of the proposed subway station at 236th street. Bronxmont, just east, is in the immediate neighborhood of the proposed Bronx Parkway, where the Parkway Commission has already purchased about $2,000,000 worth of land. This development is separated from New York City by the Bronx River and is restricted to one and two-family houses. The generally prevailing type of construction is the attractive stucco residence. Bronxmont, with its good transit facilities and municipal improvements, including water, gas and sewer system, and its available building sites, is particularly ripe for further improvement.

North of Getty Square are Bryn Mawr, Hillside Park, Valley Farms, Nepperhan Heights, Nepperhan, Morsemere, Gray Oaks, Nepera Park, and Pine Crest, Glenwood, Graystone, and River View Colony. Some of these developments are highly restricted while in others more laxity is given to appeal to the home seeker of more moderate means.

A New Apartment House Section.

Along South Broadway in the neighborhood of Riverdale and Valentine avenues and Post and Morris streets, a new apartment house section has grown up in the last four years. While other sections of Yonkers have such structures, this is the only part which marks any concerted attempt to create an apartment house district. Equipped with all modern improvements, and situated only about five blocks from the city line, the houses have been successful from the renting point of view, nearly all the apartments being rented at the general average of $8 per room, and elevator apartments paying as high as $9 per room. The passage of the Housing Law which makes similar construction almost prohibitive has caused a steady demand for apartments in those buildings already erected and excellent renting conditions prevail.

Numerous Residential Parks.

The entire easterly section of Yonkers along the line of the Bronx River and the proposed Bronx River Parkway is gemmed with residential parks including Bronxville, Lawrence Park West, Sherwood Park, Lincoln Heights, Bronx Manor, Armour Villa Park, Tuckahoe, Crestwood, Colonial Heights, Crestwood Heights, and part of Scarsdale. In Bronxville several new high-grade apartment houses have been built and have met with success. The older structures of this type are still maintaining their own.

The exceptional growth of Yonkers is attributed by many to the great manufacturing industries which have been established along the waterfront, as well as to the overflow of population from New York. The largest carpet manufacturing plant in the world, the Alexander Smith & Sons Carpet Company mills, on a tract of 45 acres, the Otis Elevator Works, Waring Hat Manufacturing Company, the National Sugar Refining Company, the Federal Sugar Refining Company, the Habirshaw Wire Company, the Arlington Chemical Company and its associated enterprises, the Zinsser Company, manufacturing chemists, the Pure Oil Company, D. Saunders' Company, Inc., the Valvoline Oil Company, A. O. Lawrence, and many others, are types of industrial concerns permanently established at Yonkers.

NATURE OF THE MURRAY HILL COVENANT

Exact Wording of the Document—The Section Is Restricted to Dwelling Houses, Churches and Stables—Is An Apartment House a Dwelling?

A QUESTION, whether an apartment house is a "dwelling" within the meaning of the law, is being submitted to the courts for an answer under an agreement. The parties to the action, which is for specific performance of contract of sale, are the officers of South Church as plaintiffs, and the Madison Avenue Building Company as defendant. The controversy has arisen over the Murray Hill restrictive covenant.

The language of this covenant, the plaintiff claims, does not prohibit the erection upon the premises at the southeast corner of Madison avenue and 38th street of an apartment house, such as described in the contract which has been made between the parties; that the erection upon the premises of such a building could not by reason of the facts be restrained at the suit of the owner of adjoining property, and that its existence and maintenance would not render the title to the premises unmarketable.

The Madison Avenue Building Company, the defendant, claims, on the other hand, that under the covenant the erection of an apartment house could be restrained at the suit of the owner of adjoining property, that its maintenance upon premises would render the title to the premises, unmarketable, and that, consequently, the officers of the church are not entitled to specific performance by the owner of the contract.

Nature of the Covenant.

The restrictive covenant which is now being submitted to the courts for a test was made in the year 1847 between Mary Murray, John R. Murray, John R. Murray, Jr., and Anna Vernon, his wife; Elizabeth Giles, John Murray Ogden, Harriet R. Ogden, Murray Hoffman and wife and Lindley M. Hoffman and wife. They were owners of various parcels of land lying between 34th and 38th streets, Madison and Lexington avenues.

They covenanted and agreed that neither of them nor his heirs or assigns, should at any future time erect or cause to be erected upon any of the lots owned by them respectively, or any part of the same, any building or erection other than brick or stone dwelling houses of at least two stories in height, and with the ordinary yard appurtenances to dwelling houses; and except churches and stables of brick or stone for private dwellings. And, further, that they will not hereafter erect or permit upon such lots or any part of the same any livery stable, slaughter house, smith shop, forge, furnace, steam engine, brass foundry, nail or other iron factory, or any manufactory of gunpowder, glue, varnish, vitriol, ink or turpentine, or for the tanning, dressing or preparing skins, hides or leather or any brewery, distillery, museum, theatre, circus, place for the exhibition of wild animals or any other erections known as nuisances in the law; and it is further agreed and covenanted that the above covenants shall be deemed and taken to be covenants running with the land. And that in case of any violation or attempted violation of the covenants herein contained by any of the parties hereto, his, her or their heirs, executors or assigns, a bill may be filed by any one or more of the other parties hereto, their or his heirs, executors or assigns to obtain a perpetual injunction against the same."

Any Distinction in Terms?

The use of the land, therefore, is restricted to "brick or stone dwelling houses of at least two stories in height" "churches" and "stables of brick or stone" in connection with "private dwellings." It will be noted that in one case "dwelling houses" are mentioned and in the other "private dwellings," and a natural inquiry is, Is there any difference in the meaning of the terms as here used?

The new Housing Law which has been adopted for second-class cities in this State, and which will go into effect next February, divides dwellings into three classes: (1) private dwellings, when each is occupied by one family; (2) two-family dwellings; (3) multiple dwellings, when dwellings are occupied otherwise than as private dwellings and two-family houses.

Multiple dwellings are divided into two broad classes: Class A includes dwellings which are occupied more or less permanently for residence purposes by several families. This class includes apartment houses, apartment hotels, bachelor apartments, studio apartments, duplex apartments, kitchenette apartments. Class B multiple dwellings are dwellings which are occupied as a rule transiently. This class includes hotels, lodging houses, boarding houses, furnished room houses, clubhouses, convents, asylums, hospitals, jails.

If the restriction contained in the Murray Hill covenant is in favor of "dwelling houses" in a broad sense and not in favor of "private dwellings" only, the fact that the State of New York has enacted a law which brings apartment houses within the classification of "dwellings" would have a bearing on this case.

Kings County Court House.

Mayor Mitchel has approved the Kings County Court House bill and returned it to the Governor for action.

The bill authorizes the erection of a new building on the site occupied by the present structure and in addition the site of the Municipal Building, Murphy Park and the property adjoining with a frontage on Court street.

The closing of part of Joralemon street is also provided for in the measure, and the allotment to the B. R. T. Company of another street in the same district for the operation of the surface car lines which now run through Joralemon street.

The first step to be taken will be the acquisition of the Court street property. Controller Prendergast will make an offer to the owners for their holdings, and if this is not accepted the city will go to condemnation. Borough President Pounds will have charge of the preparation of plans for the building, and is expected to arrange for a competition in which the most noted architects in the country will submit designs. A commission of experts will be named to judge the plans. The appropriation for the preparation of plans will be made by the Board of Estimate shortly. The first physical move for the construction of the Court House will be the razing of the Municipal Building, which will be vacated within thirty days.

Heights of Buildings and Districting Regulations Signed—Other Vital Legislation Passed Upon—Real Estate Must Give Street Numbers

T LAST there is on the statute books a law regulating the heights of buildings in New York City. The Conkling bill (Assem. Int. No. 935) has received the Mayor's approval and the Governor's signature. The new law is the product of the labors of the Heights of Buildings Advisory Commission, of which Edward M. Bassett was chairman. The bill amends the city charter by adding thereto two new sections, 242-a and 242-b, which bestow upon the Board of Estimate the power to regulate and limit the height and bulk of buildings hereafter erected, and to regulate and determine the area of yards, courts and open spaces.

The board may divide the city into districts of such number, shape and area as it may deem best suited to carry out the purpose intended, provided that the regulations shall be uniform for each class of buildings throughout each district. Reasonable regard must be paid to the character of buildings already erected in a district, the value of the land and the use to which it may be put, to the end that such regulations shall promote public health, safety and welfare and the most desirable use for which the land of each district may be adapted, and may also tend to conserve the value of buildings and enhance the value of land throughout the city. The board shall appoint a commission to recommend the boundaries of districts and appropriate regulations to be enforced therein. The commission will hold public hearings.

The Board of Estimate may also regulate and restrict the location of trades and industries and the location of buildings designed for specified uses, and may divide the city into districts for that purpose. For each district regulations may be imposed designating the trades and industries that may be excluded or subjected to special regulations and designating the uses for which buildings may not be altered.

Reasonable consideration shall be given by the board to the character of the district, its peculiar stability for particular uses, the conservation of property values and the direction of building development in accord with a well considered plan. The Board of Estimate shall appoint a commission to regulate the boundaries of districts and appropriate regulations. The act takes effect immediately.

The Mayor has his doubts about the constitutionality of the bill, but President McAneny, who was chairman of the special committee of the Board of Estimate which investigated the subject, with the aid of the advisory commission, is confident that the law will be sustained by the courts of this State.

The Market Bill Fails.

While favoring the fundamental idea and plan of the Public Market Bill, the Mayor has found therein defects which in his opinion should be remedied before the measure is put on the statute books, and he has therefore vetoed it. Hon. Cyrus C. Miller, chairman of the committee of the Board of Estimate which investigated the subject and framed the bill, agreed with the Mayor that the measure, as passed, had best be vetoed. The bill sought to establish department markets and provided for at least one wholesale market in each borough. The Mayor objects to the mandatory provisions, to the stipulation that the markets shall be connected with "main line tracks" of railroads, holding that thereby a monopoly might be granted (to the New York Central) in Manhattan; to the provision for the listing reputable commission men, as capable of abuse, and to other features.

More Power for the Fire Commissioner.

The Mayor has given his approval to the Simpson bill (Senate Int. No. 583) to amend the charter in relation to the better prevention of fires. The fire commissioner of the city is empowered to enforce all the laws and rules of the Industrial Board of the State Department of Labor in respect to the prevention of fires and danger to life and property. He may order in writing the remedying of any condition found to exist in any building except a tenement house in violation of any law or regulation of the Industrial Board, but he is not to make any order respecting the means and adequacy of exit from a factory as defined by the labor law. He may order in writing the installation of automatic or other firealarm system or fire-extinguishing equipment, or the construction of safe means of exit from all buildings except tenement houses and factories.

The commissioner, in cases where provision is not otherwise made by law or ordinance, is empowered in his discretion to require and compel the regular and periodical performance of a fire drill in all buildings and premises where numbers of persons work, live or congregate, except in tenement houses.

The Mayor has given his approval to Senator Patten's bill (Int. No. 948) providing for laying out, opening and extending Queens Boulevard through the land of Maple Grove Cemetery.

Also to the McClelland bill (Senate Int. 944) in relation to the adoption of rules and regulations by the Commissioner of Docks. The bill empowers the Commissioner to establish all needful rules and regulations for the government and care of all property in his charge, instead of having to first obtain authority by means of ordinances passed by the Board of Aldermen.

One of the bills the Mayor vetoed was to amend the Rapid Transit act so as to allow the Public Service Commission, with the approval of the Board of Estimate, to employ persons and purchase machinery to construct a subway road "when the public interests so require," and to permit the commission to award contracts not exceeding $25,000 without public letting. The present act prescribes a limit of $10,000 for contracts without public letting.

Signed by the Governor.

Governor Glynn has approved of the Malone bill (Assembly Int. No. 1496), changing the date when the new state housing law for second class cities shall take effect from October 1, 1913, to February 1, 1915. The housing law is chapter 66 of the consolidated laws. Governor Glynn wrote the following memorandum:

"The housing law of 1913 was an important law, designed to improve health conditions in cities of the second class, but it was drastic in its terms and many of its provisions were made the subject of protest in every city affected. It has been suggested that it would not be a step forward in the cause of reform to suspend the operation of this law for the time indicated in this bill, but I am of the opinion that the cause of reform should not move so swiftly as to leave in its trail havoc and ruin to legitimate business interests; nor do I see any fair objection to suspending the operation of the law until the people in the cities affected have a fair opportunity to adapt themselves to the requirements thereof.

"It has also been urged that the suspension of the law may leave these cities without any health laws. I am advised that there is no merit in this objection, especially in view of the home rule law (Laws of 1913, chapter 247), which expressly confers power on every city to regulate by ordinance any matter within its powers and expressly includes as one of such powers the right to preserve and care for the safety, health, comfort and general welfare of its inhabitants. I therefore approve the bill."

The Governor has also signed the Cullen bill (Senate Int. No. 1372) appropriating the sum of $5,000 to defray the expenses of a commission which the Governor is authorized to appoint and charge with the duty of investigating housing conditions in the second class cities of the state, which comprise Yonkers, Albany, Troy, Schnectady, Utica and Syracuse.

One Educational Bill Gets By.

Governor Glynn has signed Senator Velte's bill to amend the Greater New York Charter, in relation to the teaching staff of the Board of Education. This bill has the approval of President Finley and the State Department of Education, and was also approved by Mayor Mitchel, who disapproved the other bills relating to teachers' salaries. The Governor's approval of this bill will enable the Board of Education to secure the services of a considerable number of men teachers, who, when the equal pay law went into effect, were on an eligible list for license number one or were serving as public teachers in fourth term work, or as students in a training school, or who as regularly matriculated students had completed or entered upon a course in the Department of Education, or who had resigned from the teaching force and had been reappointed from an eligible list for license number one.

The Foley bill (Senate Int. No. 1174) amending the lien law in relation to justification of sureties has received the Governor's approval. The amendment provides that when a certificate of insolvency has been issued by the superintendent of insurance, no justification or notice thereof shall be necessary.

The Boylan bill (Senate No. 1117), amending the tax law relative to assessment rolls, has been approved by the Governor. It amends sections 6, 8 and 34, repeals section 21 and inserts a new section 21, providing that an owner shall be allowed a deduction for all taxable personal property to the extent of just debts owing by him.

Must Give the Street Number.

The Ramsperger bill (Senate Int. No. 214), amending the real property law in relation to the recording of instruments, has been approved by the Governor. It provides that after May 1, 1914, a recording officer shall not record or accept for record any conveyance of real property in a city of over 200,000 inhabitants unless the street number of the residence of the purchaser shall be stated therein.

Tenement Amendment Vetoed.

The Governor vetoed the bill which would allow courts in discretion to impose any penalty from $1 up to the present fixed sums for violation of the tenement house regulations in New York City.

"This proposed amendment," he said, "would make the provision as to penalties a nullity and tend to make the tenement house law unenforcible."

MUST PREVENT POLLUTION OF WATERWAYS

Physicians and Sanitary Engineers Agree Health of Community Is Predicated Largely Upon Improvement of Existing Conditions—Main Drainage Works Necessary.

BOTH physicians and sanitary engineers of this city are agreed that the conditions now prevailing in regard to the discharge of unfiltered sewage into the restricted waters of the inner harbor cannot go on indefinitely. The recent reports by the Metropolitan Sewerage Commission of New York should therefore be of interest to the taxpayers of this city.

In a report issued in February, 1914 by the commission, attention is called to the fact that the conditions which led to the construction of the Boston main drainage works were, to a considerable extent, similar to those which exist at the present time in New York. The sewage discharged locally through numerous outlets into the restricted waters of the inner harbor, caused sludge deposits with other objectionable consequences, and the gross pollution of certain natural tributaries of the harbor was so great as to give rise to offensive odors during the summer season. It was impossible to trace individual cases of disease to the polluted water, but prominent physicians declared that no fact was better established by general experience than that foul air was unfavorable to health, and they gave it as their opinion that changes in the sewerage system of an extended character, costing large sums of money, could alone accomplish practical good.

Subject a Problem in Boston.

In New York the sewage problem has been the subject of official investigation for eleven years. The Boston works were also built after a long period of investigation. In 1870 the consulting physicians addressed to the city authorities a remonstrance to the existing conditions, and the Boston Board of Health, established in 1872, constantly urged improvements in their reports. In 1875 a commission was appointed to study the causes of the objectionable conditions, and in its report recommended the construction of a system of intercepting sewers, to intercept the flow of the numerous sewers discharging into water around the city and carry it to a single outlet at an island in the outer harbor. The main features of this plan were ultimately adopted in the construction of the Boston main drainage system, and this was the beginning of the entire metropolitan works which now exists.

It is worthy of note that, as in New York, various protective measures were first adopted in Boston, such as extending the sewers farther from shore; and while these improvements relieved the objectionable conditions for a time, the nuisance soon recurred.

The objectionable conditions which led Boston to build its main drainage works were not confined to that city. In the densely populated wards of Cambridge, Somerville, Chelsea, East Boston and other sections, the conditions were much the same, and the commission of 1875 considered the whole territory as a proper field for its investigations. In respect to its scope, the Metropolitan Sewerage Commission of New York has also considered conditions outside of New York, and in its report of April, 1910, reported equally upon the need of sewage disposal in New Jersey and New York.

Big Improvement Shown.

The City of Boston improved its own sewerage conditions in accordance with an act of the Legislature, passed in 1876. It took eight years to so far complete the works as to permit sewage to be discharged from Moon Island Works.

Following the Boston City Main Drainage, the North Metropolitan Main Drainage Works were put into service in 1895 and the South Metropolitan works in 1904. Twenty-four cities and towns now discharge their sewage through these three outlets.

At Moon Island, where nearly half the total volume is disposed of, the discharge occurs at the surface of the water during about two hours of the outgoing tide, being held in storage basins for the remainder of the time. The storage basins act as sedimentation tanks, which remove part of the suspended matter. At Deer Island and Peddocks Island the sewage is discharged continuously after coarse screening. The sewage discharged from Moon Island spreads over a wide area, but careful analysis of the water in the vicinity shows little trace of it within a few hours after the discharge ceases. Near Deer Island and Peddocks Island little evidence of sewage can be detected, except in the direct line of the sewage flow.

Sedimentation Recommended.

Sedimentation is a standard form of sewage treatment which the commission has recommended strongly in connection with some of its projects for the preparation of New York's sewage before discharge into the tidal waters. It is the method of treatment proposed for the sewage after collection to the large central stations at Ward's Island, Classon Point, Tallman's Island and the Ocean Outlet Island.

Sedimentation is accomplished in settling basins in which those suspended solids that are capable of subsiding from sewage are deposited when brought to a state of comparative rest. The rate of deposit is such that, to be effective, the capacity of the basins must be sufficient to accommodate the flow for one or two hours.

The commission desiring to obtain an authoritative opinion upon the use of sedimentation tanks and more particularly the Emscher tank, which was designed by Dr. Karl Imhoff, of Essen, Germany, requested Dr. Imhoff to make a report upon his invention as applicable to New York. The Imhoff tank, as it is more commonly called, has rapidly gained favor among engineers, and numerous plants operating upon this principle have been put under construction within the last four years. It should be noted, however, that most of the Imhoff tanks installed have been in connection with sprinkling filters, and sprinkling filters would be impracticable in New York, because of the large areas required and the nuisance from odors and flies.

Shipped Out to Sea.

The commission published the report of Dr. Karl Imhoff, and from that report it seems that Dr. Imhoff would utilize his tanks in the local treatment of New York sewage. The tanks could be built, in his opinion, beneath the streets or in open spaces and covered like the subways so as not to interfere with traffic overhead. The sludge could be pumped into tank ships, which would carry it to the ocean for final disposal.

After giving careful consideration to Dr. Imhoff's report and making various studies for such work in various locations, the commission stated that, in its opinion, the suggestion that Imhoff tanks could be located in the built-up parts of the city would not be satisfactory. They would not be satisfactory because of their cost, probability of nuisance, and the practical certainty of public opposition.

Another difficulty to be overcome, and a more serious one, would be found in the fact that the streets beneath the surface are already occupied with water and steam pipes and conduits for electric light, telegraph, telephone and power purposes. Serious questions might be raised as to the probability of trouble from the gas given off in the fermentation of sludge in Imhoff tanks when placed in crowded positions beneath the city's streets. The odors might not be offensive, although this is not certain, but large volumes of inflammable gas would be produced and this, when mixed with air in the confined space beneath the street pavements, might lead to explosions.

Sedimentation Basins on Ward's Island.

The plans which have already been formulated by the commission of locating large sedimentation basins on Ward's Island, Classon Point, Tallman's Island and the Ocean Outlet and supplementing these sedimentation basins with chemical precipitation, seem far more practical and would be a more effective protection to the harbor waters. This plan would also be far less expensive.

The commission, in considering chemical precipitation, requested Dr. Samuel Rideal of London, to make a report on the possibilities of direct chemical oxidation. Dr. Rideal's report has been published in full by the commission.

It is Dr. Rideal's opinion that all the sewage produced now and in the next generation in the metropolitan district of New York and New Jersey can be sufficiently purified on properly selected sites near where it is produced to permit of its discharge into the waters of the inner harbor without violating any of the provisions of the commission's standard of cleanliness. The purification works, he thinks, should be able to remove all the unsightly and offensive floating suspended matters of the sewage.

A considerable part of Dr. Rideal's report is devoted to the question of forced aeration as a method of sewage disposal, and the results of various calculations are given to show that it would be impracticable to oxidize New York sewage by this means.

Since the system of main drainage proposed by the commission will eventually cost many millions of dollars, it is desirable that the taxpayers should understand the benefits to accrue from it.

On comparing the death rate of New York with those of London, Paris and Berlin for the last year, it appears that New York's rate was exceeded only by that of Paris. For the ten years, ending 1909, New York's death rate exceeds that of all other three cities. For the purpose of studying the relative healthfulness of cities, death rates are indispensable.

There appears to be no reason why New York should not have as low a death rate as London or Berlin. New York is a good example of a city of the largest class wherein the highest requirements of sanitation are demanded, and are, at the same time, capable of being satisfied. Occupying an unrivaled situation, a favorable climate, good and abundant water supply and an efficient health administration, it should be the aim of every citizen to make New York's death rate the lowest to be found among the municipalities of the class to which this city belongs.

UNIONPORT EXPECTS LARGE GROWTH

The Subway Will Bring It Within The Five Cent Zone, And It Has Great Advantages For Manufacturing and Shipping.

UNIONPORT, in the easterly part of the Annexed District, through which will run a portion of the Lexington avenue subway route, is a section of the Bronx which is attracting the attention of many builders and real estate men. In anticipation of the five-cent fare to all parts of New York City there has been a demand for desirable properties on Westchester avenue and in the adjacent streets. The section has been handicapped in growth and long lain dormant on account of its inaccessibility, although there are several trolley lines connecting other portions of the borough. However, Unionport is still one of the undeveloped parts of the city, in spite of the fact that nearly all of the streets are provided with sewers; half of them are regulated and graded. The borough administration is considering municipal improvements for the remainder. The most characteristic type of building is the small one or two-family house. In several instances rentals of single-family houses with neighboring plot can be obtained for from $25 to $30 per month. According to local agents, flats of four, five or six rooms bring from $17 to $20, while those with heat bring from $19 to $22. Apartment house construction has not been particularly noticeable, although a few such buildings have been erected. William Howells recently completed a five-story structure at the corner of Overing street and Walker avenue and is contemplating additional operations.

Frank Gass, established many years in that locality, said this week: "There is no doubt but that Unionport with its proposed transit facilities offers unusual advantages to the homeseeker, that portion north of Westchester Square being particularly well adapted for residential purposes. Business will become established in the main streets, such as Westchester, Walker and Castle Hill avenues, the latter a hundred-foot thoroughfare, just paved with asphalt block. The side streets will become filled with one and two-family houses.

"There is an extensive waterfront, with thousands of feet along Westchester Creek, ripe for industrial or manufacturing improvement. Several large concerns have already established branches, among others the Watson Contracting Company and the Silleck Lumber Company."

County Clerk J. Vincent Ganly, who is president of the Chester Taxpayers' Alliance, said: "Additional transit facilities have been needed for many years, and with these in sight a practically undeveloped section will be ripe for improvement. Construction of the new subway places Unionport within the five-cent zone, and this fact, coupled with the other advantages, should stimulate realty activity. The former Northern Bank property, known as Tremont Terrace, is restricted to private houses and may become, in time, a finer residential district. Several apartment houses recently built and well filled indicate that such structures may successfully be erected. The new ferry at Clason Point which is to connect the Bronx with Queens by way of College Point, and the new Unionport bridge which has been authorized by the Board of Estimate to replace the present old structure at Ludlow avenue, will also be factors in the growth of this part of the Bronx."

UNIVERSITY HEIGHTS.

A Constructional Movement Expected to Follow the Hennessy Lot Sale.

Inquiries for data concerning lots of the estate of Ellen M. Hennessy which are to be auctioned at absolute sale by Joseph P. Day and J. Clarence Davies on April 28 in the Vesey street salesroom have been of such volume and character as to make almost certain a constructional movement in that section.

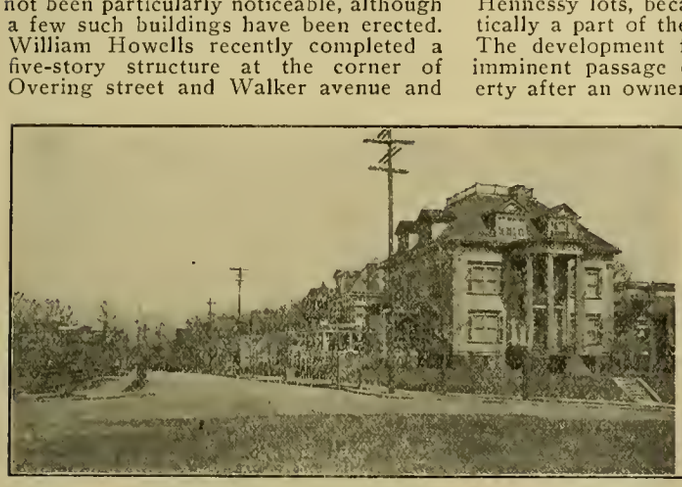
Builders have made the most requests and keen interest has also been aroused among the faculty and students and other well wishers of New York University as to the possible use of the Hennessy lots, because the land is practically a part of the University grounds. The development foreshadowed by the imminent passage of the estate's property after an ownership of nearly half a century to individual lot owners conjures doubt whether private dwellings or apartment houses are to come.

The latter kind of improvements are more probable, as the lots are accessible from the lower city business centers, directly or by transit to every transit facility—subways, new and old, elevated and surface lines of the city. Still, despite this fact, and that there will be a subway express station on the Jerome avenue line at Burnside avenue, the present well-developed growth of the University Heights district, with a fine type of private and two-family dwellings, may have a strong influence in directing such use of the Hennessy lots.

It is of interest to point out the similarity to Manhattan of the ridge forming the east bank of the Harlem River of which the University Heights section forms a part. The highland is also narrow and in consequence ought to develop in the same intensive northerly direction as affected Manhattan Island.

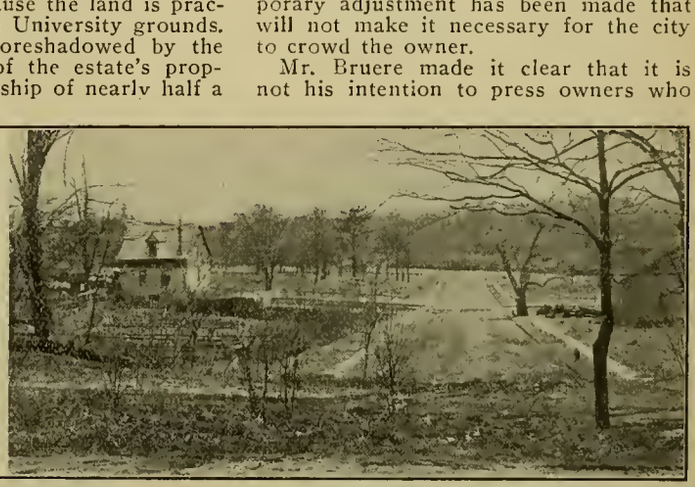
The University buildings and their finely kept lawns, with the Hennesy lots almost beginning where they end, comprise practically all the land with the boundaries of Sedgwick, Burnside and University avenues, an oval shaped area, probably the highest point in the Bronx, and as signally favored in point of accessibility to and from the business centers. The Morris Heights station of the New York Central and Putnam railroads, a few blocks west of the Hennessy lots, is eighteen minutes from 42d street; the University avenue cars, passing through the Hennessy lots, connect with the 181st street subway station and the Burnside avenue crosstown cars connect at Tremont avenue and 177th street with the Second and Third avenue elevated lines.

"With all the existing facilities and the Jerome avenue express station at Burnside avenue, the investment feature of the Hennessy offering is obviously plain," said Joseph P. Day this week. "It is conceded that builders have not the cash to invest in lots at the present time. Therefore purchasers at this absolute sale of the Hennessy estate can feel assured that here is one strong element of profit when this market does turn so the builder has cash, as he must come to this favorable section having in mind the profits made around Columbia University."



CALLING CITY MORTGAGES.

City Chamberlain Explains Attitude of Department in the Action.



Henry Bruere, the City Chamberlain, outlined for the Record and Guide this week the attitude of his department in the matter of compulsory calling of loans on real estate mortgages. He said there are 104 such mortgages covering property in all parts of the city. One of them dates back to 1857. Practically all are over due. In the case of one at 123 Greenwich street, which is known as the Thames Building, on which there is a mortgage of $125,000, but appraised by Mr. Bruere's department at $150,000, the interest was paid this week and threatened foreclosure on the property is thus temporarily averted. In the case of a Houston street property a temporary adjustment has been made that will not make it necessary for the city to crowd the owner.

Mr. Bruere made it clear that it is not his intention to press owners who have complied with the terms of the loans by paying taxes and interest promptly. "There is nothing revolutionary in this action," said Mr. Bruere. "We are compelled to change the form or the class of security in which city money is invested. It is the disposition of the department to treat all those concerned with the greatest possible consideration. It, undoubtedly, would work a hardship upon many people if these departments assumed a raptorial course which, however, is not the intention of this department to take."

The money which has been invested in real estate mortgages by various city chamberlains belongs to estates in litigation of estates for which no claims have appeared. Under recent rulings of the State Comptroller all such moneys must hereafter be invested in city or state bonds. When Mr. Bruere took hold he found several mortgages long past due on properties and he is merely clearing up this matter, at the same time exercising all the leniency he is permitted to allow on such matters.

Suppose the Interstate Commerce Commission should act adversely on the application of the railroads for freight-rate increases? In some quarters it is not believed that the roads have proved the need of higher rates, but have rather established that their free terminal services have represented more than the five per cent. additional charge which they are asking. Anyway, general business interests should not count too heavily on the railroads getting the higher rates.

The acceptance by Rogers, Brown & Co., New York City pig-iron agents, of the American agency for a Canadian producing concern is taken to mean the beginning of a large import movement in iron into New England, where the Canadians can now underbid any competitor by virtue of a lowered tariff and their cheaper shipping charges. No doubt other countries will be sending iron and steel products to this market as business picks up, which will at least have the effect of keeping local prices at a low level for any general movement in real estate that may arise.

New York City oftentimes loses the advantage to be derived from good legislation because of minor defects contained in bills otherwise admirable, but which are deemed to call for the exercise of the veto power. In the case of the Public Market Bill, which originated with former President Miller's commission, such subtle defects were found that even Mr. Miller agreed that the enactment should be postponed until the bill can be perfected. One of the great benefits that will be conferred by this bill when enacted will be the establishing of a public market on the Harlem River to serve both upper Manhattan and lower Bronx. The existing markets in Manhattan are now too far from the homes of most of the people.

A Ray of Sunshine.

At a time when business and financial conditions are, on the whole, extremely discouraging, it is comforting to have one ray of sunshine break through the clouds. The city has been able to sell $65,000,000 of its securities at a better price than it had been able to get for five years. Its four and a half per cent stock was marketed in a block at a substantial premium above par, which means that investors will pay a still larger premium for the security. It is true, no doubt, that the price still seems very high. Time was when New York could borrow all the money it needed at less than 3½ per cent; and in the present instance a 4¼ per cent security would have brought less than par at a time when money was supposed to be easy. But on the other hand, it looked not long ago as if New York might have to pay almost five per cent for some of the money needed for the new subway system. Predictions were freely made to that effect in 1913, and if these predictions had proved to be true, a considerably increased burden would have been imposed upon the taxpayers of New York. They have been saved from this threat at least for the time being, and it even looks possible that in this respect their worst troubles are over.

The recent sale of city stock marks the beginning of a period during which the city's credit will constantly improve. A number of conditions are beginning to be effective which may contribute to this result. In the first place, investors are coming to prefer state and municipal securities to those issued by private corporations. The uncertainties of the general business situation, the timidity inspired by the persistent interference with business on the part of legislative and administrative bodies and the apprehension that business cannot count on fair treatment either by the public authorities or by public opinion, all tend to make investors reluctant to buy railroad or industrial securities. Doubtless these fears will be gradually allayed but they are not likely to be allayed for a number of years, and as long as they are not allayed there will be a proportionately large amount of capital seeking investment in public securities.

Moreover, coincident with the increasingly favorable standing of public securities from the point of view of the investor, the city of New York will be forced steadily to decrease the amount of the issue of new obligations. Its debt margin is becoming extremely small. Practically the whole of it has been appropriated for the subways, the Court House and other improvements to which the city is legally committed. In order to provide for additional issues, the Board of Estimate will have to depend upon the increased assessed valuation of real estate, and during the near future there will not be any increased assessed valuation of real estate. Assessed valuations are already in a great many instances larger than the prices at which the property could be sold. A smaller amount of new building is under construction than at any time for fifteen years. Its aggregate will not be sufficient to compensate the tax rolls for the diminution in ground values which is taking place in certain parts of the city. In all probability the assessed valuation of taxable real estate in the city of New York will be stationary or even worse than stationary until the effects of the new subway system begin to be felt; and in this respect it is most unfortunate that serious delays should be occurring in breaking ground for essential parts of the new system.

However, in spite of the fact that many million dollars of city stock will have to be sold during the next few years for projected improvements, the city will unquestionably be obliged to reduce its new borrowing to the lowest possible limit. It is safe to predict that during the next five years its total borrowings will be substantially smaller than during the last five years, while, as we have already seen, there may well be a larger fund seeking investment in state and municipal securities in general. If this analysis of the situation is correct, the City of New York may again be borrowing in the not remote future at a rate of interest approximating to four per cent; and at any rate, the danger of a five per cent rate, which at one time looked imminent, seems definitely to have passed.

Will Conserve Real Estate Interests.

Mayor Mitchel has signed and presumably Governor Glynn will sign the bill passed by the Legislature which bestows upon the Board of Estimate and Apportionment the power to regulate the height of buildings and to divide the city into building districts. The fact that this power has been conferred on the Board of Estimate instead of the Board of Aldermen is a curious commentary on the existing standing of the legislative branch (so-called) of the city government. If there is one aspect of municipal policy which the Board of Aldermen might be considered competent to pass upon it is the subject of the height and distribution of buildings. It has the power to determine building regulations in other respects, and if it is competent to decide whether any one set of building regulations makes for public safety, it should be competent to determine whether or not the public interest demands the imposition of a limitation on their height.

Furthermore, the Aldermen would seem to be particularly well qualified to plan a system of building districts, because its members are elected from local constituencies, and should presumably be well acquainted with the needs of their own particular part of the city. Nevertheless, the duties of planning a system of height-limitation and building distribution is expressly taken away from them and as expressly conferred on the Board of Estimate. The Record and Guide approves of the bestowal of this task upon the Board of Estimate. It will undoubtedly be more quickly and more ably accomplished by that body than it would be by the Board of Aldermen. But in that case why impose upon the taxpayers the duty of supporting such an incompetent and superfluous branch of the city government? Whenever any important matter of city policy has to be determined, public opinion instinctively and almost necessarily turns to the Board of Estimate for the accomplishment of the work. It is rapidly accumulating all the legislative, if not all the administrative powers which are lodged in governing boards of a city with a commission at its head. When the municipal charter is revised, it is very much to be hoped that these facts will be recognized and that the Board of Aldermen will be thrown into the institutional scrap heap. At present it merely supplies unnecessary places and salaries for a few local politicians and the taxpayers would be positively benefitted in case it were abolished and its few remaining duties conferred upon other branches of the local administration.

The Mayor signed the bill in spite of the fact that he fears its provisions are in conflict with the State Constitution. In his opinion a legal limitation of the height of buildings may well be condemned by the courts as the taking of property without due process of law. The Court of Appeals of this State may indeed find that a regulation of the height of buildings does conflict with the "due process of law" clause in the State Constitution; but in that case it will be ignoring precedents in other States, and it will be handing down a decision not warranted by the economic facts. The regulation of the height of buildings is not in any real sense of the phrase either depriving a man of his property without compensation or in any way diminishing rights which the individual property owner is entitled to enjoy. The right to erect a building to an unlimited height is a right of dubious economic value. It may for a short time and under special conditions result in a certain increase in values, but in the long run it reacts diliteriously on the price of the property.

A skyscraper which is not protected against the shutting off of its own light is in a very vulnerable position. Its owner is either obliged to buy adjoining property for purposes of self-protection, or else submit eventually to being deprived of light, which is essential to the rental value of his buildings. That is what has been happening recently in the financial district. If a reasonable limitation on height had been imposed from the beginning, it is possible that the value of certain corners might not have risen quite so high, but in all probability the general trend of land values south of Chambers street would have been higher. The right of building as high as the property owner pleases is one of those suicidal rights, which becomes valueless in proportion as it is generally exercised. It would be hard to imagine a more legitimate exercise of the police power of the State than a law which compelled property owners to confine their skyscrapers to a certain proportion of their lots.

QUEENS NEEDS MORE HOMES.

George A. Fleury, President U. S. Title Guaranty Co., Optimistic.

George A. Fleury, President of the United States Title Guaranty Company, discussing the outlook for Queens Borough for the coming season, said, this week, that he believed the whole eastern section of New York City was shaping itself for healthy expansion, and that if any one doubted all he had to do was to look at the great increase in the number of commuters as reported by the Long Island Railroad.

"When a railroad shows a jump in the number of commuters it carries from a monthly average of 7,399 in 1906, to 33,000 in 1913, there is evidently something more than mere optimism warranted in the future of the territory it covers. It begets positive faith and that is what I have in Queens.

"Take last year, which was a dull one, there were 6,300 new homes erected on Long Island, not including Brooklyn and Long Island City. In Riverhead ten new buildings were erected, while in some sections as many as 600 structures were completed."

The organization of the United States Title Guaranty Company was effected in September, 1902, by a merger of the People's Guaranty and Indemnity Company and the Long Island Title Company, and began business in December, 1902, under the name of the United States Title Guaranty & Indemnity Company, under the presidency of George J. Grossman, at 160 Broadway, Manhattan.

In 1905, the company erected a building in Jamaica, and in 1911 was reorganized with Mr. Fleury as president, at which time the home office itself was moved from Manhattan to Brooklyn. As the company had discontinued the procuring of further condemnation business that part of the name referring to such work was dropped in September, 1911, when the name was changed to the present title. The company reports that it has placed the second largest total amount in that borough for the year ending July 1, 1913, of any lending institution. The total involved for all was $332,936,782, of which $309,168,000 represented trust mortgages.

The officers of the company are George A. Fleury, president; Paul C. Cloyd, vice-president and secretary; Charles E. Covert, vice-president; George W. Cummings, Jr., assistant secretary; Charles J. Lockett, assistant secretary, and James G. DeBevoise, assistant secretary.

Owners to Meet at the Exchange.

At the Real Estate Exchange, 14 Vesey street, on Tuesday, April 21, at 4 p. m. the Realty Owners of the City of New York will hold a meeting for the purpose of further strengthening the movement in the different boroughs. With the announcement that Mayor Mitchel has appointed a Taxation Committee to study the subject of taxation, the Realty Owners intend to provide for suitable representation of real estate interests before this body. The Realty Owners will also appoint a committee to confer with the Borough President and other city and State officials in the matter of conflicting orders and violations.

ACTION BY R. E. BOARD.

Takes a Stand on a Number of Questions Affecting Public Improvements.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Board of Governors of the Real Estate Board of New York, held this week, a number of matters of vital importance to property owners were acted on.

Resolutions were adopted and forwarded to Mayor Mitchel stating the board's attitude on a number of questions affecting public improvements, upon which hearings were held this week.

The membership of the board was also enlarged by the addition of 33 new members taken in since the last monthly meeting of the Board of Governors.

One of the measures endorsed was the bill limiting the height of buildings. This plan has always had the support of the board and its attitude was reflected in a recent report by its Heights of Buildings Committee. At a hearing on Monday the Board of Estimate was informed of the Real Estate Board's endorsement of the plan to limit the height of buildings and to lay out the city in zones to accommodate various types of structures.

A resolution of endorsement was forwarded to Mayor Mitchel prior to the hearing on the bill permitting the Board of Estimate to acquire land by excess condemnation.

The Pollock bill for a market commission was opposed by resolution, sent to the Mayor, on the ground that the public was insufficiently enlightened on details of the scheme and for other reasons. This bill the Mayor has since vetoed.

A resolution was forwarded to the Mayor opposing the Senate bill, giving drastic powers over fire-escapes to the Fire Commissioner, and transferring to him the powers of the Fire Explosive Commission; and a resolution opposing Senate Bill Int. 1132, permitting the teachers' permanent pension fund to be depleted for current needs. The position taken by the board was that legislation of this kind should be opposed unless it had the endorsement of the Board of Estimate and the Board of Education.

Other school bills before the Mayor this week granting salary increases to teachers were opposed, at the hearing last week, by President Laurence M. D. McGuire and E. A. Tredwell, and were subsequently vetoed by the Mayor.

The board also accepted the report of its Committee on Civic Centre. Its report was a qualified endorsement of the plan, with the suggestion that the question of total expense be carefully scrutinized. The report emphasized the necessity of proper soundings before the work of constructing the new court house is begun.

BARGE CANAL TERMINALS.

The State Engineer to Give a Hearing in Queens to Decide on Locations.

At the request of the Chamber of Commerce of the Borough of Queens, John A. Bensel, State Engineer and Surveyor, and Maurice E. Connolly, President of the Borough of Queens, have fixed a date for a joint hearing regarding the selection of Barge Canal terminals for the Borough of Queens. The hearing will be held next Friday afternoon, April 24, at 3 p. m., in the Local Board Room at Borough Hall, Long Island City.

To this meeting all business men interested in the establishment of barge canal terminals in Queens Borough are invited, and arguments in favor of the different terminals proposed will be heard. The State Engineer desires the approval of both the borough officials and commercial organizations of any locations selected. Manufacturers are requested to furnish as definite information as possible as to both the probable kinds and quantities of freight which will be brought to and from the borough over the barge canal, also the districts in the borough from which such freight will be taken. This information will have to be convincing as to the necessity for the proposed terminals to secure the necessary appropriations from the State for their construction.

FEAR ONE-MAN POWER.

Merchants Protest to Mayor Against Favoring Hoff Bill.

Vigorous protest was made against the Hoff bill at a hearing given by the Mayor on Wednesday afternoon, when the question as to whether the bill providing for the transfer of the powers now vested in the Municipal Explosives Commission to the Fire Commissioner should be approved or not. The Mayor heard arguments for and against the bill for almost an hour. The speakers against the approval of the bill of the Mayor were in the majority and were led by William H. Gibson, president of the Board of Trade, who also represented the Merchants' Association and several other organizations of real estate owners, merchants and manufacturers, including the warehouse interests.

Dr. C. F. McKenna, the consulting chemist represented about a dozen different societies, chief among which was the New York section of the American Chemist Society, which has a voice in the selection of one member of the Municipal Explosives Commission. Charles Thaddeus Terry, representing the Auto Dealers' Association, elicited from the Mayor a statement that he was very much impressed with the arguments against the need of greater coordination between the different departments of the city government. Another speaker against the approval of the bill was J. A. Haskells, of the Du Pont Powder Company, who spoke in behalf of the interests shipping explosives into this city.

Fire Commissioner Adamson urged upon the Mayor the approval of the bill on the grounds that the bill provided for the termination of a body whose legislative functions had long since expired. He explained that apparent confusion existed among the protestants owing to the fact that the proposal did not interfere in any way with the prerogatives of the Bureau of Combustibles, but only concerned itself with a commission whose operations conflicted with the best possible fire-prevention service that the Fire Department could render if it had full power to make rules governing the handling of explosives in the city.

A number of others spoke for the bill covering largely the ground concisely outlined by the Fire Commissioner. The salient point in their arguments was that the Explosives Commission had made laws which deserved the credit for the absence of serious explosions, such as the Tarrant Chemical Company of some dozen years ago.

Objection was made that it would be a physical impossibility for the Fire Commissioner to exercise the duties now performed by a competent body of experts who give each problem coming before it exhaustive study and consideration before drafting rulings having largely to do with the welfare of the residents of New York City. It was said that, while every confidence is now being imposed in the Fire Commissioner, that the time may come when such an officer would use the discretion that the bill invests him with to work a hardship against business houses, who depend upon a fair and equitable interpretation of the law as to what constitutes a nuisance.

C. M. Joyce, representing the New York section of the American Chemical Society, introduced Dr. C. F. McKenna, who made the point that the Fire Commissioner would be compelled to employ expert chemists in an advisory capacity in framing rules and regulations for the handling of high explosives in New York City and that, therefore, it would not be possible for the city to save much by the change.

THE WEEK'S REAL ESTATE NEWS

Brokerage Sales, Auctions, Foreclosure Suits, Building Loans, etc., Together With Brief Personal Items.

Brooklyn Properties Figured Prominently in the Business.

Activities of the United Owners.

The United Real Estate Owners' Associations has gone on record opposing the zone system advocated in the recent report of the Heights of Buildings Commission. While they have no objection to the regulation of building heights, it was decided at last Tuesday's meeting to present arguments before the Governor urging him to veto that particular section of the proposed enactment. The United Owners maintain that a zone system would be unconstitutional, and would be an unwise attempt to artificially create centers of activity. It is preferable to allow centers to be created through natural growth and progress.

The president of the association appeared this week before the commission now considering the matter of pensions for city employees. He suggested that since real estate owners would eventually have to contribute most of the money which would have to be paid out, they should be granted the opportunity of presenting their opinion at a public hearing, as to how the fund should be created. A communication was forwarded to the Mayor requesting that the committee be increased by the addition of several representatives of owners of real estate.

A committee of the United Owners is working daily, in co-operation with representatives of the Building Committee of the Board of Aldermen, preparing a new ordinance effecting billboards and out-door advertising.

At the previous meeting of the Associations, the Forty-second Street Association, a powerful organization of owners in the mid-town section of the city, was admitted to membership in the central body.

Advisory Council Formed.

To protect real estate, in co-operation with general business, the Advisory Council of Real Estate Interests was organized this week with seven delegates from property owners' associations and eight from other representative fields.

John Claflin was chosen chairman. The Executive Committee consists of Cyrus C. Miller, Chairman; Laurence M. D. McGuire, Alfred E. Marling, Adolph Bloch, Clarence H. Kelsey. Others of the council are President Charles A. Peabody of the Mutual Life Insurance Company, President Thomas M. Mulry of the Emigrant Industrial Savings Institution, Albert C. Milbank, William J. Amend, Frederic B. Pratt.

The Advisory Council will hold regular meetings to consider the matters affecting both realty and general city development. It will consult with public officers and make suggestions in regard to city and State administrations, and endeavor to obtain just treatment of their interests. It will start a campaign to build up the membership and power of the local realty associations in all boroughs and will perform a public service which should have been begun years ago.

Shore Hotel at Auction.

Hollywood Hotel, at West End, N. J., built about ten years ago by the late John Hoey, president of the Adams Express Co., and in its time one of the finest hostelries in the country, will be sold at auction on Thursday, April 23, by Charles E. Shongood, United States auctioneer. The property, including the palatial hotel, eight richly furnished adjoining cottages, garage, laundry, stables and about 400 bathhouses covering in its entirety about 50 acres and representing an investment of about $1,000,000, will be sold unreservedly free and clear of all incumbrances. The property is well located within two blocks of the ocean, the old Monmouth County race track and the railroad station, and is in the immediate vicinity of the beautiful estates of J. B. Greenhut, the Seligmanns, the Guggenheims and the late John A. McCall.

Carl E. Trulock, the trustee who will dispose of the property anticipates a large attendance and spirited bidding on account of the desirability of the smaller plots for immediate improvement or for investment purchase. The extensive collection of art objects, including rare works of art, statuary and bric-a-bac, is expected to attract a large number of prominent collectors.

Mayor's Taxation Committee.

Mayor Mitchel has appointed a committee of twenty-five to be known as the Mayor's Taxation Committee, to study methods of taxation in use here and in other cities in this country and abroad. The committee, which is to act as a voluntary one, is made up as follows: Alfred E. Marling, Robert S. Binkerd, George Cromwell, Frank Harvey Field, John N. Francolini, Frederick C. Howe, Hamilton Holt, Jeremiah W. Jenks, Walter Lindner, Frederick C. Leubuscher, Cyrus C. Miller, Louis Heatin Pink, David Rumsey, Oscar R. Seitz, Robert E. Simon, E. R. A. Seligman, F. S. Tomlin, Delos F. Wilcox, Lawson Purdy, Charles T. White, John J. Halleran, Collin Woodward. Ardolph L. Kline, Frederick B. Shipley and George V. Mullan.

PRIVATE REALTY SALES.

Extreme quietude prevailed in all branches of the market this week. The holiday apparently has not been conducive to activity. The element of exchange figured largely in the business, indicative of the general weakness of the real estate situation. In Brooklyn, however, some strength was evident through the presence of the small investors among buyers and the increased number of sales of small holdings. Several properties in that borough figured in one of the large deals of the week, involving in trade a Pine street building. The more important transactions of the week concerned a Park avenue block front, Madison avenue apartment houses exchanged for a Long Island development, two structures in East 42nd street purchased by investors, and a row of sixteen apartment houses in the Bronx. The mystery as to the identity of the buyer of the vacant plot at 882 Fifth avenue was cleared up by the announcement that O. G. Jennings would erect dwelling for his own occupancy. His former residence in East 72nd street figured in this deal.

The total number of sales reported and not recorded in Manhattan this week was 32, as against 26 last week and 32 a year ago.

The number of sales south of 59th street was 16, compared with 10 last week, and 14 a year ago.

The sales north of 59th street aggregated 16, as compared with 16 last week, and 18 a year ago.

The total number of conveyances in Manhattan was 143, as against 146 last week, 9 having stated considerations totalling $352,600. Mortgages recorded this week number 79, involving $2,573,073, as against 95 last week, aggregating $1,793,585.

From the Bronx 22 sales at private contract were recorded, as against 17 last week, and 13 a year ago.

The amount involved in Manhattan and Bronx auction sales this week was $795,400, compared with $518,077 last week, making a total since January 1 of $12,415,924. The figures for the corresponding week last year was $1,445,765, and the total from January 1, 1913, to April 19, 1913, was $19,081,826.

Riverside Drive Plot Sold.

Bernard Smyth & Sons and the Duff & Brown Co., sold for William Gamble and John Brown, the plot 100x80 at the northeast corner of Riverside Drive and 147th street to Charles M. Rosenthal. The plot was held at $110,000. Mr. Rosenthal recently acquired Picken Court, the ten-story apartment house, adjoining.

$1,500,000 Park Avenue Deal.

It was reported yesterday that the F. & M. Schaefer Brewing Co., property occupying the block front on the east side of Park avenue from 50th street to 51st street, had been sold to interests which intend to replace the five-story brick brewery and seven old dwellings with apartment houses or high class dwellings. The property has been held at about $1,500,000. The brokers were the Douglas Robinson Charles S. Brown Co.

Pennsylvania Investor Buys.

Ex-Governor William M. Brown, of Pennsylvania, bought from the Alpha Construction Co., and the Mansad Construction Co., the entire block front on the east side of Madison avenue, between 82d and 83d streets, which is improved with two eleven-story apartment houses on plot 200x90. In exchange was given Long Island property known as Stewart Manor, which comprises about 2,000 lots, just beyond Garden City. It is said that the new owners contemplate developing the property for home sites. The entire transaction involved nearly $2,000,000. Ex-Governor Brown, now a resident of Newcastle, Pa., was represented by Stoddard & Mark. The brokers were Ambrose F. Becker, Herman Feinberg, and J. G. Bassman, of the N-R-G Realty Co.

Oceanic Company Adds to Holdings.

The Oceanic Investing Co., which several months ago purchased the southeast corner of Fifth avenue and 42d street, and the 41st street corner of the same block, has bought, through Leopold Weil, from the estate of Margaret Scully, the 5-sty building at 1 East 42d street and through Slawson & Hobbs, from Carolina O. Colfree, the 6-sty building at 3 East 42d street, on plot 40x100. The sale was made subject to leases on the property held by the Childs Restaurant Company and the Riker-Hegeman Corporation.

Sale on Bankers' Row.

Maurice G. Strauss and John E. Henry, Jr., sold for Edward King to the Arles Realty Company, Arthur Pinover president, 38 Pine street, a three-story structure, 23.7x61.8, between Nassau and William streets, for which he gave in part payment Brooklyn property, a four story apartment house on the south side of Caton avenue, between East 17th and 18th streets; also forty lots in the north side of 68th street, between Twenty-first and Twenty-second avenues, and nine dwellings at the northeast corner of Cropsy avenue and Bay 13th street. The transaction involves property held at about $768,500. Negotiations are said to be well advanced for the re-sale of the Pine street building to a prominent bond house.

Big Bronx Deal.

Alexander Selkin and David Mintz have sold for The Fleischman Realty Co., the 16 five-story houses 1503 to 1525 Charlotte street, 5 being 40x100 each, and 8 being 37.6x100, and 1458 to 1462 Wilkens avenue 37.6x100 each. The property was held at $750,000. This was an all cash transaction over the first mortgages. The buyer was John J. Tully, a Bronx builder, who will offer the property for sale.

72d Street Residence Sold.

Oliver G. Jennings has sold his four-story residence at 7 East 72d street, on plot 28x102.2, near Fifth avenue to the 4 West Fifty-seventh Street Corporation, W. Emlen Roosevelt, president. The company recently sold the vacant sit, 30x175, at 882 Fifth avenue, which it is learned was taken by Mr. Jennings and on which he contemplates erecting an English basement house from plans by Walter B. REAL ESTATE OWNERS' PROTECTIVE ASSOCIATION will hold a regular meeting on Monday evening, April 20, at the Riverside Theatre Building, Broadway and 96th st. Mr. Davies has been forming his collection of old New York views for the last 25 years. In this collection are the "Beschrivinge," first edition of 1651, which contains the first known view of New York, and the first New York City directory for 1786, said to be the most perfect example of each and both from the Robert Hoe library sale.

BUILDING MANAGEMENT

LENGTH OF LIFE OF BUILDING POWER PLANTS*

BY C. M. RIPLEY

Conducted by Raymond P. Roberts, Building Manager for the American Real Estate Co.

PART ONE.

IN April, 1913, Mr. W. H. Chesebrough, president of the Alliance Realty Co., asked the author the following question: "How long can a private electric plant be run before it has to be replaced?" It was an original and searching question and one which sought for facts. Others have asked frequently how much depreciation should be charged off on engineering installations of various kinds. This question desired no one's conclusions—merely the facts in the case.

The electrical profession is in such infancy that up to the present time we have had very little data on the subject of the life of electric plants in buildings. It has been the custom of many engineers and architects to assume a 5 per cent. depreciation as the proper annual charge-off on such installations. It has been the opinion of eminent men who have examined the facts developed by Mr. Chesebrough's question, that 5 per cent. depreciation has been used temporarily in the absence of better data, that it has been only guesswork, that it must now be upset as incorrect, and that preconstruction methods of figuring must be revolutionized.

Oldest Private Electric Plant.

It is an interesting fact that the oldest plant for generating electricity in a building in New York City was installed and in operation less than four years after Thomas A. Edison announced his discovery of the incandescent electric light in October, 1879. In the year 1883 George B. Post let the contract for a private electric plant in the Mills Building, opposite the Stock Exchange on Broad street, New York City. This was before there were trolley cars in New York City. This plant is still in daily operation. It seems miraculous that the fifteenth and nineteenth dynamos made by Thomas A. Edison have run every day for over 31 years and are still in perfectly serviceable condition. Not only are the same dynamos in operation, but the original engines installed at the same time by the New York Safety Steam Engine Co., long since out of business, are the sole means of driving the dynamos. A year later another unit of exactly the same type and capacity was added. Mr. A. M. Bogart, the chief engineer of the building, states that these machines operate daily until the load becomes too large for them to handle it. This time is between 4 and 7 a. m. every day.

As an example of how the erection of high buildings in the neighborhood has increased the need of electric light in the Mills Building, it should be noted that the owners installed at later dates a 75, a 100 and a 160 k. w. dynamo to carry the increase thus made necessary. The three original dynamos were each of 25 k. w. capacity, showing that the new equipment was used to supplement, and not replace the older and smaller apparatus. Regulation of the height of buildings will make unnecessary such additions to future electric plants.

Mr. Bogart calls attention to the further fact that even though these engines and dynamos may be assumed to have a lower efficiency than more modern apparatus, he must heat the building during a large part of the year; thus he explains the fact that these engines are used. Had machines of higher efficiency been installed, the exhaust steam from them would not have been sufficient to heat the building and live steam from the boilers would have to be used in larger quantities than is required even now on cold days to supplement the exhaust from these old engines.

George B. Post is responsible for the oldest electric plant in New York City, if not in America or in the world. Thus did he and Thomas A. Edison link their talents and "builded better than they knew." This adds one more triumph to his record of original achievements, which include the installation of the first passenger elevator in an office building, the compilation of the first tables of moments of inertia of steel beams, the design of the first building over 12 stories in height, the idea of hanging scaffolds from openings in the building rather than building them up from the ground on the outside, and besides he was the first to order floor arches to be installed as the steel work rose.

Rate of Depreciation.

At this point the question raised by Mr. Whitaker, editor of The Journal of the American Institute of Architecture, may be introduced. He asked: "Why not figure out for each of the old plants what would have been the proper rate of depreciation to have charged off from the start?" In order to carry out this important suggestion, a report was obtained from a certified public accountant, which is included here because of its brevity and clearness:

New York City, October 30, 1913.—Mr. C. M. Ripley, Pattison Bros., Consulting Engineers, 1182 Broadway, New York City, Dear Sirs: In compliance with your request, we report to you as follows:

TIME REQUIRED FOR A SINKING FUND TO EQUAL ORIGINAL INVESTMENT.

(Sinking fund earning 4½ per cent. interest, compounded annually.)

Percentage depreciation Charged off annually		Years required to Refund investment
1½	Between	31 and 32
2	Between	26 and 27
2½	Between	23 and 24
3	Between	20 and 21
3½	Between	18 and 19
4	Between	17 and 18
4½	Between	15 and 16
5	Between	14 and 15

It is proper and conservative to assume the above rate of interest on a sinking fund. We trust that these facts fully answer your questions. If we can be of further service to you, we await your wishes. Yours very truly,

CERTIFIED AUDIT COMPANY OF AMERICA,
(Signed) By Edward M. Hyans, Certified Public Accountant.

Other Plants of Historical Interest.

On the basis of the figures quoted in the foregoing it will be seen that in the following plants the annual depreciation has been less than 2 per cent.

In the Dakota Apartments, H. J. Hardenbergh installed a private electric plant in 1885. Some of the same apparatus is still running every day. One direct connected unit was added afterward because of increased load due partly to the erection of large buildings on either side. This plant also supplies a dozen or so private residences on 72d and 73d streets with heat and electricity. The machines were Edison dynamos also. Another plant in its twenty-ninth year of service is in the Wells Building, in which the New York Quotation Company has a private plant supplying electricity to 1,200 tickers below Fulton street. The Osborne apartment house contains an old belted Edison dynamo held in reserve. This machine is 29 years old.

By referring to the figures quoted by the accountant it will be seen that the annual depreciation in the following plants is less than 2½ per cent.

The Evelyn apartment house has a 25-year-old plant, which consists of one engine and dynamo, which runs every day from late afternoon till 1:30 o'clock a. m. The Bank of New York has an old outfit 25 years old, which is held as a reserve, but is run once a week to keep it in good condition. The Union Trust Co. for 25 years past has had its same engines and dynamos running, and at present they operate from 8 o'clock a. m. to 10 p. m. The Tower Building, soon to be razed, has a plant 24 years old which has the record of running as long as the building has stood.

Good Records.

For 24 years the electric dynamo at 79 Crosby street has supplied electricity to the building and now supplies two other buildings. Madison Square Garden has a private plant that is now idle after working 23 years. The superintendent claims that during the past summer he has saved money by shutting down the plant in May. Those in charge say they can run the plant if they want to, as that provision was made in the electric contract. The Nevada apartments still obtain their electricity from the old belted plant that has been under the sidewalk for 23 years. This plant has never been enlarged, as the building occupies the entire flatiron block and tall buildings could not be built adjacent. The Mechanics and Metals Bank operated a plant for about 23 years and abandoned it. Shortly after, the building was torn down to make room for the new Morgan Building.

Attention might also be called to the following plants, which have been in operation sufficiently long to warrant placing the annual depreciation at less than 3 per cent.

Delmonico's, also on a flatiron corner at Beaver street, still obtain their electricity from the same old engine and dynamo that have served them for 22 years. The same is true of the Butler Brothers' store on Broadway: no change in 22 years. The same is true of the United Charities Building, which also supplies next door. The Evening Mail Building has a plant now reported to be in its twentieth year of service.

The Potter Building plant has seen 19 years of service and is still running. Thus, the annual depreciation of its plant is less than 3½ per cent. Mr. Hardenbergh's Waldorf-Astoria has a plant in perfect condition after 17 years, and the owners of the Bennett Building state that their plant is now in its 18th year. In these two the annual depreciation has therefore been less than 4 per cent.

The Sterling Building on East 17th street has had one engine and one dynamo for 17 years; no other. Mr. C. C. Mailloux, an electrical engineer, reports the unique and successful installation of a gas engine, dynamo and storage battery in St. Paul's Methodist Church which has run continuously for 16 years. The engine operates three days per week and the battery furnishes lights during the rest of the week. It will thus be seen that in these two buildings the annual depreciation is less than 4½ per cent.

Interesting But Not Conclusive.

The foregoing are only a few of the many plants which were inspected during the search for the oldest plant in New York. The data are interesting and historically instructive, but no logical conclusion can be drawn therefrom for the reason that the plants which were failures are not to be found. Possibly some one may say the foregoing plants were selected and are even exceptional cases.

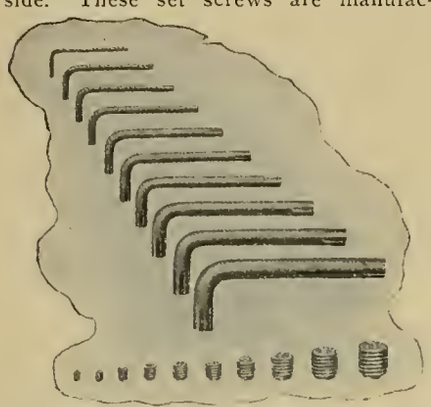
USEFUL APPLIANCES



Novelties, New Applications of Familiar Devices and the Trend of Invention, Designed to Aid the Architect, Builder and Building Manager, Described Without Regard to Advertising Consideration.

A Safety Set Screw.

OCCASIONALLY one hears of accidents occuring to men working around machinery, despite precautions taken by employers in putting guards around revolving wheels and gears. But the Bristol Company, of Waterbury, Conn., has recently put on the market a patented safety set screw that eliminates entirely all danger of clothing catching in projecting "buds" on machinery.

The accompanying illustration shows the spanners or wrenches used to operate these set screws, the actuary of which is on the inside instead of outside. These set screws are manufactured under patent rights which include 6 dove-tailed slots, as shown in the initial cut, inside the hollow head of the set screws, and corresponding flues on the outside of the special wrenches used with them. The dove-tailed design is such that when these set screws are set up hard with the special wrench, there is not the usual tendency to expand and crack the hollow head, but from the angles of the surfaces of the slots there is a tendency for the wrench to contract or compress the head of the screw. They are made in a great variety of sizes, and a special treatment process used makes the screws glass hard on the outside and extremely tough on the inside. The "safety first" movement has progressed so far that great attention is now being given to changing the design of machinery to protect human life, and the elimination of the old-style set screws with projecting heads is one of the things which safety engineers and insurance inspectors insist upon.

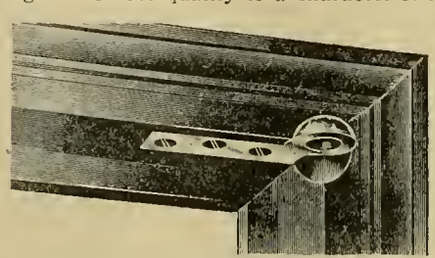
A Liquid Pipe Opener.

THERE are innumerable mechanical devices on the market for opening up clogged drain pipes, but Chamberlain, Haber & Co., Cleveland, Ohio, are putting on the market a combination of mineral elements so compounded that upon the introduction of water, grease, soap, rags, paper, hair, vegetables and other foreign matter are immediately liquified, generating at the same time heat and powerful gases. This solution when introduced into an obstructed drain or sewer pipe will, because of its pacific gravity, seek the obstruction and completely disintegrate it at once.

It is commended to building managers because it is economical, at least, in so far as it obviates the necessity of opening drains through floors or fracturing pipes by running rammers through them. These methods often entail the straining or disconnection of pipes with more or less injury to the plumbing and an increase in the liability of leakage.

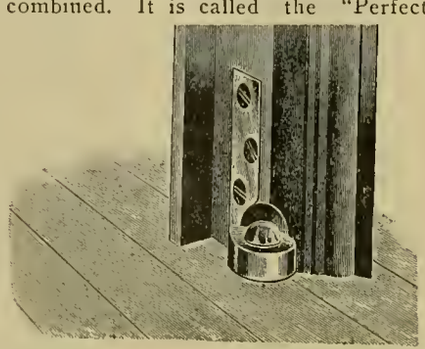
Flywheel Explosions.



"FLYWHEELS sometimes burst without any apparent cause, even when the load, speed and running conditions are normal at the time of the accident," said an inspector for the Travelers' Insurance Company recently. "When the material is examined it may be that no defects can be discovered on the fractured surfaces; and no cracks, blow-holes nor discolorations can be found. When the fractured parts of the wheel are tested for strength, there is often no physical evidence whatsoever of inferiority in the material."

An accident may sometimes result from internal stresses in the material, due to faulty design or to careless cooling of the casting; but severe internal stresses seldom occur except in wheels made in one piece. Some other explanation must therefore be sought for accidents of this nature, and the cause will often be found to be the use of improper raw material in the foundry. Chemical analysis shows that the iron is not of a grade suitable for machine castings. Such iron invariably contains a large percentage of phosphorus. Phosphorus lowers the melting point, but makes the iron brittle; and machine casting should never contain more than four-tenths of one per cent. of it.

The Engineering Division of the Travelers' Insurance Company has a record of a case where a pulley burst under ordinary running conditions, and where no defects could be discovered in the broken wheel by a visual examination; but an analysis of the iron showed that it contained 1.37 per cent. of phosphorus, or nearly 3½ times the maximum that should have been allowed. There is little doubt that brittleness of the metal, due to this high percentage of phosphorus, was the cause of the break.



A Ball Door Hinge.

IF ONE were asked to mention the qualities indispensable for a perfect door hinge, those that would occur at once to the mind would be strength, noiselessness and smoothness of working. The first quality is a characteristic shared in by many hinges of inferior as well as superior make. But the presence of the two others may generally be accepted as a sign that the hinge is a good one.

In a hinge recently put on the market by Nettlefold & Sons, Ltd., 54 High Holborn, W. C., London, a special effort has been made to ensure that all three qualities with other advantages, will be combined. It is called the "Perfect" ball hinge, and is quite different from butt hinges. There are four gunmetal straps, which are screwed into the frame, door and jamb, two at the top and two at the bottom. Each strap ends in a half cup at right angles to its length, which serves to hold the metal ball on which the door turns. The straps not only act as a hinge, but also clamp the stile of the door to the rail, thus making the door considerably stronger than with ordinary butt hinges. Each of the four should be set quarter of an inch from the edge, as in this position the joint is a close one, whether the door be open or shut. The hinge is easily fixed, neat in appearance, noiseless, practically dustproof and does not injure the surface of the door. An adjustable center for swing doors has also been designed, employing the above principle of the single loose ball.

Bathtub Seat—Bath Room Chair.

THIS is a novelty that is being introduced by the Dualette Bath Seat Manufacturing Company, of 212 East 52d street, and seems to fill a demand that has arisen by reason of the constantly decreasing size of bath rooms in apartment houses. The device shown in the accompanying illustration consists of a specially arranged seat that will perfectly adjust itself to the inside of the tub as well as to the outside where it can be used for dressing children or as a seat for the bather. Many tubs are built flush with the wall so that the ordinary seat can not be used, but this particular device can be used regardless of position of the tub. It is particularly adaptable in bath rooms where the space is so limited as to prevent the use of a stool or chair. It is compactly built and can be folded out of the way either inside or outside of the tub. It is manufactured in several different styles and the price in each case is moderate.

Substitute for Composition Board.

ARCHITECTS have an opportunity for specifying something new in decorative and finishing material, according to advices received from the lumber trade. It is a genuine built-up wood that is cut into very thin veneers and then, under great hydraulic pressure, practically made into a solid piece of wood by the employment of a patented mica cement just perfected under a secret formula. It is being put on the market in stock sizes up to 7x15 feet without joints and in practically any kind of wood that architects are accustomed to work with.

A Folding Shelf Bracket.

THE building manager or apartment owner, who bears in mind the little things that appeal to the eye of the woman seeking quarters in multi-tenanted buildings, has a better selling proposition when he can point to space saving as well as labor saving devices.

One of the former that seems to have a special merit is being introduced by the Stanley Works of New Britain, Conn., and is shown in the accompanying illustration. It is a shelf bracket that permits of folding when the shelf is not in use. It has a special service as a substitute for the kitchen table, especially in kitchenettes. The device is well built of good steel and it has a locking device that positively prevents the collapse of the shelf when in position of usefulness.

CURRENT BUILDING OPERATIONS

Including Contemplated Construction, Bids Wanted, Contracts Awarded, Plans Filed and Government, State and Municipal Work

A Change at the Building Bureau.

Rudolph P. Miller resigned this week as Superintendent of Buildings for the Borough of Manhattan, in order to assist the Building Committee of the Board of Aldermen in a revision of the Building Code for the city, in accordance with a resolution passed by the board at its meeting of March 31 and now signed by the Mayor. Deputy Superintendent Ludwig is now Acting Superintendent. Chairman James Hamilton of the Committee on Buildings of the Board of Aldermen, said:

"It is not the purpose of the Building Committee to write an entirely new ordinance, but rather to revise the draft prepared by the Building Committee of the previous board and reintroduced in the present board some time in January. Mr. Miller's efforts will be directed toward meeting, as far as possible, the objections and criticisms made against the pending measure when it was under discussion last year and those that may still be offered. In this work he is to act in consultation with the superintendents of buildings for the several boroughs. He will also be glad to receive from all interested parties and critics such suggestions as they may wish to offer. As far as possible the public will be kept informed of all proposed changes in the draft published in the City Record of January 15, 1914.

"It is assumed that the draft under consideration, being the outcome of the work of several commissions and private committees and following the lines laid down by these bodies after discussions at public hearings, represents the kind of ordinance that the architects, builders and real estate interests feel should be enacted."

The office of the Building Committee will be in the Municipal Building.

RED GUM

(AMERICA'S FINEST HARDWOOD) IN A FINE NEW HOTEL

The undeniable position of RED GUM as a cabinet wood of the highest distinction is now conceded in all sections of the United States.

The connoisseurs of Europe have prized this charming wood for generations but [curiously enough], it is only within recent years that RED GUM has met with wide recognition at home.

The Hotel Dempsey, Macon, Ga. (here pictured), a handsome hotel recently constructed, was designed by Mr. W. L. Stoddart, the New York Architect, and was built by the Gray-Wimmer Construction Co., of St. Louis.

The woodwork and trim throughout the building is RED GUM, made at the mills of the Massee & Felton Lumber Co., of Macon, Ga. The rich refinement of marking and soft, warm color of its selected paneling and carving makes the Hotel Dempsey one of the finest buildings of its type in America.

Why should not YOUR investment be equally intelligent, successful and distinguished? Why pay 10 to 15 times as much for an imported wood not one whit finer?

EXHIBIT AT THE MECHANICS' INSTITUTE.—The annual exhibition of the work of the students of the Mechanics' Institute, at 16-24 West 44th street, was held on the afternoon and evening of Monday, April 13, and attracted considerable attention and favorable comment on account of the excellency and high standard of the work exhibited. This exhibit was of particular interest to the builders of the city, because the General Society of Mechanics and Tradesmen has reached the nearest to a solution of the problem of the kind, and on account of the instruction given to those engaged in the building trades. Of its two thousand and odd students, the largest numbers are enrolled in the architectural drafting classes; there are ten classes in the first year, six in the second year, and four in the third year or graduation classes. In addition to the architectural work there were extensive exhibits of the work of art and clay modeling classes; the various classes in mathematics, science, mechanical drafting, industrial electricity and class in carriage drafting.

FEDERATED CIVIC ASSOCIATIONS.—With the purpose primarily of disseminating further information among those civic and kindred bodies whose interests would be directly or indirectly affected by the construction of further transportation facilities between this city and New Jersey, will hold an adjourned conference of delegates from these associations, Tuesday, May 5th, at 4 o'clock P. M., in the Sun Parlor of the Waldorf-Astoria. Representatives of the New York and New Jersey Bridge and Tunnel commissions and their engineers will be present for the purpose of explaining the situation as it exists and of answering any questions delegates may wish to ask. The last conference upon this subject, coosisting of representatives of about twenty associations, was a most interesting one, but few of the delegates present felt that the organizations they represented were sufficiently informed to take definite action upon the question at that time. The subject is of such importance to the community, however, that every association affected should be fully informed upon it so that it may be in a position to determine its opinion and exert its influence accordingly. Robert Grier Cooke is president.

BUILDING MATERIALS AND SUPPLIES

THE CITY BOND SALE AND THE MEXICAN CRISIS: THEIR EFFECT UPON FUTURE CONSTRUCTION WORK HERE.

Hemp Rope Stiffening—Lubricants Firmer—Steel Tonnage Still Light.

AMONG the many interests that had binoculars trained upon the city bond sale this week the mortgage and material departments were conspicuous. Doubt seemed to have existed as to the disposition of money to come forward at the lower interest rate, but when it was seen that the sale was almost thrice over-subscribed at the quarter level, new hope arose in the well nigh despondent building material circles. It gave the first measure of the real financial situation in New York City, and it proved that there is plenty of money available for investment purposes, providing the borrower's credit is sound.

In other words, it signifies that this will not be a year of speculation in building erection. People are not ready to take chances, but there is a definite commercial development that was felt last fall and is beginning to make itself felt again this spring in Bronx and Queens, especially in the latter borough. Factory expansion, according to plan filings and projects on architects' boards, is an important factor in the present building movement and, because the bond sale shows that there is money available for sound investment at rates of interest lower than those which have been prevailing; construction work that has been held up on the plea of high interest rates and scarcity of money are now expected to move ahead more freely.

Bus simultaneously with this glimmer of encouragement within the metropolitan district loom ominous clouds on the national horizon that may affect the money market adversely. Financiers and building money lenders were not inclined to venture an opinion as to the effect open hostilities with Mexico will have upon the eastern building situation, but the results hardly can be expected to be conducive to a free and unhampered building year. At the same time lenders believe that the volume of prospective building operations that already has been financed is sufficient, if confidence in the administration's trust program can be retained, to keep building material moving into new construction work fairly steady during the remainder of the season. War with Mexico might have the effect of distracting the public mind from the depression bugaboo long enough to give business a chance to get on its feet anyway. It will give men a chance to small-talk about something else besides the eternal question: "How do you find things?" and in the opinion of most broad-guage business men that is what is most needed now.

The week developed no marked change in the wholesale building material prices. Buying was, if anything, a little slower, owing to the two wet days, but the movement of common brick showed a continued strengthening tone, Portland cement moved in better demand and steel showed some further sign of activity. Sand and concrete ingredients are a little more free in movement, but it is significant that prices continue weak in almost all lines. Some shading is being done and a good deal of paper in the form of stock is being swung on subcontracts. This paper is much easier to dispose of today, however, so that this feature cannot be considered as an evidence of weakness in building financing. Commodities, such as lubricants, coal, waste and wire rope are firming and petroleum products are likely to advance if intervention takes place in Mexico. That is why hemp rope is stiffening so sharply now and those who use rope, such as painters and riggers have been in the market to anticipate a further rise that is sure to come if certain parts of the material entering into the manufacture of hemp rope that come from Mexico are shut off from this market temporarily.

	Week Ending
	No.	April 18.	No.	April 11.

SUPPLY MEN IN CONVENTION.

New York Association Begins Meetings on Monday at the Biltmore.

THE annual convention of the National Pipe and Supplies Association will be held at the Biltmore Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. The program will embrace an open session on the morning of April 20, to which all manufacturers and others interested in the manufacture and distribution of pipe, fittings and plumbing supplies have been invited. It is hoped to have a speaker of national prominence address this meeting on a subject that will command the interest and attention of the business men of the country.

The sessions of Monday afternoon and of Tuesday will be given over to discussion of matters of general interest to the entire trade, but both sessions of April 22 will be devoted exclusively to the plumbing supply interests of the members of the association. It is believed that this convention will be of unusual interest, not only on account of the questions of policy that will be discussed, but also because of the pending legislation now before Congress, which is exciting the attention and interest of the entire business world. It is hoped to be able to present some of these important matters to the convention through men of national prominence, who have given the various phases of trust legislation, price maintenance and concentration of industry careful thought and consideration.

STEEL AND IRON.

Interborough Authorizes Distribution of 49,944 Tons for "L" Lines.

STRUCTURAL steel showed some signs of improvement this week. The chief factor in the market was the authorizing by the Interborough Rapid Transit Company of the distribution of practically 50,000 tons of steel for third-tracking the Manhattan elevated lines. The American Bridge Co. took 13,423 tons, McClintic-Marshall Co. 13,619, Milliken Bros., Inc., 7,812, Phoenix Iron Works 3,929, L. F. Shoemaker & Co. 4,413, Belmont Iron Works 1,210 and Pennsylvania Steel Co. 5,548. Aside from this business there is little structural work coming out in the market. The American Bridge Co. took a contract for 6,000 tons for the Rosenbaum Building and the McClintic-Marshall Co. took about 1,400 tons of miscellaneous orders. Of the structural orders taken last week totaling 35,000 tons, about one-third of the business was for bridges.

The foundry iron market continued unchanged. A few more 100-ton lots were the subject of negotiation in the trade, but no large inquiries were forthcoming. The Bridgeport Malleable Iron Company has closed for a small lot of high silicon iron, but is holding off on 2,000 tons of No. 2 X upon which it has been quoted $15.45 delivered.

The situation in the Eastern market is reflected by the equally lifeless state of trade reported from other quarters. Dullness prevails in Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and Cleveland. Sales in Chicago are light and inquiries are few. Stock in the furnace yards there are small, and producers are booked to about the capacity for first half delivery. In the Philadelphia district Canadian pig iron is displacing the Southern product, a condition which has given the Birmingham makers some cause for uneasiness.

STONE MILLS STARTING UP.

Activity Reported From the Bedford District—Complaint of Price Cutting.

STONE mills that were closed down during February are starting up. The principal improvement this month is the increased number of inquiries, which foreshadow considerable activity in the stone trade. Enough work has come out lately to insure stone mills running on regular time schedule. While business has been slow, a feeling of confidence is apparent everywhere.

Stone operators in comparing present conditions with those in the past say that a fair quantity of work is being turned out; that all the mills are running now, though some of them not with a full force and that inquiries are coming in in larger numbers than usual, and more figuring is done on new work than in the same period of 1913.

Complaints of price cutting are heard, but it is believed that competition will diminish when mills begin to fill up.

COMMON BRICK.

W. H. Barnes to Stay With Gnybco—Weather Checks Sales.

TWO days of rain brought both the unloading and sales records for common brick below last week's figures. The strength of the market was shown, however, in only a moderate drop in the face of the adverse weather conditions, yet it was sufficient to keep prices on the lower grades of brick sluggish. As the week closed, the inquiry was much stronger, and indications now are that a sharp upturn in demand will develop over the week-end.

The market was startled at the rumor that Messrs. Barnes and McNamara, of the selling department of the Greater New York Brick Company, had resigned and that behind their resignations was a counteracting deal aimed at the organization of the barge owners carrying the Hudson brick trade. There was no connection between the barge project and the resignations. Neither was there any foundation for the report that Mr. McNamara had resigned. All reports were based upon the action of William H. Barnes, who represents, among other manufacturers, the Washburn and Hutton companies in the selling company, in handing in his resignation for personal reasons. The board received, but refused to accept, it. A conference with Mr. Barnes followed and it was officially stated yesterday morning that Mr. Barnes, whose acquaintance in the brick-selling market of Greater New York is very extensive, had reconsidered and will remain with Gnybco.

Official transactions for Hudson common brick covering the week ending Thursday, April 16, in the wholesale market, with comparisons for the corresponding period last year, and a comparative statement of Hudson brick unloaded from barges for consumption here, follow:

LUMBER.

Price Situation Unchanged, But May Drop Lower Later.

THE price situation remains unchanged, and it is hardly likely that lumber values will go lower. Of course there has not been any large production, and this has probably had much to do with keeping prices on their present basis. With the coming of more settled weather mill operations will be better able to carry on production, and unless the demand from the Northern markets increase proportionately, it may be impossible to hold to lists.

While the general report is that trade is still dull and the outlook not very promising, general conditions are sound throughout the country with the crop condition, perhaps, as favorable as at any time in history, and it is natural in the way of things for business to go forward. There are contrary influences no doubt; the uncertainty in business over pending legislation, and the recent change in the currency law, etc., and these probably are the chief causes contributing to the present business stagnation. That business is waiting for some reversal is evident; there are signs of some big work in contemplation as evidenced from the number of inquiries that are out, but it is hardly likely that these will materialize for a few months to come.

The export trade at this time is reported in an unsatisfactory condition. Much complaint is heard recently of heavy shipments on consignment, and this is seriously affecting trade in that quarter.

REAL ESTATE BOARD'S NOTABLE VICTORY

Drastic Factory Laws For Low Buildings Modified By New Legislation—How the Amendments Were Obtained and What They Mean.

THE biggest victory that has been won by the real estate interests during the past ten years was gained through the untiring efforts of the Real Estate Board to secure amendments to the drastic labor laws that became operative October 1 last. These laws, passed last year after the State Factory Investigating Commission had filed its report, were particularly severe and drastic, as they related to comparatively safe four, five and six-story buildings. Unintentionally the laws as they were enacted meant confiscation of equities in many small store and loft structures, buildings that are practically safe, but which, because the definition of a factory "is a place where one or more persons are employed at labor," are brought within the scope of the law. They were placed in the same class as factory structures, like the Triangle Waist factory. The burning of that building, and the resultant loss of life, were chiefly responsible for this legislation of 1913.

The Real Estate Board encountered stubborn opposition at every move when it began to seek relief. The opposition came mostly from self-constituted bodies of uplift workers who were insistent that no change in the law was necessary. But the moment the State authorities commenced to enforce the laws a strong sentiment against certain provisions that were both drastic and unfair swept over the city, and was shared by both owners and tenants. Protests were raised on every hand, and it only needed a powerful body, such as the Real Estate Board of New York, to take up the fight and secure the desired results.

Early in March President McGuire called a meeting of fifteen real estate men to discuss ways and means of securing amendments. The situation was discussed, and a special committee consisting of President Warren Cruikshank and Chas. F. Noyes was appointed, with authority to handle the subject. At the meeting of fifteen there were present: Charles F. Noyes, Albert B. Ashforth, Frank Lord, of Daniel Birdsall & Co.; Gerald R. Brown, of the Equitable; W. T. Ropes, of Horace S. Ely & Co.; Laurence M. D. McGuire, Lawrence B. Elliman, of Pease & Elliman; Chas. D. Cone, of Douglas Robinson, Chas. S. Brown Co.; Alwyn Ball, Jr., of Southack & Ball; F. M. Hilton, of Wm. A. White & Sons; M. J. Engel, of the Central Iron Works; James Walker, of Wm. C. Walker's Sons; Lewis D. Sampson, Warren Cruikshank, of the Cruikshank Company.

The special committee immediately took up in an active way the matter of securing necessary relief from the Legislature, and received much valuable assistance from the Industrial and Building Codes Committee of the Board, of which committee Mr. Noyes is chairman.

A hearing before the State Factory Investigating Commission was secured about the middle of March, and while it was thought that only a few would be present, more than two hundred real estate men, representing not only the Real Estate Board but the United Real Estate Owners, the Merchants' Association, the American Institute of Architects and several engineering societies appeared at this hearing.

CHARLES F. NOYES
Chairman Industrial and Codes Committee.

The State Factory Investigating Commission and Abram I. Elkus, its counsel, recognizing the tremendous sentiment against the legislation as it affected low buildings—those of four, five and six stories—immediately co-operated with the real estate interests, and several conferences were held between the special committe of the board, the counsel of the State Factory Investigating Commission and the Industrial Board. The result of these conferences was that the amendments were finally passed on March 27, the day that the Legislature adjourned. The Governor has now signed both bills.

Great credit is due to the committee of three having charge of this legislation, as well as to the Industrial and Building Codes Committee. Alfred R. Kirkus and William P. Bannister also worked hard for the Real Estate Board to accomplish the desired results, as did also Alfred E. Smith, Democratic leader of the Assembly, and the Hon. Robert F. Wagner, majority leader of the Senate. In this connection it is of interest to real estate owners to know that Mr. Kirkus has been placed on one or two committees by the Industrial Board, and from now on the Real Estate Board is to be represented in all matters of importance that come up before the Industrial Board. Special credit is also due to Mr. E. A. Tredwell, who has always taken a profound interest in this phase of the board's work, both during his term as president of the board, and more recently as a member of the Fire Hazards Committee of the Industrial Board.

The Industrial Board, consisting of Maurice Wertheim, Pauline Goldmark, Richard J. Cullen and Charles C. Flaesch, is doing everything it can fairly to interpret the laws, and it is thought that this board will be practical in all of its interpretations of the law.

The amendments secured not only relieve the owners of buildings five stories or less in height from costly structural charges, but place the responsibility for proper ventilation, etc., in factories upon the tenant, instead of the owner. The following are the amendments:

Senate Bill Print. 1670 Int. 1223:

Fire escapes can be used as a required means of exit on buildings of five stories or less in height, except when in the opinion of the Industrial Board they do not furnish adequate means of escape from fire.

Fire escapes on buildings over five stories in height may be used as the required means of exit, when in the opinion of the Industrial Board they can be safely used.

Interior stairways, serving as a required means of exit, do not have to be enclosed in buildings of five stories or less in height, unless the Industrial Board, because of conditions, deems it necessary.

Window frames and sashes can be covered with metal instead of being of metal.

Senate Bill Print. 1670 Int. 1224:

These amendments are summarized as follows:

Openings in elevators and hoistways can be provided with a gate of suitable height instead of a 6 ft. gate as formerly required.

Fire-escapes erected on buildings constructed before Oct. 1, 1913, of five stories or less in height, need not comply with the new laws as to the cutting down of openings to the floor and the construction of such openings are to be governed by the present law applicable to fire escapes.

Persons operating factories are now compelled to look after the ventilation instead of the owner.

Persons operating factories are now compelled to provide dressing and emergency rooms instead of the owner.

Water closets may have suitable ducts leading to the outer air, as well as windows.

A Hearing Called.

The New York State Factory Investigating Commission, of which Senator Wagner is chairman, will give its first public hearing of the present year at City Hall next Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock.

A series of questions have been submitted to property owners concerning the fire hazard in mercantile establishments, so as to guide the commission in drafting its recommendations. Among the questions asked are these:

1. Shall all vertical openings between floors be enclosed in fireproof partitions, or partitions of fire-resisting materials, and all openings from these enclosures to the various floors be protected by self-closing, fireproof doors or windows?

2. How many required means of exit shall there be from every floor of a building used as a mercantile establishment? What types of exits shall be accepted as required exits?

5. Shall all doors in buildings used for mercantile purposes open outward or be double swinging doors?

6. Shall doors from all interior rooms which are used as workrooms or from any interior room, where more than five persons are permitted, open outward or be double swinging doors?

7. Shall revolving doors be allowed at any entrance?

8. Shall the width of the hallways, vestibules and required exit doors leading therefrom to the street be not less than the aggregate width of all stairways and exits leading to them?

9. What provisions shall be adopted for adequate and sufficient exit facilities in existing and future mercantile establishments based upon area, height of building, number of occupants, etc.?

10. What special provisions shall be made for exits from the main floor.

11. Is it practicable to limit the number of occupants in mercantile establishments in accordance with the exit facilities provided? If so, on what basis should this be done?

12. In what classes of mercantile buildings should an automatic sprinkler system be required?

14. Shall the open floor area between fire walls be limited?

NEW LAWS TO RELIEVE REAL ESTATE BURDEN

Recording Taxes Can Be Saved by Assigning Mortgages—Brooklyn and Queens Plead for Favorable Railroad Legislation.

DURING the week Governor Glynn signed all but one of the New York City bills remaining on his desk. Among these were a number of bills which Mayor Mitchel had approved. Altogether, ninety-four city bills were passed by the Legislature and the Mayor fifty-six.

The two bills of first importance contained amendments to the factory laws which relieve low buildings from the operation of the new fireproofing requirements, and also relieve owners from the responsibility of providing ventilation, dressing rooms and emergency rooms, and placing the responsibility on the operators of the factory.

Assignment of Mortgages.

Gov. Glynn has signed the bill affecting borrowers on real estate, which provides that mortgagees on the expiration of mortgages must assign them to others if that is the desire of the owner of property involved. In other words, by this law, if a person owns a piece of property on which he has borrowed from a title company and, on the mortgage falling due the title company refuses to extend or renew it, he can go to another company, get it to take the mortgage and, by paying the amount to the original lender, have the mortgage assigned to the second company. The idea of this is to save recording taxes to the borrower and to protect him from other costs. This is the wording of the measure:

"Whenever a mortgage upon real property shall be due and payable the mortgagee or the owner and holder of the mortgage shall execute and deliver to any person or persons, or corporation, named by the owner of the land upon which the same is a lien, an assignment of the mortgage, duly executed, which may, by its terms, be without recourse to the assignor in any event, and discharge such assignor from any liability thereunder to the assignee; provided a demand has been made of the holder of the mortgage by the owner of the land upon which the same is a lien for such assignment, in lieu of a certificate of discharge of the same, and the full amount of principal and interest due on the mortgage and the usual fee for drawing the assignment is tendered or paid."

New Banking Law.

The Governor signed the Griffen bill, which amends Section 295 of the penal law by prohibiting the reception of any deposit by an officer or employee transacting any banking business as a banking corporation when such corporation is insolvent. This law becomes Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1914.

The Governor signed the McClelland bill (Senate Int. 944), giving the Commissioner of Docks and Ferries power to make rules and regulations for the government of his department, as heretofore he has had to obtain special authority by means of an ordinance whenever he desired to make a new regulation.

Mayor Mitchel on Wednesday afternoon gave consideration to the act before him for approval that will amend the transportation corporation law (Introductory No. 1138, Senate No. 1305), in relation to the ownership or control of stock and bonds of freight terminal companies by certain corporations and joint stock associations. Appearing against the act were Frank S. Gardner, secretary of the New York Board of Trade and Transportation, and W. E. Youker, secretary of the Citizens' Union, William Liebermann, chairman of the Industrial Committee of the Brooklyn League, appeared in favor of the measure.

Transportation Corporation Law.

The appeal exempts Brooklyn and Queens from the general act passed by the Senate and Assembly, prohibiting railroads from owning stock and bonds of freight terminal companies. The idea is to safeguard the harbor facilities against monopoly of the railroads upon the completion of the Barge and the Panama canals.

Mr. Gardner outlined the history of the measure, pointing out that if the appeal is approved and goes to the Governor for signature 248 miles of Brooklyn and Queens water front will be under the virtual control of railroad corporation. He besought the Mayor to weigh the whole question carefully in the light of the possible effect such an approval would have upon the welfare of the business and realty interests of the entire city, but especially to Brooklyn and Queens.

Mr. Youker ventured the opinion that if the bill became operative, there was no law that would prevent the exemption being made applicable to Manhattan and other boroughs through possible ownership of terminal stock in holding companies in Manhattan.

Mr. Liebermann in pleading for the Mayor's approval of the act feared that if this bill was not signed all the years of study and planning devoted to the commercial, residential and industrial welfare of Brooklyn and Queens would be set at nought and that it would stifle much of the progress that has been made in the past. He said that Brooklyn and Queens were straining at the leash for the right to proceed and develop, but that this development has been hampered because the railroads would not invest money in undertakings of such doubtful constitutionality. He said the exemption was made to encourage the railroads which now had the key to the situation to come in and open up Queens and Brooklyn to its commercial and industrial possibilities.

During the week Chairman Edward E. McCall, of the Public Service Commission, issued a statement criticising the action of Mayor John Purroy Mitchel in vetoing the bill, which had been favored by the commission, amending the Rapid Transit Act. The chairman stated that the Mayor's veto would undoubtedly be pleasing to the Contractors' Association, as that association, so far as he knew, was the only body to oppose the bill, either in Albany or before the Mayor. The proposed bill clothed the commission with power to do actual construction work on the new rapid transit lines, in the event of this becoming necessary by reason of some contractor not being able to perform the whole of his contract. It also raised the amount from $10,000 to $25,000, for which the commission could let contracts without formal competitive bidding. Before doing any work under either amendment it would have been necessary for the commission to secure the consent of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, and in this manner the consent of the Mayor would be necessary, as he is a member of that Board.

Water Bill Vetoed.

News of the action of Governor Glynn in vetoing the Foley-Maier water bill was received with great satisfaction all over Queens, and especially in the Second Ward. The provisions of the bill that appear to have impressed the Governor most unfavorably are those that virtually prevented the city introducing the Catskill system, where a private company already exists. This would be unjust to the taxpayers who have paid for the construction of the Catskill system.

Smokeproof Towers.

Woodruff Leeming, past president of Brooklyn Chapter, American Institute of Architects, is a great believer in the efficacy of smokeproof towers as a life-saving device. Every new factory should have at least one, he advises, as open fire-escapes have proved time and again to be useless because of the smoke pouring out of the lower floors and cutting off those above, and interior fireproof stairs offer the same objection, as the doors, though fireproof and self-closing, must be kept open for an appreciable length of time, thus causing a draught and filling the upper flights of stairs with smoke.

—The subject of exclusive agency is interesting the real estate brokers of Westchester County, and steps are being taken to have this method generally adopted there. In the smaller cities this method of marketing property is very generally followed, and it is contended that it would be.

—There were 7,336 real estate conveyances and 5,439 mortgages filed in the Bronx last year, the latter totalling over $38,000,000. Fifteen miles of streets were graded and nearly fourteen miles were paved.

—The cost of living is declining, Bradstreet's index figure for April 1 being 8.7562, against 9.2976 a year ago. The declines in commodity prices were greatest in food products.

UNIVERSITY HEIGHTS A HOME COLONY

Builders Find Demand For Apartment Houses, and Vacancies Are Scarce—Educational Institutions Exert Refining Influence on District.

UNIVERSITY HEIGHTS section of the Bronx is destined to become a high-class residential section with detached dwellings and modern apartment houses, the prevailing type of construction. From the point of view of a builder who figured prominently for many years in the private house development of that portion of the Bronx, an architect who designed a great many buildings on University Heights, an investor and a local real estate broker, the probable growth will be along these lines.

That district bounded by 181st street, 183d street, University avenue, and Sedgwick avenue, with the exception of about five lots, is restricted until 1940 to private houses and has been improved in recent years with residences ranging in price from $14,000 to $40,000. There has been no particular apartment house construction, although William Evans built, about two years ago, just north of this restricted territory, a row of four-story apartments, and the Gaines & Roberts Company erected similar structures, which are fully rented for prices ranging as high as $8.50 a room. On Sedgwick avenue, adjoining the restricted area, the Colonial Holding Company erected about four years ago from plans by Andrew J. Thomas, apartment houses which are bringing to the owners as high as $10 a room, an exceedingly high rental, considering the location, but justified by the character of the surroundings and the type of construction. Similar structures are being erected at St. James Park and 193d street, Aqueduct avenue and 190th street. Others having been recently completed at Aqueduct avenue, corner Fordham road, and at Fordham road and Valentine avenue. A ten-story apartment hotel is contemplated at the northwest corner of Morris avenue and Fordham road, consisting of one, two and three-room suites with all modern improvements, including kitchenettes, etc.

Character of Construction.

The chief characteristic of University Heights has not been extensive apartment house construction, but rather the high class detached dwelling. William C. Bergen built about two years ago a row of residences on University avenue, from 181st to 183d streets, nearly all of which were sold from the plans; one house was recently bought by District Attorney Francis Martin, of the Bronx, for his own occupancy. That University Heights will retain its residential character and will continue to attract the same class of buyers is probable.

The refining influences of New York University, with its many stately buildings, and the presence of a number of educational and other institutions such as the Webb Academy and Home for Shipbuilders, Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum, Hebrew Infant Asylum, St. James' Episcopal Church, the University Heights Presbyterian Church, and the Church of St. Nicholas of Lolentine, all tend to offset the invasion of influences usually detrimental to residential property. This fact, coupled with the natural high elevation and the present and proposed transit facilities, aid in strengthening the opinion that University Heights will retain its residential character. A station of the New York Central Railroad places the district within twenty minutes of the Grand Central Station, and a number of cross-town trolley lines connect with 181st street subway station on the west side and the West Farms station on the east side. Other trolley lines place University Heights in touch with all sections of Westchester and the Bronx, including the shopping and theatrical center at 149th street. The continuation of the subway along Jerome avenue when operated will place University Heights in the five-cent zone and put the whole section in close touch with the entire city.

Opinion of a Builder.

William C. Bergen, the builder, said this week: "To-day University Heights is the only exclusive residential section of the Bronx, principally on account of its proximity to New York University and the restricted area on University avenue. The territory south of the University has not been particularly active in recent years, but is now ripe for improvement with either private houses or high class apartment houses. The fact that there is not a single vacant apartment in those structures recently erected between Washington Bridge and Fordham road shows that builders of such properties have been highly successful.

"The beauty of the distance is not marred by the small, unsightly buildings characteristic of many of the other sections of the borough. The older structures retain the same new up-to-date appearance that make the recently constructed buildings so attractive. I know of no other section of the Bronx which offers more possibilities than University Heights, particularly that district lying north of Washington Bridge and south of Fordham road."

Andrew J. Thomas, the architect, is another firm believer in the future of University Heights as a residential center. "The section," he said, "is particularly well adapted for residential purposes, not only on account of its high elevation but on account of its unusual scenic beauty. The fact that such excellent conditions prevail in those apartment houses already built proves that the speculative builder has an excellent opportunity in the construction of buildings of a similar type. With municipal improvements installed, the Jerome avenue subway in sight, and even the contour of the ground inviting in itself, it offers in my mind a most excellent field for the erection of either up-to-date apartment houses or high class detached dwellings."

Activity Anticipated.

Henry U. Singhi anticipated a revival of building activity on account of the proposed subway extension which will be put in operation in a short time. He expressed the opinion that Fordham road with a subway station at Jerome avenue would become the business hub of that portion of the Bronx. Mr. Singhi recently erected a two-story taxpayer at the northeast corner of Jerome avenue and Morris avenue, and adjoining it a 2-story moving picture theatre. Similar taxpayers are being erected in the immediate vicinity.

No More Private Houses.

"Private house construction is a thing of the past throughout the University Heights section of the West Bronx," said H. Nelson McLernon, of McLernon Brothers, real estate brokers, last week. "Builders who erected this type of house a few years ago were able to dispose of their product to advantage upon completion and very often from their plans. With the increase in land values which have occurred during the past few years, they found that they could not obtain so ready a market at the increased price this necessitated and either turned to new fields where land values were lower or went into the construction of apartment houses. Owing to the fact that there have been no new houses erected, the owners of the existing private residences are able to demand and obtain a very good price for their properties when they wish to sell.

"Builders who entered the apartment house field have been very successful. High class houses have been erected on University avenue, Andrews avenue, Loring place and Sedgwick avenue. These houses rented quickly and to a most desirable class of yearly tenants. There are now several new operations under way which will be ready for the autumn season. The average obtained runs from seven to ten dollars per room.

"It should not be hard to conceive the wonderful growth of this west side of the Bronx upon completion of the Jerome avenue extension of the Lexington avenue subway route. In addition to operating subway trains on this line, there is to be a connection with the Sixth and Ninth avenue elevated roads, for the operation of whose trains trackage rights were reserved in the agreement made with the Interborough company. We predict and anticipate that a building movement greater than that which occurred on Washington Heights or in the Hunts Point section will ensue with the completion and operation of this new transit line. University Heights, being the choicest of the property affected, will naturally be one of the first sections in which the development will show itself."

Will Test the Market.

Whether the general public is in a receptive mood for investments in real estate ripe for development or not, will doubtless be determined on next Tuesday, when Joseph P. Day and J. Clarence Davies will offer 134 lots in the University Heights section of West Bronx. The land, the property of the heirs of the estate of Ellen M. Hennessy, is to be sold without reserve. Some of the heirs wanted to hold the land for sentimental reasons, it having been an heirloom for nearly half a century, while others insisted upon a sale, even though the lots might not bring as much as under more favorable market conditions.

The Hennessy lots adjoin the grounds of New York University and are accessible to lower Manhattan via the Harlem and Putnam divisions of the New York Central Railroad, the West and East side elevated lines, the existing subway and a comprehensive system of trolley lines. The Jerome avenue subway will have a station at Burnside avenue.

Last of Grand Union Hotel.

Next Saturday will witness the closing of the Grand Union Hotel, occupying the block front in the east side of Park avenue, between 41st and 42d streets. The property was condemned by the Public Service Commission in order to facilitate the construction of the subway system connecting the Fourth and Lexington avenues routes and title will be taken by the city as soon as a commission can determine the value of the property, which has been roughly estimated to be worth $3,500,000.

The closing of the hotel will mark the passage of another famous hostelry in this section of the city. Several well known hotels in the district between 17th and 42nd streets have been closed down during the last few years to make way for modern loft and office buildings. In all probability the city will resell the Grand Union Hotel property, subject to a subway easement, as soon as the system is constructed.

—The Merchants' Association of New York has adopted a resolution condemning the proposed increase in the weight limit of the parcel post to one hundred pounds.

FIRE PREVENTION AND PROTECTION

American Institute of Architects and Board of Fire Underwriters Cooperate in Order to Protect Property Owner Against Conflagrations.

IN order to disseminate among architects, builders and property owners an outline of the main points in the science of fire prevention and protection, and to indicate where detailed information of these important subjects may easily be obtained, a pamphlet has been issued regarding fire insurance requirements.* The New York Chapter of the American Institute of Architects, represented by Julius Franke, of Maynicke & Franke, architects, and the New York Board of Fire Underwriters, represented by F. J. T. Stewart, have cooperated in this matter not only that the property owner may thereby be benefited in regard to his insurance, but also to stimulate the adoption of higher standards of construction and equipment. It is hardly necessary to call the attention of technical men to the enormous fire waste of our country, amounting to more than two hundred million dollars annually.

Broadly speaking, there are six important considerations which enter into the "hazard" in fire insurance, and likewise in the science of fire prevention and protection, namely:

Exposure to Fire From Without.

The architect may have little to do with this, as the site is generally chosen before he is called in. The exposure depends upon the width of streets or courts, the space between the new buildings and the neighboring buildings, and the nature of such neighboring buildings.

This hazard may be reduced, however, if the building is planned without openings facing the danger, or if wired glass windows (1), shutters, doors (2) and skylights (11) facing such exposure furnish standard protection. Outside sprinklers (3) and fire hydrants (4) can also be provided to reduce the danger.

Construction of the Building.

The hazard here is affected by the materials and workmanship entering into the construction, wall thickness and strength. An approved Building Code is generally utilized by the Underwriters in judging the adequacy of wall thicknesses and the strength of materials.

Structural steel members are required to be thoroughly covered with fire resistive material; as terra cotta, brick, concrete or other approved material of adequate thickness. The material and workmanship should also be of such that, in case of fire, a powerful hose stream will not destroy the protection and expose the steel to the flame.

The National Fire Protection Association at its annual convention in May, 1913, adopted regulations for a "Standard Fire Resistive Building of the Highest Type" (6). This standard is for a building that would resist a temperature of 2,000° Fahrenheit for four hours without material injury to its structural parts. Although impractical to erect all buildings as prescribed by this document, it is, nevertheless, an ideal that can be approached in any building at least in part. A suggested building ordinance especially intended for small towns and villages (5) was also adopted in 1913 and treats especially of protection for the "non-fireproof" buildings.

*In the appendix appears a list of standards issued by the National Board of Fire Underwriters, many of which are recommendations of the National Fire Protection Association. In the design of new buildings it will be helpful to consult the Underwriters if the cost of fire insurance is considered. The numerals appearing in this pamphlet in parenthesis ( ) refer to the number opposite the standards listed in the appendix.

The hazard here includes questions of height, area, the location of fire stops, facilities for the escape of the occupants and facilities for access for firemen. The height of a building seriously affects its insurance, because, beyond a certain height the Fire Departments cannot be depended upon, for the present at least, for effective work.

Plan of the Building.

It is evident also that the larger the area the greater the danger of fire getting beyond control. When the area of any floor exceeds 5,000 square feet the insurance cost is generally higher. Fire stops are provided to decrease the area.

For the purpose of allowing communication between the various areas in a horizontal direction and between the floors in a vertical direction, doors (2) are provided which should be standard.

Of other elements included in plan and construction are the electric wiring (7) and fittings (8), protection against lightning (10), whether the building be fire resistive or mill construction (13) and windows of wired glass with metal frames (1). Special standards have also been adopted for the construction of railway car houses (12) and for gravity tanks (31).

Fire Extinguishing Equipment.

The hazard here is affected by the character of the protective apparatus, either stationary or movable, such as sprinklers (3), standpipes (14), pumps (15), valves (18), water supply, hand extinguishers, watchman's clock, fire drills (29), fire alarms (16), hose (17), etc., all designed to extinguish fire in its incipient stage.

The Nature of the Occupancy.

The consideration of this hazard includes these points: Whether the merchandise and temporary fixtures are combustible or not, whether explosives or highly inflammable materials are stored, whether there are few or many employes, the nature of the work being done, whether or not the place is kept clean, whether or not the fire extinguisher apparatus is kept in order, and whether or not the special mechanism or apparatus being used is standard and properly taken care of. Gas machines (19) and engines (20), incubators and brooders (22), kerosene oil pressure systems (23), oxy-acetylene heating and welding apparatus (24), waste cans and ash cans (25), films (26), oil storage (27) and gasolene stoves for cooking (28) are all, if improperly installed, hazards of this nature.

The danger of fire due to carelessness or viciousness on the part of the owner, is commonly known among Underwriters as the moral hazard. It is quite distinct from the physical hazard, but a careful investigation of the moral hazard is essential in insurance.

Public Fire Protection.

This part of the hazard which depends on the efficiency of municipal departments—notably the Fire, Water and Building Departments, has an important bearing on the fire loss and consequently the cost of insurance. Architects, builders and property owners can exert an important influence in fire prevention by encouraging the enactment of adequate laws on these subjects and insisting on an efficient administration of such laws (30).

NEW ARBITRATION PLAN.

How Amicable Relations Are Maintained in the Building Trades.

For several months a plan of settling jurisdictional disputes has been in vogue in the building trades of Greater New York and Long Island that is proving both expeditious and satisfactory. Since 1908 there has been no general arbitration agreement, but the essential principles that were contained in the plan of 1903 have persisted in the separate trades since the general board was dissolved and have served to keep the trades comparatively free from strikes and lockouts. An informal plan now being followed dispenses with local formalities and brings the question at issue directly to the attention of the higher powers.

Under this plan it is now the custom for the Emergency Committee of the Building Trades Employers' Association to meet in conference a committee from the Executive Council of the United Board of Business Agents, when, if there be any complaint on file from either a general contractor, subcontractor or trade union, because of any alleged unfairness, the complaint is heard at once, testimony taken d decision rendered. Two disputes of a jurisdictional nature over work on the Lord & Taylor building were quickly settled in this way.

So effectual have these conferences proved in preserving amiable relations, that it is now proposed that there shall be created a permanent joint committee, to consist of five employers and five union men, with delegated power to settle jurisdictional disputes when regularly presented for arbitration. A jurisdictional dispute is one arising over a question as to which of two trades is entitled to do certain work. Final action on the joint-committee plan has not yet been taken.

Before the general arbitration pact was signed, upon the conclusion of the great labor war of 1903, strikes and lockouts were of frequent occurrence. A large percentage of unnecessary cost of building operations was a consequence. During the five years which have passed since the closing of the general arbitration court even fewer strikes have occurred than during the five preceding years when the court was sitting. This is accounted for by the fact that the respective rights of employers and journeymen were so clearly defined in the decisions handed down by General Arbitration Board, that these decisions, with the principles on which they were founded, have continued to be recognized as standards of conduct in the trades. The good work of the Arbitration Board lives after it. Samuel B. Donnelly, late U. S. Public Printer, and former Secretary of the Arbitration Board, is now executive secretary of the Building Trades Employers' Association; and Roswell D. Tompkins is secretary of the United Board of Business Men; both are trained men in labor administration affairs. Should a general revival of building operations come this year, as hoped for, it is very certain that real estate operators and investors can safely continue to omit from their calculations such contingencies as labor strikes.

SUBWAY PROGRESS.

Two More Sections Put Under Contract—More Difficult Work Ahead.

The contract for building Section 1, of Route 33, of the new rapid transit railroad has been awarded to Booth & Flinn (Ltd.), the lowest bidders, for $2,059,182. Section No. 1 connects the new Broadway subway with the proposed East River tunnel to Montague street, Brooklyn, and runs from Trinity place and Morris street mainly through Whitehall street to South street, Manhattan. It will be a two-track line, with a station in Whitehall street extending from State street to Bridge street, for operation by the New York Municipal Railway Corporation. During the week the Commission also awarded the contract for Section No. 1 of Routes Nos. 4 and 38, the Seventh avenue subway in Manhattan, for operation by the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, to the Rapid Transit Construction Co., for $2,121,077. Section No. 1 begins under Battery Park and extends northerly to Greenwich street and Vesey street, where it will connect with Section No. 2. This section will be a two-track line, and at the Battery Park end it will connect with the existing subway.

The commission is advertising for bids, to be received May 12, 12:15 p. m., for the construction of Section 2 of Route No. 20, the Canal street cross-town subway in Manhattan, for operation by the New York Municipal Railway Corporation. This subway will connect the tracks coming over the Manhattan Bridge from the Fourth avenue subway and the Brighton Beach lines with the Broadway subway in Manhattan. This line will be the key of the whole Brooklyn rapid transit system. There will only be one station, which will extend from Centre street to near Broadway. This will be a general transfer point, where passengers coming from lines crossing the Williamsburgh Bridge may transfer to the Broadway subway and vice versa. The station will also have stairway communication with the Canal street station of the Centre street loop subway.

Owing to the depth of the line and the swampy character of the ground in this vicinity, the engineers of the commission have prepared two alternative plans. One method of construction is the usual "cut and cover" method, in which sheet piling will be driven on either side of the structure and the excavation made from within the pillage. The other type of construction calls for both the usual "cut and cover" method and for tunnel construction methods. There are to be two cast iron, concrete-lined tunnels, each large enough to contain one track, which are to be constructed by compressed aid methods, using a shield which is advanced from one end, the same as in the construction of river tunnels.

The Public Service Commission has adopted plans and contract forms for the two tunnels under the East river from lower Manhattan. The commission will advertise for bids at once, and will open proposals May 22. Provision will be made for any contractor to bid on one tunnel or both. The work in the construction of these tunnels will be the most difficult and expensive in the dual system. Each will have two circular cast iron tubes, one for each track, and will be built by the shield method. The total expenditures for these tunnels will range from $12,000,000 to $16,000,000.

Historic Duane Street Station Is Passing Out of Existence.

One of New York City's electrical landmarks, which had its origin in the mind of Thomas A. Edison and was developed under his skillful guidance, is about to pass out of existence, into the discard of things which have passed their day of usefulness. The old Edison generating station at Duane, Elm and Pearl streets, which is being vacated by the company, is of historical importance in the annals of electricity, for the experiments and developments worked out there have been adopted the world over.

Mr. Edison gave to New York the first large electric lighting system in the world, worked out by himself and now bearing his name. The Duane street station, which was built in 1891, was then held to be a wonderful achievement, says the Electrical Review—a show place which engineers came from everywhere to see. They laughed as they compared it with its predecessor, the Pearl street station, in which Edison used to sleep all night during the period of its construction. The comparison between the half-million-horsepower Waterside generating station of today and the Duane street station of that day is just as startling.

The general offices of the company have been moved to Irving place, and placards on the building advertise floors to rent.

RESIDENCE AT MIAMI FOR JAMES DEERING.

F. Burrall Hofman, Architect.

THE new residence, which James Deering, Esq., of Chicago, has just contracted for, will be located about two miles south of the town of Miami, Florida, and will be one of the finest private residences in that section of the country, as well as one unique in many respects. The architect is F. Burrall Hoffman, Jr., of 17 East 40th street, Manhattan, and the building will be erected under his supervision. It will have a height of two stories, with a basement above ground and two towers. The dimensions of the building are about 120 by 120 feet, with a 60-ft courtyard in the center. The grounds will be beautifully laid out with terraces in two tiers, with shrubbery and flower beds.

The facades will be of stucco facing on concrete, with a trim of native cut stone and a special mission tile roof. The first floor is arranged for nine rooms, with an especially large reception hall and library. On the second floor are seven master bedrooms and two salons, each with private baths. There will be rooms for about fifteen servants, with baths connecting. The equipment includes an automatic electric passenger elevator, electric dumbwaiter and car controller service elevator of Otis make, an ice-making plant, gas plant, vacuum cleaners, indirect steam heating system, electric plant, sewage disposal system, bowling alleys, a salt-water swimming pool and a pipe organ.

The George Sykes Company, of 314 East 34th street, Manhattan, has the contract to erect the building, exclusive of the interior which will not be awarded before next autumn. Excavating is to start about May 1.

The first of May was in former years, before arbitration became the rule, a time of trouble in the building trades; but the times have changed, men have changed with them, and an entirely different order of things prevails.

War times have usually been good times for general business in this country. Coincident with the breaking out of the late war with Spain the long financial depression following the panic of 1893 disappeared. War is, of course, too heavy a price to pay for prosperity; but if it is inevitable, let it come.

A considerable advantage to the Tenement House and some other departments of the city will result for the time being from having the full and specific addresses of the purchasers of property made a part of the record of the conveyances, but no regulation prevents a buyer from changing his address afterward without notice to the authorities.

The Record and Guide congratulates the Real Estate Board upon the success which has rewarded its fight for an amelioration of drastic factory laws; and now that the State authorities have learned of the general public feeling on the subject, it is hoped that in their enforcement of the laws they will give fair and due consideration at all times to the rights of property.

Building operations in both Brooklyn and Queens are beginning the season at a good pace, and are considerably ahead of last year's record to date, as will be observed in our weekly statistical table. As in Brooklyn last year construction work reached nearly normal proportions, in the view of Superintendent Carlin of the Bureau of Buildings, the larger number of plans being filed there this spring is decidedly encouraging to real estate interests generally, while the builders, on their part, anticipate a good buying demand.

The Advisory Council of Real Estate Interests.

The announcement of last week that the Advisory Council of Real Estate Interests had been formed was received by real estate brokers, operators and owners with very general approval. The council has been organized for the purpose of mutual consultation and for that of public recommendations in respect to legislation, municipal ordinances, and all other matters affecting real property. Its plan of action is broad and is based upon the lessons learned from the failure of previous attempts at general real estate organization. There is no intention of adding to the number of existing associations. The object matter is to strengthen the prevailing local and trade organizations by bringing about their co-operation for common purposes. The committee consists consequently of representatives of the strongest and most useful existing societies, together with some few members at large, selected because of their ability, public spirit and high standing in the community.

It includes such men as John Claflin, Charles A. Peabody, Clarence H. Kelsey, Cyrus C. Miller, Frederick B. Platt, Albert G. Milbank, Alfred E. Marling, and others. The effectual influence of such a committee depends, of course, largely upon the personal influence of its members, and it is, consequently, very fortunate in securing the assistance of so many strong men. It remains to be seen whether it will constitute a better method of organizing the real estate interests than those which have already been tried. Our own guess would be that its value will depend entirely upon the intelligent and persistent activity of its constituent members. The work of such a committee cannot be performed by a paid secretary. The members will have to attend the regular meetings and give a good deal of time and attention to the work. If they will give the necessary time, they are bound to exercise an ameliorative influence both upon public policy and upon public opinion.

It is particularly encouraging that such a committee should be formed, not during an emergency, but during a period of comparative legislative and administrative inactivity. It is the result, apparently of a real and lively sense of the adverse effect on real estate of the present disorganized condition of its owners. Its work should be watched with solicitude by the property owners of New York, and its advice should be followed whenever it is necessary for the real estate interests to combine for a common purpose.

What the Tax Commission Can Do.

Another advisory committee has also been formed, whose work may have a beneficent effect upon real estate interests. The Mayor has appointed a commission to study the systems of local taxation here and abroad, and to report upon any changes which may be desirable in the existing methods of taxing real estate and personal property. This commission is, of course, the result of the attempt to increase the land tax made during the last session of the Legislature. Its object fundamentally is to study the economic questions involved by such an increase. At present grave divergence of opinion exists as to its probable effect. The tax reformers expect very much more from the increase in land taxation than the majority of economists are willing to grant. The matter needs, consequently, to be investigated, for the purpose, if possible, of reaching an agreement upon the facts.

It is not to be supposed that the commission will be able to agree to recommend a particular method of dealing with the problem, but it should be able to supply the information needed by intelligent men in making up their minds on this important matter. Every humane man cannot help but sympathize with this attempt of the tax reformers to diminish congestion, and to place the poor people within reach of cheaper land. The question is whether the increased land tax will produce any such results without the help of improved transit; and as soon as means of transit have been improved, would the increased land tax serve to increase its social efficacy?

Why Districting Is Necessary.

The United Real Estate Owners' Associations have decided to oppose both in and outside of the courts the attempt to establish zones within which buildings of a certain class only can be erected. It is natural that they should assume an attitude of resolute opposition to the placing of limitations upon the right of a real estate owner to build upon his property the kind of structure most satisfactory to himself, but the Record and Guide suspects that in the course of time their opposition to the establishment of zones will disappear, just as their opposition to the restriction to the height of buildings has disappeared. Time was when practically all real estate owners regarded the limitation of the height of buildings as an unwarranted interference by the city with individual rights. But little by little it has been clearly proved that the lack of building restrictions injures far more property owners and much more property than it benefits.

The members of the United Real Estate Owners' Associations are themselves now in favor of restriction, and inasmuch as they have committed themselves to restriction, they should bear in mind that restriction can be made both more effective and less injurious to individual interests in case it is united with the zone system. A method of restriction which is applied rigidly to a city in which local conditions vary as widely as they do in New York, is necessarily a compromise which permits certain property owners to build higher than is desirable and prevents others from building as high as they might very well be allowed to build. The report of the Heights of Buildings Commission showed clearly that the rule governing building heights should be adjusted to local conditions. But an adjustable rule implies in practice the establishment of zones; and real estate owners will find that this zone system will in the long run benefit them in the same way as will a restriction of the height of buildings. Its effect will be to give a desirable stability to real estate conditions and so prevent those fluctuations in the use of neighborhoods and in the price of property, which is just as often a source of loss to the property owner as a source of gain.

The Central Terminal District?

The removal of St. Bartholomew's Church to Park avenue will have an extremely good effect on the future of that avenue immediately north of the station. So far the efforts of the management of the New York Central Railroad Company to lease the building sites over its tracks to public institutions have proved to be a failure. The directors of the Metropolitan Opera House have definitely decided to remain where they are. The Fine Arts Building, which was to be erected near the station, has been abandoned. The only association of any prominence that is building on New York Central property is the Yale Club, and it seems improbable that any other club will follow its example. One cannot help wondering, consequently, how and when the blocks immediately north of the station will be improved. Either the railroad company will have to change its policy and permit the erection of commercial or residential buildings, or else the property will go unimproved for a long time. The removal of St. Bartholomew's to Park avenue will, however, help the situation by distinctly improving that part of the avenue. It will not only get rid of the brewery, which has always been an impediment to the building up of this neighborhood, but it will relieve the monotony of the apartment houses, which up to date are the only kind of edifice which private capital seems inclined to erect. As soon as building revives, other similar projects are likely to be announced, for there can be no doubt that the whole Central Terminal district will be one of the first to feel the effects of a revival in interest in speculative real estate operating, leasing and building.

Dangerous Building Conditions.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

With the disastrous fall of a derrick at the Equitable Building with its accompanying fatality, there is brought to mind the fact that during the last two years there have been several serious falls of building material onto the streets of the city. Fortunately none except this last fall has had fatal results. This good fortune has been due to nothing but chance, as all these falls have taken place during business hours when the streets are busy with people.

The writer has seen two of these falls of material, one being new material from the Metropolitan Tower and the other the brick ornamentation from the Western Union Building. The fall at the Metropolitan Building was that of several planks slipping from a sling load being hoisted from 24th street to the top of the tower. When about ten stories above the street, the load slipped in the sling and several planks fell out. The first plank came straight down and landed underneath the load on the south side of 24th street. The second plank rode the air on its side and sailed over to above the roof of the Madison Square Presbyterian Church, upon which it landed and rebounded to the street below. There were several pedestrians in the street at the time, none of whom would have been able to have dodged the planks had they come their way. The cause of this accident was purely carelessness on the part of the city and the man doing the hoisting, the fault of the city's to be explained later; the man's fault self-evident.

The fall of the brick corbels from the Western Union Building came without warning. The overhanging portions of the corbels broke under the weight above them and fell to the sidewalk below. Several people narrowly escaped being hit. This fall can be attributed to the carelessness on the part of the city and poor design on the part of the architect.

The fall of a girder being hoisted up the elevator shaft of the Equitable Building a few weeks after the fall of the derrick illustrated yet again the danger to which the people in the streets of New York are subjected by the erection of new buildings.

The city can be shown to be at fault when hoisted material falls into the street for allowing such hoisting to be done over the sidewalks which are open to the public. Although these sidewalks are shielded by means of heavy timbers, such shields cannot be made strong enough to withstand the force of a heavy object falling from the height of several stories. The fall of the derrick illustrated that fact. It was a wise regulation on the part of Supt. Rudolph P. Miller when he insisted that the sidewalks should be protected by heavy timber roofs; but when heavy stones and girders are being hoisted several hundred feet into the air over these sidewalks, it is a good policy to walk in the middle of the street instead of trusting to the protection of the timber tunnels.

Such hoisting should be confined inside the building lines of the lot upon which the work is being done. This would necessitate hoisting all the material up through a shaft in the middle of the building. The architect and the contractor would have to exercise some ingenuity to arrange the building in such a fashion that the hoisting would not interfere with the proper progress of the work. This is a small problem when compared with the fatal results of a fall under the present style of hoisting over the streets.

The fall of overhanging ornamentation on a building already erected can be easily prevented by forbidding and removing such overhangings. In cases where overhangs are deemed necessary such as window sills and lintels, the portion that projects beyond the wall should be a small fraction of the part embedded in the wall. For instance, a rowlock course of common brick should not project more than ½ inch for its 4 inches of depth and 8 inches of length. Ornamentation which is now effected by means of cornices and projecting ornaments, can be produced by the use of different shades and surfaces of building material. This opens up a broad field of design for the manufacturer of building material in order to avoid the montony of a smooth front to the building.

In this age of "Safety First" any trouble and expense incurred while protecting the busy and unconscious-of-danger passerby should be considered when designing the building and in estimating its cost. H. G. N.

INCOME TAX RULING.

What Is Meant by Deductible Interest? —As to Interest on Mortgages.

Questions have been raised as to the proper construction of the provisions of the Income Tax Law relating to deductions which corporations, especially corporations formed to buy and sell real estate, may make on account of interest paid on indebtedness. The provisions of the act permit a deduction on this account, but, just exactly what it is, neither the Act nor the General Regulations issued in January, 1914, make clear. Articles 113 and 148 of the General Regulations deal with this subject, but they give no formula which determines whether the amount, interest on which may be deducted, is one-half of the sum of the capital stock and indebtedness or is made up in some other way.

The Treasury Department has recently adopted a construction of the Act and its own regulations, being Treasury Decision No. 1960. This decision states that in the case of a corporation having capital stock, the deductable interest is interest actually accrued and paid within the year on an amount of indebtedness not exceeding the entire capital stock outstanding at the close of the year, increased by the addition to such entire capital stock of one-half the interest bearing indebtedness outstanding at the close of the year. This gives a definite formula which differs from the previous understanding of the Act.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has therefore instructed collectors that as many corporations did not take credit in their return for the full amount of the interest deduction to which, under the foregoing ruling they are entitled, collectors are instructed to advise all such corporations that they may have filed an amended return in which they deduct the full amount of interest authorized by the law as now construed by the Treasury decision.

If assessments have been made before the receipt of amended returns, the corporations may file claims for the abatement of any excess tax by reason of their failure to deduct the full amount of interest authorized as an allowable deduction by Treasury Decision 1960.

The Treasury Department has, however, not ruled in favor of the contention of corporations dealing in real estate on another more important subject. The Act provides that deduction may be made as an expense of doing business of all interest secured and paid by the company on indebtedness wholly secured by collateral the subject of sale in ordinary business of such corporation. Real property being the subject of sale in the ordinary business of a corporation formed to deal therein, it would seem that this provision clearly authorizes the deduction by way of expense of all interest paid on mortgages by corporations of that character. This question ought to be forced to a decision in favor of real estate corporations. There is no good reason why a corporation dealing in stocks and bonds which it pledges as collateral may treat the interest on its obligations as expense, while a corporation which deals in land as its ordinary commodity, must pay income tax on its debts. WALTER LINDNER.

BARGE CANAL TERMINALS.

At the hearing before State Engineer Bensel and Borough President Connolly, held yesterday afternoon in the Borough Hall, Long Island City, regarding the selection of Barge Canal terminals on Dutch Kills Creek, Hallets Cove, Bowery Bay and Flushing Creek, recommended by the Chamber of Commerce of the Borough of Queens, Walter I. Willis, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce of Queens, spoke in favor of the projects.

In the arguments presented by Mr. Willis facts showing the industrial growth of Queens and a comparison of its rank with other cities in the State were made. The following table shows the increase in manufacturing in Queens Borough for the past fifteen years:

Year	Value of Products	No. of Factories
1904	92,941,000	513
1914 (Est.)	225,000,000	1,050

It was also pointed out that the value of manufactured products in Queens Borough for the year 1909—the last official Census taken by the Department of Commerce and Labor of the United States—was as great as the combined products of the cities of Syracuse, Utica, Amsterdam, Schenectady, Troy and Albany. In fact, for that year Queens was exceeded by only the Borough of Manhattan and Brooklyn and by Buffalo. The following table gives a comparison of the value of products in Queens Borough and the principal cities along the Barge Canal for the year 1909:

City	Value of Products	No. of Factories
Queens Borough	$151,680,000	771
Rochester	112,676,000	1,103
Yonkers	59,334,000	158
Syracuse	49,444,000	738
Bronx Borough	42,000,000	931
Schenectady	38,165,000	134
Troy	37,980,000	363
Utica	21,199,000	317
Albany	22,826,000	395
Amsterdam	22,449,000	97
Niagara Falls	28,652,000	156

Complete information is now being tabulated by the Chamber of Commerce, of just what articles and amounts will be shipped and received via the Barge Canal by the various factories throughout the borough.

Railroad Improvements Helping Real Estate.

Although the railroad situation throughout the country is not particularly cheering in its outlook to investors, the Long Island Railroad, which is not a trunk line and depends for its primary profits on heavy summer passenger traffic and all-year suburban business is an anomaly in American railroad conditions. The traffic of the road is steadily increasing, physical improvements are constantly being made and the rolling stock is being added to and modernized.

There are no large centers on Long Island except Brooklyn, Jamaica, Long Island City and Flushing; and, all of them except Brooklyn, are in Queensborough. Here another anomaly presents itself.

The Long Island Railroad did not make its vast terminal or union station improvement at Jamaica for the purpose of handling Queens traffic, but with the object of providing sufficient track facilities for the handling of trains bound to and from points east of the city line where growth of population is extensive. This is evident to any observer who stands in the Jamaica station and observes the arrival and departure of trains.

There has been, during the last twelve months, a marked increase in train service on all divisions of the road.

All of this salutary railroad condition is reflected in the general real estate situation. Each is correlative of the other. Long Island was the last comparatively vacant territory available for real estate exploitation and improvement. Ten years ago there were hundreds of acres within twenty-five miles of New York awaiting development, whereas now there are practically none. Steadily the suburban area on Long Island has been extended eastward into rural territory until the demand for all year homes has extended into Suffolk.

REALTY OWNERS COMBINE.

To Consider Revision of Tax Laws.

Representatives of twenty-two real estate associations met at the Vesey street salesroom on Tuesday afternoon under the auspices of the Realty Owners of New York. It was decided that the organization should confine its activities to taxation matters. After addresses had been made by ex-Tax Commissioner Judson B. Wall, Allan Robinson, Henry Bloch and Charles H. Fuller, the following resolution was adopted: Resolved: That the chairman be authorized to appoint a committee of two from each of the boroughs of this city, to act as a standing committee for the associations affiliated with the "Realty Owners of New York," for the purpose of representing these associations before the special committee recently appointed by His Honor the Mayor to consider the revision of our tax laws, this committee to have such further power as it may deem necessary in order to oppose all legislation intended directly or indirectly to inaugurate the theory of the Sinxle Tax in the City or State of New York. The committee shall have power to enlarge its membership.

THE MORTGAGE MARKET.

More Difficult to Secure Good Mortgages in Manhattan at Satisfactory Rates.

The situation in the mortgage market is such that it is becoming more and more difficult to secure good mortgages in Manhattan yielding satisfactory rates of interest. Small guaranteed mortgages, covering properties in Brooklyn, are steadily growing in favor with the investing public. The experience of the Bond and Mortgage Guarantee Company proves that in point of safety they are fully on a par with mortgages in Manhattan and the Bronx. The percentages of the arrears of interest and taxes and the amounts under foreclosure show that these small borrowers are more prompt in their payments than the owners of larger properties in Manhattan and the Bronx. This class of lending is certainly safe if the mortgages are chosen with judgment and cared for with attention. These loans average $6,000 in amount, generally do not exceed 60 per cent. of the appraisal and are in many cases for a considerably less percentage of valuation.

Periodic Payments Recommended.

The directors of the Bond and Mortgage Guarantee Company strongly favor a change to a practice of mortgage lending which will provide for amortization or a systematic reduction of the principal of a mortgage during its term. The borrower, by making periodic payments on account of the principal during the life of the mortgage, will, at maturity, find himself in an essentially improved position. If the mortgage is called it will be replaced the more readily and fewer foreclosures will result.

In their annual report the directors express the belief that, "it is safe to say that if this practice had been generally adopted ten years ago the real estate market would not today be in so unpleasant a condition. This is a hard rule for weak holders to follow and will perhaps cut them out of the market, but everyone admits now that they should keep out of the market. They have brought about its present plight and are being eliminated by the much sterner process of foreclosure. No one should ever mortgage real estate who is not strong enough to make annual payments on account of his mortgage indebtedness."

City's Real Estate in Queens.

Thousands of dollars can be saved the taxpayers of the city by the utilization of the properties it now owns, instead of acquiring new lands, it is believed by those who favor a plan which the United Civic Associations of Queens Borough are about to consider. The subject will be considered at the next meeting of the associations, and it is likely that a resolution will be adopted suggesting that a map be prepared to show the number and dimensions of the parcels owned by the city in the borough.

Prior to consolidation the old Town of Flushing owned much property here and there in the various villages, and the villages, themselves, were in possession of many pieces. With the coming into effect of the Greater New York Charter in 1898 all of these properties became invested in the City of New York.

Taxes Due May 1.

On Friday, May 1, one-half of the real estate tax becomes a lien and all personal taxes become due. A discount at the rate of 4% per annum will be allowed on the second half of realty taxes which will become due on November 1, and which may be paid any time prior to that date, if the first half shall have been paid.

PRIVATE REALTY SALES.

PURCHASES of apartment houses presumably for investment was the only important development of the week. The more important deals involved Picken Court on Riverside Drive, and Donald Court on upper Broadway. The spring building season has brought with it comparatively little buying for improvement, although the Bronx contributed the sale of a big plot on Grand Boulevard and Concourse which is to be the site of a tall apartment house. Another interesting deal concerned a Hunts Point theatre and Columbus Circle holdings. The transactions in the main involved common place properties indicative of no particular trend or interest in any particular section of the city other than the upper West Side.

The total number of sales reported and not recorded in Manhattan this week was 28, as against 32 last week and 40 a year ago.

The number of sales south of 59th street was 12, compared with 16 last week, and 13 a year ago.

The sales north of 59th street aggregated 16, as compared with 16 last week and 27 a year ago.

The total number of conveyances in Manhattan was 165, as against 143 last week, 19 having stated considerations totaling $379,625. Mortgages recorded this week number 95, involving $2,822,764, as against 79 last week, aggregating $2,573,073.

From the Bronx 18 sales at private contract were recorded, as against 22 last week, and 17 a year ago.

The amount involved in Manhattan and Bronx auction sales this week was $1,320,170, compared with $795,400 last week, making a total since January 1 of $13,736,094. The figures for the corresponding week last year was $900,230, and the total from January 1, 1913, to April 26, 1913, was $19,982,056.

Spring Cleaning Is Here

Now is the time to forestall the Particular Tenant, the One whose money is always prompt, who takes care of the property but who wants an artistic, flat tone on the walls—who would, in a word, be permanently pleased with

LU-CO-FLAT

"The Dependable Flat Interior Finish" for any surface.

For Owner, Painter and Tenant, LU-CO-FLAT is the Best Wall Finish ever put on the market.

It is a ready-mixed, hygienic wall finish that produces the popular, fashionable and attractive flat effect in the highest degree of perefection.

Tests have proved that two coats of LU-CO-FLAT have the opacity (hiding properties) of three coats of something else, supposed to be "just as good."

Water and moisture, the deadly enemies of the ordinary paints and wall finishes, have no effect on LU-CO-FLAT.

LU-CO-FLAT does not harden in the can and contains no glue, casein, paste, white lead or any harmful substance.

LU-CO-FLAT is durable, will last for years, needs only soap and water to brighten up as when first put on, will not crack or blister, peel, scale or rub off; can be painted over anything.

Put up in all sizes from barrels, fifty gallons to half pint cans

The Real Solution of the Garbage Problem

The only really sanitary way of disposing of garbage and refuse is by burning it on the premises, where it originates, before it has a chance to decay. Incidentally, it is the least expensive way because while the garbage and rubbish is being burned it can be used as part of the fuel necessary for heating water.

OBITUARY

JOHN O'DONNELL, large property owner and real estate broker in Queens, died at his home in Jamaica, April 20, aged 81. Thirty years ago Mr. O'Donnell conducted "The Jamaica Standard" in the interests of farmers' rights and progressive farming. He was active in getting for the county an agricultural experiment station. At one time he was superintendent of ponds for the Brooklyn water system. In recent years he had devoted most of his time to work for civic progress and the care of his realty holdings.

ROBERT PARKMAN BLAKE, a real estate and insurance broker of Boston, died on Wednesday morning in his home at Millis, of pneumonia, after an illness lasting about a week. Mr. Blake, who was forty-three years old, was born in Boston and was a member of the Union Club, the Union Boat Club and the Norfolk Hunt Club, and of the Harvard Club of New York.

AUCTION SALES OF WEEK.

Except where otherwise stated, the properties offered were in foreclosure. Adjournments of legal sales to next week are noted under Advertised Legal Sales.

* Indicates that the property described was bid in for the plaintiff's account.

The Auction Market.

Out of the unusually large number of offerings this week at the Manhattan and Bronx Exchange Salesrooms, outside buyers obtained nine properties, parties-in-interest thirty-six and five were either withdrawn or adjourned. Operators purchased the northwest corner of Third avenue and 109th street for $50,400. A noticeable feature in the week's business in the Salesrooms was the spirited bidding by outsiders for properties offered at voluntary sale.

For the coming week interest will center largely on the Hennessy tract of 134 lots on University Heights, to be offered by Joseph P. Day on Tuesday. On Thursday the same auctioneer will offer a row of residences on Fordham Heights. Tenements and dwellings comprise the bulk of the other offerings.

The following is the complete list of property sold, withdrawn or adjourned during the week ending April 24, 1914, at New York Real Estate Salesroom, 14 and 16 Vesey st.

Moving Day

Moving day discloses the fact that most of the moving vans are depositing their loads in front of buildings equipped for electric service.

Modern families demand electric light in their homes. They know its many advantages and conveniences and go where they may enjoy them.

The home electrically equipped rents more readily and sells at a higher price.

BY C. M. RIPLEY

Conducted by Raymond P. Roberts, Building Manager for the American Real Estate Co.

PART TWO.

THE only records open to the investigator who included those plants which are running as well as those which may have been scrapped are the records of the office with which he is identified. Thus all the plants "fathered" by this office of consulting engineers comprise a class in which an exhaustive investigation may be conducted with profit and which may lead to important conclusions. A personal inspection was therefore made of every private electric plant in New York City and Jersey City, which had been designed and constructed under the supervision of this certain engineering office. All plants mentioned hereinafter are therefore in either one of these two cities. The records referred to cover a period of 22 years, or from 1892 until 1914. All dates and ages have been given accordingly.

The records of private electric plants to which the investigator had access show the following now in operation, on which a 5 per cent. depreciation appears to have proved excessive. The four following are in their 22d year of service:

The New York Eye and Ear Infirmary runs its plant 18 hours daily and the rest of the time on a storage battery. It later added to its building, and installed an additional engine and dynamo, and the storage battery. Jacob Ringle & Son use an old engine which supplies belted power as well as electricity. The Havemeyer Building, which later added a larger dynamo owing to the erection of tall buildings next door and opposite on Church street and on Cortlandt street, and owing also to the increased use of electricity. The New York Herald Building, in which no new engines have been added, as the building occupies an entire flatiron block and no building could be erected adjacent. The dynamos now in service are not the ones originally installed, but the old engines are. This may be considered an exception. However, the chief engineer claims his plant is 42 years old, as with the Herald and the Telegram, both daily newspapers, it has done double duty.

Therefore it seems, on the basis of the table furnished by the certified public accountant, that the foregoing plants show less than a 3 per cent. depreciation with the possible exception of the Herald plant. If these plants operate for another year 2½ per cent. depreciation will appear to have been proved excessive.

Plant in Twenty-first Year of Service.

The Presbyterian Building has neither added to nor subtracted from its original electric plant, and since it is still operating in perfect condition a 3 per cent. depreciation has been proved excessive.

Plants in Twentieth Year of Service.

The St. Paul Building has made no change in its electric plant. This, according to history, was the first 25-story building ever erected. Both the manufacturer of the engines and the dynamos are long since out of business, but their product survives them.

The New York Clearing House has made no change in its electric plant. It obtained an advantageous rate for street steam and holds its boilers in reserve. Grace Chapel has run the same plant for all these years without change. The Liederkrantz Club has its original engines and dynamos. The plant runs battery serving the lights during the rest of the time. In all of the forenoons and evenings, the storage going plants 3½ per cent. depreciation may be considered as excessive.

Plants in Nineteenth Year of Service.

The American Surety Building now operates the same engines and dynamos as were originally installed. These were shut down for two years, but in 1913 were started up. The Metropolitan Building (Havemeyer Estate) and the Commercial Building (Havemeyer Estate) have been in operation without change since originally installed. The Criminal Courts Building is operating its original plant. It later added one other cheap engine and dynamo which are but little used. In the old Times Building one of the original engines and dynamos are still in service. St. Luke's Hospital operates every day between 11 o'clock p. m. and 8:30 a. m. its old engines and dynamos. Additions to the hospital necessitated installation of other units. In all of these plants 3½ per cent. depreciation, to all appearances, has been proved excessive.

Plants in Eighteenth Year of Service.

The Polhemus Memorial Clinic Dispensary has a plant which has been taken better care of than any of the other plants inspected in connection with compiling these data. The Mechanics Bank of Brooklyn still retains its same old apparatus, operating it daily. In these two plants 4 per cent. depreciation seems to have been proved excessive.

Plants in Seventeenth Year of Service.

The Empire Building has made no changes in its electric plant since first installed. The Germania Bank Building, the smallest office building with a plant, and the smallest plant in New York City, has a plant now operating in its 17th year. The building is 6 stories, 60 feet by 102 feet with 2 electric elevators. The New York Athletic Club has still the same engines and dynamos. This plant is operated on a yearly contract covering heat and electricity. The contractor paid for two new boilers. In the Vincent Building, National Bank of Commerce, and O'Neill's Department Store there have been no changes in the plants. The Terrace Garden plant was in a precarious condition when inspected, owing to lack of proper maintenance. The tenant is spending close to $10,000 per year for electricity from the street, it is said, but will not appropriate half this amount for improvements. His lease will expire shortly. The Church of the Holy Trinity has made no changes in the plant serving the boys' club, gymnasium, church house, parsonage, etc. In the foregoing plants, all in their 17th year of service, 4½ per cent. depreciation has been proved excessive.

Plants in Sixteenth Year of Service.

The Ormonde and Seminole apartments are operating the same equipment as originally installed. These were among the first apartments to give refrigeration service to tenants. The Sprague or Anderson Building and the Metropolitan Museum of Art are operating the original equipment. For 15 years the one engine and dynamo served the old Astor Library. When the Astor Library was removed to the New York Public Library Building the Director, the late Dr. J. S. Billings, and others in authority, voted that the old plant be carefully removed and installed ready for services in the new building. The plant, speaking sentimentally, has been pensioned as its reward for faithful service for a period of nearly 16 years. It is still capable of useful work. For experimental purposes this may be operated later or for periods of light load, or it may be sold and used elsewhere. In any case, it cannot be said that the plant is dead—just retired—perhaps only temporarily but certainly with credit. In the foregoing plants 4½ per cent. depreciation has apparently been proved excessive.

Plants in Fifteenth Year of Service.

The Navarre Hotel operates the same old apparatus and also supplies several stores next door with heat and electricity. The building at 395 Broadway still operates the plant as originally installed. The Wellington Hotel has retained its original plant, and the Commercial Trust Company, Jersey City, operates its original apparatus. The plant in the New York University (Hall of Fame, etc., University Heights), consisting of but a single engine and dynamo, supplies light and power to six buildings, and heat to twelve buildings, covering 37 acres. The plant is heavily overloaded. In these plants all doing their fifteenth year of service 5 per cent, depreciation, to all appearances, has been proved excessive.

The foregoing list of 34 private electric plants are all in operation, except the Library pensioner. This list covers every installation made in 1900 and earlier, by the office with which the author is identified. No plants installed in 1900, or before, have been scrapped, but during the current year some of these plants mentioned herein may be discontinued and sold for scrap. Within the year, the Stock Exchange and Blair Buildings will probably enter the lists to tend to disprove further the necessity of a 5 per cent. depreciation charge. It would impose needlessly on your time to note the younger plants installed at later dates than those in the foregoing lists, provided they are in daily operation. It is necessary, however, to refer to such later or younger installations which may have succumbed to the vicissitudes of active power plant life in a greater or lesser degree. In this class there is one idle plant, namely, the Ward Line Building, 84 ft. x 100 ft., 9 stories in height, still contains the plant installed in 1901 and operated between 9 and 10 years. This plant is now idle but through change of policy on the part of the owner or by sale to some outside party, it may yet see many years more of service. The data are insufficient to determine the percentage of depreciation.

Summary of Probabilities.

In no private electric plants investigated has the real depreciation been determined. The investigation covered the whole of the subject; i. e., every plant designed by the consulting engineering office referred to.

Taking into consideration private electric plants (installed as early as 1900), the results stand as follows:

34 show less than 5 per cent. depreciation.
29 show less than 4½ per cent. depreciation.
17 show less than 4 per cent. depreciation.
16 show less than 3½ per cent. depreciation.
4 show less than 3 per cent. depreciation.

1. (New York Herald) plant may or may not show less than 3 per cent. depreciation.

Summary of Possibilities.

Among the oldest survivors installed before the establishment of this engineering office, accompanied by an unknown number of "dead" plants, are the following:

16 show less than 3 per cent. depreciation.
11 show less than 2½ per cent. depreciation.
4 show less than 2 per cent. depreciation.
1 shows less than 1½ per cent. depreciation.

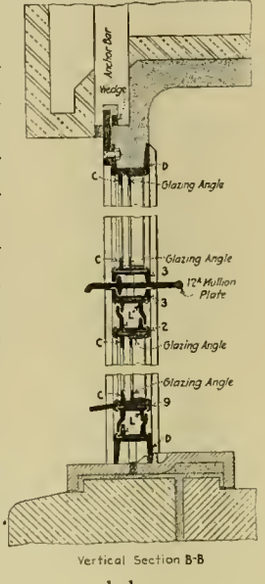
Tight Steel Sash.



IN filling the requirements of the Hill Building, now nearing completion at Tenth avenue and 36th street, the Trussed Concrete Steel Co., of Youngstown, Ohio, produced a new type of sash to meet the requirements of forced ventilation and humidity control which will be distinctive features of this publishing house when it is completed. By courtesy of the Engineering News, the Record and Guide presents to its readers a brief description of this new sash. The illustrations show details of assembly, the ½x⅜-inch glazing angle and the design of the practically air-tight windows, with a sectional view of the same.

Three-quarters of the Hill Building window area consists of this kind of panel. The chief requirements of the specifications for this structure were large panels 11½ by 11½ feet up to 11½ by 18 feet 10 inches with semi-circular topped maximum glass area; complete weather tightness, not only for water but also for air; unusual strength in spite of the large size panel and the desirability of avoiding light reducing mullions; good appearance outside and inside; sash normally fixed or locked, but with provision for passage of window cleaners. Puttyless glazing was required throughout.

Balanced Air Ventilation.

The building is ventilated by a balanced air supply and exhaust system, which is intended also to assure humidity control as required for fine printing. Open windows would interfere with good press work. The regular panels are made up of 14 by 22-inch lights, arranged to form five fixed and one swing section divided by one horizontal and two vertical mullions. The rails and stiles of the separate sections are made of unusually deep channel-shaped bar, giving great strength to the sections. The horizontal mullion bar, between upper and lower groups of sections, extends intact across the panel, and its ends are seated in the masonry. Its bending strength is due to a plate web, 4 in. deep, made integral with the sash rails seated against it, by through bolts. The vertical mullions, which are interrupted at the horizontal mullion and are supported by it, are formed by the channel stiles of the adjacent sections in conjunction with inner and outer 2x¼-in. steel plates, all clamped together by bolts through the plates. Spreader pieces between the two stiles insure correct spacing of the units.

To give good mechanical connection, and seal between sash and masonry, the panel is edged with a 2x2½-in. plate bolted to the stiles and lintel rail. This plate engages forked plate-anchors, built in the masonry about 18 in. apart, and is keyed in by steel wedges. This arrangement leaves a seal-space of ¼ to ½ in. between back of terra cotta and front of edging plate, which joint is sealed with oakum rope and mortar pointing. The brick work is set back far enough to permit surrounding of the edging plate with mortar at the back, where the interior plastering is carried against the sash frame.

The edging plate also enhances the appearance of the panel. In conjunction with the 2-in. plate fronts of the mullions, it produces a bordered panel effect without reducing the glass area.

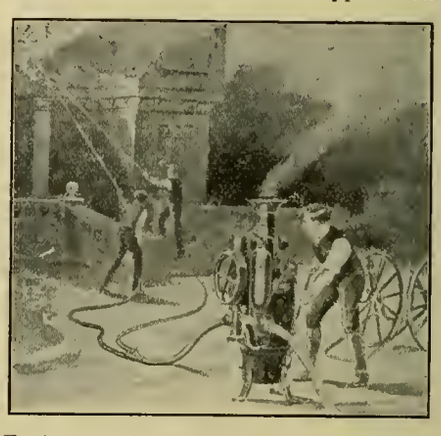
Vertical Sash Pivots.

The narrow and high swing sections naturally called for vertical pivoting, whereas horizontal pivoting is customary in steel sash. The half-round rabbet rails used in United swing sash were not considered satisfactory for this case, and a special flat-lip bar was made from bar 6 by bending the longer leg to offset; thus a double set of flat seating surfaces was obtained without displacing the sash out of the general plane of the panel. On account of the vertical pivoting, the rabbet edges of the stiles are straight and unbroken the full height of the section, and thus the important vertical lines are preserved. The break in the horizontal lines at upper and lower rabbet rails in passing the pivots is not noticeable. The steel pivots (fitted with bronze pins) completely fill and seal the break between left and right rabbet rails.

Four simple turned buttons in the stiles fasten the swing section; they are located near upper and lower corners. Their center pins project through a shallow boss on the inner face of the stile and bear a slotted head with interrupted slot, requiring a special key for opening.

A Novel Fastening.

The glass is seated inside the stops, against a thin bedding layer of steel sash putty. A novel form of fastening was devised, in place of the usual spring clips. The glass is retained by a ⅜ by ½-in. glazing angle continuous around the edge. This angle is formed out of the tolled angle-bar by notching a length equal to the periphery of the light, at three points corresponding to the corners and mitering the ends; then bending to right angles at the notches. The one open corner gives perfect adjustment of the angle strip to the side of the stop. To hold the angle tee-point screws are used. These are small T-bolts formed with an oval head slotted for screwdriver. Slots in anglestrip and stop-strip enable the T-point to pass through, and a quarter turn then locks the fastening securely, the T-lugs being slightly beveled. As the slot in the angle-strip is vertical and that in the sto-strip is horizontal, adjustment in both directions is secured.



On the outside the window panel seats close against the inner edge of the terra cotta facing in the reveal. On the inside, at jamb and lintel, the wall and ceiling plaster is carried around the reveal and brought in against the edging plate, with a cove of 1-in. radius.

A cast-iron sill forms the seat for the button of the panel. The outer edge of the sill turns down over the brickwork to the terra cotta of the ledge. Along the inside of the sash a drain groove is formed in the sill to collect condensation.

"A Vest-Pocket Fire Engine."

MEASURING the efficiency of a new type of fire-fighting device being manufactured by Merryweather & Sons, 63 Longacre, London, W. C., by the readiness with which it can be operated and brought into play in an emergency, the designation of this piece of fire-fighting apparatus by the use of the terms "vest-pocket" fire engine is not so far amiss. The little device is to all intents and purposes a perfectly operating fire-engine that can be used very effectively for one or more streams.

The illustration shows its application.

Fuel used for the generation of steam is kerosene under air pressure, very much in the manner followed in operating plumbers' blow torches. The device is light enough to place upon a pair of wheels and be carried to any part of the premises and upon being set up gives the necessary force for effectively fighting fires with regulation sized fire hose on country estates. Such a device as this would have great value on estates where sparks from locomotives constitute not only a constant menace but an excuse for higher insurance rates.

Varnish Removal.

WHEN the tenants move out and renovation work begins, floor blemishes are frequently found to be a serious factor in re-renting. For that reason recourse is frequently made to varnish removers, which has given rise to the question of how various varnishes can be removed. Ordinary oil floor varnishes may be removed by many preparations on the market. Most of these discolor and roughen the wood. This requires scraping of the floor by machine or by the more tedious system of using steelwool. An alternative is to use one part of pearl ash and three parts lime. Slake the lime with water and add pearl ash, making the mixture the consistency of paint. Apply with a fibre brush and when the varnish is dissolved, clean up with water and wash the surface with weak vinegar.

CREDIT ASSOCIATION.

Has Arbitrated Three Thousand Complaints—Annual Dinner.

The eighth annual dinner of the Credit Association of the Building Trades was held April 23, in the Green Room of the Hotel McAlpin. Speeches were delivered by Milton Schnaier, of Milton Schnaier & Company, president of the association; J. Harry Tregoe, secretary and treasurer of the National Association of Credit Men; Walter Gordon Merritt, counsel of the American Anti-Boycott Association; A. W. Ross, deputy superintendent of school buildings, Board of Education, and other officials of the association.

Secretary Franz Neilson's report shows an unusually large number of arbitrations conducted by the association during its seven years, viz., 3074; also total complaints adjusted in behalf of members to the number of over 3,600, involving three-quarters of a million of dollars; also credit information in the office files regarding 6,000 parties in the metropolitan district, and warnings in the present issue of the members' bulletin regarding 550 general contractors and owners to whom it is unsafe to extend credit. In this time, the association has published in the bulletin the names of 1,274 such parties.

Others at the guest table were: Robert D. Kohn, president N. Y. Chapter of the American Institute of Architects; Samuel Sass, director N. Y. Society of Architects; B. D. Traitel; C. G. Norman; M. F. Westergren, Lewis Harding and Andrew N. Petersen, former presidents of the association; Francis N. Howland, of Candee, Smith & Howland, third vice-president; P. H. Hart, fourth vice-president; and George G. Bradley, first vice-president.

To Compete for New St. Bartholomew's.

The selection of an architect for the new edifice to be erected by St. Bartholomew's Episcopal Church, which is to replace the old brewery structures on the east side of Park avenue, between 50th and 51st streets, will be by competition. There are about nineteen full city lots in the parcel, and at the present time it is not known whether the trustees of the church will use the entire plot frontage for its new building or dispose of a portion of it for other improvement. The final announcement of the proposed plans for moving the place of worship was made at the services on Sunday last by the rector, the Rev. Dr. Leighton Parks, although the matter has been under consideration at intervals for several years. It will probably be several years before the new church will be completed, as the purchase of the new property carries with it the condition of reasonable time for the present occupants to vacate. A portion of the facade of the church, including the bronze doors, the gift of Mrs. Vanderbilt, a few years ago as a memorial to her husband, Cornelius Vanderbilt, and designed by the late Stanford White, will be carefully taken down and reset in the new structure, together with other costly memorials within the church and chapel. The present site has a frontage of 100 feet on Madison avenue, and a depth of 145 feet in the south side of 44th street. There was a report around on Tuesday that this property might ultimately become the home of a large and well known clothing establishment, but nothing definite regarding an improvement of this character has yet been determined. The estimated cost of the new church with site will likely exceed $2,000,000. E. R. L. Gould is treasurer of the vestry.

Plans for Schaefer Brewery Ready.

Mortenson & Co., 114 West 28th street, have just completed plans for the $1,500,000 brewery, fireproof, brick, limestone and terra cotta construction, which the F. & M. Schaefer Brewing Company, now located at Park avenue and 51st street, is soon to erect on the East River front, from 51st to 52d streets. Contracts for the work have not been awarded. The present brewery site now occupied by this company comprises a depth of 225 feet in 50th street and 250 feet in 51st street, fronting on the east side of Park avenue. This property, which is valued at $1,500,000, has been sold to St. Bartholomew's Episcopal Church for improvement with a new edifice and rectory.

Six-Story Building for Fifth Avenue.

Bergdorf & Goodman Company, of 32 West 32d street, have commissioned Rouse & Goldstone, 38 West 32d street, to design plans for a six-story business building to be erected at 616 Fifth avenue on a plot 30x125 feet. The property was recently acquired from the Butterfield Estate. The fee to the land is owned by Columbia College. Work on the new building is to start immediately so that work will be completed for occupancy about October 1. N. A. Berwin & Company have been appointed agents for the building.

Cauldwell-Wingate Co. Get Contract.

The general contract was placed this week with the Cauldwell-Wingate Company, of 381 Fourth avenue, for the eleven-story store, office and loft building to be erected at 415 Fifth avenue and 3-5-7 East 37th street, for Mrs. E. M. Anderson. The plans were prepared by Howells & Stokes, of 100 William street. The store and basement has already been leased to J. & J. Slater, shoe dealers, of Broadway and 25th street.

Hotel and Business Building on Bway.

The Francis S. Kinney Estate, care of the Farmers' Loan & Trust Company, 22 William street, is having plans prepared for the improvement of the northwest corner of Broadway and 24th street, now occupied by the Hotel Albemarle, with a twelve-story hotel and business building. Frank Hemstreet, of 44 West 44th street, will be the architect.

Contract for Montclair Church.

Charles T. Wills, Inc., 286 Fifth avenue, Manhattan, received the general contract this week to erect the First Congregational Church at Fullerton and Plymouth avenues, Montclair, New Jersey. Plans were prepared by Bertram C. Goodhue, of 2 West 47th street, Manhattan. The cost is placed at about $250,000.

Dulness in the Trades.

Not in twenty-five years have the building trades of Greater New York had so little to do as they have this spring. Seventy-five per cent. has been the proportion of unemployment during the winter, and some of the men have not earned a dollar in five months, according to the reports received from the various boroughs and adjacent counties on Long Island by Secretary Tompkins of the Executive Council of the United Board of Business Agents.

PROPOSALS

The rate for Advertising under this heading is 25 cents per line, nonpareil measurement, with a minimum of four lines. Copy received until 3 P. M. Friday.

SEALED PROPOSALS will be received by the undersigned in the Chambers of the Board of Supervisors on the 5th day of May, 1914, at 10 a. m., for the erection of additions to the Nassau County Court House, in accordance with the plans, general conditions and specifications thereof, prepared by W. B. Tubby, Architect, of 81 Fulton Street, New York City.

All bids shall be presented in sealed envelopes on or before the day and hour above named, and shall be accompanied by a certified check upon a National or State Bank, drawn to the order of Daniel J. Hegeman, Treasurer of the County of Nassau, enclosed in a separate sealed envelope, which checks shall be drawn in the following sums:

Checks accompanying bids upon the entire work shall be for a sum total of at least Twelve thousand ($12,000) Dollars:

Checks accompanying bids upon the general work, excluding plumbing, heating and electric wiring, a sum not less than Ten thousand ($10,000) Dollars.

Checks accompanying bids for plumbing work complete, a sum in at least One thousand ($1,000) Dollars.

Checks accompanying bids for heating and ventilating work complete, a sum in at least One thousand ($1,000) Dollars.

Checks accompanying bids for electric wiring complete, a sum not less than One thousand ($1,000) Dollars.

Such deposits shall be returned to all except the successful bidder or bidders within a period of ten days after the opening of the bids.

The amount deposited by the successful bidder will be retained until the execution of the formal contract. Should the successful bidder upon receipt in writing of a notice of the acceptance of his bid, neglect or refuse to execute the contract, the amount of his certified check shall be retained and applied to making up the difference between the amount of any contract for the said work which may be entered into by the Board of Supervisors, and that of his own unexecuted bid, and as so applied shall be accepted in full as liquidated damages for such breach of contract.

No bid will be accepted from, or contract awarded to any person, firm or corporation who is in arrears to any municipal corporation, upon debt and contract or who is a defaulter, a surety or otherwise, upon any application to any municipal corporation and who is not a resident and a citizen of the State of New York.

Separate estimates are to be taken:

1. General contract work (excluding plumbing, heating and electric wiring).
2. Plumbing work complete.
3. Heating and ventilating work complete.
4. Electric wiring work complete.

These four contracts may be let separately, preferably to concerns making a specialty of the trades covered.

Blanks will be furnished to each prospective bidder, and all proposals must be made out upon such blanks, and attention is directed to the necessity of filling out all alternate estimates required.

Each bid shall be made upon the whole work covered under this specification and must be based upon the work as set forth by them and the contract drawings, and if signed by any one acting as agent for the principal, must be accompanied by a power of attorney for such signature.

It is incumbent upon each bidder to examine the existing conditions at the site before making up his proposals, and the fact of the submittal of such proposal will be considered as evidence that these conditions have been so examined and that the bidder is familiar with the terms and requirements of the drawings, specifications, contract and the bond, and thereby signifies his acceptance of each and all of them. No claim for relief on account of mistakes or omissions in bidding will be entertained, and each bidder will be held strictly to his bid under penalty of forfeiture of his deposit.

Any bid will be rejected when opened, if the same is not submitted on a furnished form blank and upon which the alternative bids required are not fully priced.

Any bid will be rejected when opened, if the same contains any erasure or written memoranda qualifying the same.

The bidder or bidders to whom the award of the contract is made will be required to furnish a satisfactory bond in the form to be provided by W. B. Tubby, Architect, of 81 Fulton Street, New York City, and executed by an acceptable Surety Company for the faithful performance of said contract and covering the guarantee in accordance with the contract plans and specifications, in a sum equal to 33⅓% of the amount of said contract.

For the convenience and use of intending bidders, a full set of drawings and specifications will be loaned to them by the architect, upon receipt of a deposit of Twenty-five ($25) Dollars, in cash or a certified check, drawn to the order of said architect.

Such plans and specifications must be returned to the architect's office, prior to the day of the opening of the bids, whereupon the deposit will be returned, and in the event of the non-return of such drawings and specifications as above stated, the deposits shall be forfeited.

The Board of Supervisors reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

The form of contract and of the bond which the successful bidder shall be required to execute may be had upon application to the architect.

Dated, at Mineola, April 13th, 1914.

By order of the Board of Supervisors,

GEORGE M. GOODALE,
Clerk.

Electric Efficiency

Be sure that your electric motors are properly located and that they are the correct size. Motors too large—or too small—or not correctly located, impair their own efficiency.

Our experts are always ready to advise you on all electrical matters, without cost. If you do not use electricity for power, let one of our representatives give you a few convincing facts on the superiority of United Service.

BUILDING MATERIALS AND SUPPLIES

LOW PRICES RESPONSIBLE FOR HEAVIER INQUIRY FOR BASIC COMMODITIES—WAR WILL NOT AFFECT MONEY.

Larger Steel Tonnage—Brick Sales
Slack—Supply Men Elect Officers.

SELDOM, if ever, has it been possible to get good material in the New York market at such low figures as those prevailing to-day. Moreover, the prospect is that if production of basic commodities and circumscribed building plan filings continue along the restricted levels now prevailing, the keen competition that has materially clipped the margins from otherwise good contracts cannot help but keep prices low for some time to come. The same condition seems to obtain everywhere east of Pittsburgh. Buyers are not going into the raw material market for supplies beyond the second quarter, even at this late date, unless the quotations are made attractive to them. They buy only as they see an immediate outlet. This is reflected, in turn, in the figures submitted to architects.

Viewing the market as a whole, it is apparent that the possibility of a conflict with Mexico has long since been discounted, so far as financing of building operations is concerned. There was no serious talk in money circles regarding a possible boost of interest rates in anticipation of the levying of war taxes, and the receipt of assurances from Washington, to the effect that such action is not being considered by the treasury department, has had the effect of allaying any possible retardation of building projects in this market at least.

A slight improvement in the steel tonnage figured this week gave to the building material market further ground for encouragement. Pig iron also spruced up a bit on demand, and the improvement in certain lines of sheet metal, paint and glass, while chiefly confined to inquiry, was sufficient to offset the general feeling that intervention in Mexico would immediately be felt in a restricted buying movement.

The lower prices prevailing for plain structural shapes and fabricated material have resulted in the placing of some larger orders with the fabricating shops during the last ten days, some of the more interesting contracts being 1,800-ton requirements of the addition to the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the 3,000-ton requirements for the Todd Building at Vanderbilt avenue and 45th street (behind the Biltmore), and the 1,500 tonnage for the Goelet loft building. The Rogers Peet Company operation and the Melrose Telephone Exchange building will require another 1,000 tons.

Other lines seem to be waiting for the building movement to develop. The common brick market showed no improvement in strength, either on demand or prices this week, and reflected the status of other departments. Concrete ingredients are moving heavily into the various sections of the subway, but the chief activity in building construction seems still to be centered in figuring on prospective work.

Equipment companies, specializing in fire escapes, ornamental metal work and supplies affected by departmental orders, such as fire prevention, factory and tenement violations are principal buyers in the basic material markets. This business represents what is called hand-to-month purchasing, however, which while it amounts to considerable in the aggregate, does not represent free outlets and favorable profits. Wood-working plants in the outskirts of the city feel the impetus in small building construction that seems to be featuring the season in suburban residential districts, but competition is keen and margins of profit are pared closely in figuring practically all bids.

Plan filings for new buildings in the five boroughs this week compared with last week's follow:

PIPE.

Cut in Price Made By National Tube Co. Met by Others.

FOLLOWING the lead taken by the National Tube Company, in cutting the price of their product $1 a ton some time ago, other concerns have followed suit. The volume of business that has followed the reduction has not been increased to any great extent, the same policy of hand-to-mouth buying prevailing throughout the district. The inquiry is reported to be strengthening, however, and manufacturers are preparing for a marked improvement in demand after the turning of the first half of the year.

PAPER.

Stiffening Tone in All Tarred Material—Prices Steady.

BUILDING paper has been reported in a stiffer tone following the announcement of hostilities in Mexico where some of the fibre used in its production comes from. Tarred paper is also firmer on price for the same reason. Current prices rule at about the following levels:

1 ply, per net ton	$33 to $35
Standard 2 ply, 108 ft. per roll	$0.52
Heavy 2 ply	$0.62

HARDWARE.

Building Paper Irregular—Window Glass Dull.

THE general hardware market shows little indication of a strong buying movement as far as building requirements are concerned. Nails are sluggish, sheets are only moderately active, with flashing comparatively a negligible factor in the market. Small dealer business is going ahead fairly well, but contracts for supplying buildings of size in this city are not coming out as freely as had been expected earlier in the year.

There are some irregularities in the building paper department. Some merchants are quoting their products direct to consumers, which has further disrupted the local market. The demand for tarred felt seems to be in a healthier condition, and the demand is quite good for this season of the year. Rosin sized sheathing ranges from $30 to $32 a ton; deafening felt at $45 to $47 a ton and 1-ply tarred felt at $34 to $35 a ton. Two-ply is sold at 48 cents a roll and 3-ply at 68 cents a roll. Slater's felt varies at from 60 cents to 80 cents a roll, according to quality.

Window glass trade is dull. Merchants are not disposed to buy for more than actual necessities, and lower prices, it is believed, will not make any appreciable difference in the volume of business. Everybody seems to be waiting and stocks are about normal. Collections are referred to as slow in this department. Window glass in this market is 90-20 per cent. on single thick and 90-25 discount on double thick, from jobbers' list, with some quotations both higher and lower, according to quality and seller.

PAINT INGREDIENTS.

General Tone Stronger—White Lead Stiffer—Linseed Oil Steady.

WHITE lead is stiffening on prices due to the heavy demand now ruling for paints. It is still not considered high, however, but the early movement is such as to warrant expectations of higher prices before long, according to the best opinion in the trade. Linseed oil is still steady at the 54 and 55 cent levels for American city, raw. Revised current prices in this department follow:

American white lead, in oil, kegs, not less than 500 lbs., 7½c.; same in 25 lb. tin pails, 7¾c.; red, bbls., ½ bbls. and kegs not less than 500 lbs., 7¼c.

IRON BARS.

Still Shading Pittsburgh Prices—Sheets Dull at Lower Levels.

CONTINUED weakness marked the iron bar market this week. Pittsburgh base sales were reported at $1.25 per hundred pounds, as against a former quotation of $1.30 to $1.35. The decline of a dollar a ton in sheets early in the week did not result in a strengthened demand. Tin plate, however, has a stronger undertone, probably reflecting the spring demand for roofing.

SUPPLY MEN CONVENE.

Cost Conditions and Financial Situation Discussed—Officers Reelected.

REFLECTING the general tendency of business of all kinds to meet the new conditions under which business has to be conducted, the annual convention of the National Pipe and Supplies' Association spent most of its time in conferring upon weaknesses in price schedules, cost of conducting jobbing business and in meeting foreign competition.

The convention opened at the Biltmore Hotel on Monday, when C. H. Simmons, president of the John H. Simmons Company and president of the association, welcomed the delegates, who numbered about 100, from all parts of the country, and William M. Pattison, the president, replied.

Tuesday morning was taken up with a discussion "Trade association, with particular reference to the Sherman Anti-Trust Law"; Felix H. Levy, Esq., of this city, was the speaker. He outlined the limitations set upon trade organizations by the Anti-Trust Act, and the discussion which followed his paper centered on the question of how the jobber can reorganize his business to meet existing conditions. The fact was developed that of fifty-five jobbers reporting, the average cost of doing business under present conditions existing in the trade was 16.74 per cent. of gross; that the average gross profit was 20.77 per cent., and the average net profit was only 4.03 per cent. It was held that supply jobbers are now operating under a retail expense account, while making wholesale prices, which is a tendency toward smaller net profits.

Theo. Ahrens, president of the Standard Sanitary Manufacturing Co. of Pittsburgh, gave an informal talk on some of the conditions governing the plumbing supply business in Continental Europe, emphasizing the fact that the American mind should be dispossessed of the idea that this country does not need a protective tariff on the ground that American workmen turn out better goods more efficiently per dollar's worth than do European artisans. He cited the plants of the American Radiator Company in Germany and France in proof of the fact that a great change has come over European workmen, and the finished product is so near to the perfection of American workmen that it would stand comparison in an American market with American goods.

The officers were re-elected on Wednesday with W. M. Pattison, of Chicago, president, and I. W. McIlwaine, of Pittsburgh, secretary. The new executive committee consists of J. B. Rahm; Omaha; A. Merkle, Cincinnati; L. C. Heusmann, Baltimore; W. W. Wales, Bostoo; Alvin Smith, Richmond; F. A. Berchmann, New York; G. B. Denny, Savannah, and J. C. Lembert, Chicago.

COMMON BRICK.

Unloading Heaviest This Year—Wholesale Prices Weak.

THE slight improvement reported last week in building construction throughout the city is reflected in this week's lightened Hudson brick barges. The unloading was heavier than at any time so far this year by more than a million brick.

Official transactions for Hudson common brick covering the week ending Thursday, April 23, in the wholesale market, with comparisons for the corresponding period last year, and a comparative statement of Hudson brick unloaded from barges for consumption here, follow:

REAL ESTATE RECORD AND BUILDERS GUIDE.

NEW YORK, MAY 2, 1914

ADVOCATES FREE PORT FOR NEW YORK

Will Tend To Hold Present Industries And Attract New Ones—Merchants' Association To Hold Meeting To Discuss Problem

BY WILLARD REED MESSENGER

OF all municipal improvements, New York's port development now appears most imperative. Viewed relatively, New York City is today losing ground industrially. At this time a strong effort is being made before the Federal authorities at Washington by rival communities to deprive New York of the lighterage service now provided by the New Jersey railroads.

None of the other great seaports of the world suffers from the meagre facilities and congestion which hampers commerce at this port. We have no ships of our own, and we offer the most inadequate accommodations to the shipping which enters our harbor. We ought to provide drydocks, but we don't, while other seaports do. The terminals for the barge canal, which have been discussed for two or three years, have not yet had their locations determined. Moreover, little thought appears to be given to whether or not it is necessary to spend several million dollars for special Barge Canal terminals. There is no radical difference between the Barge Canal terminals and other terminals for water-borne traffic. Terminals and basins may be a very important matter along the line of the canal where there are no facilities except those provided for the exclusive use of the canal traffic; but in New York there is just as much need for terminals for coastwise traffic, coming down from New England or up from the South, as there is for traffic coming down the Hudson. There are fifty-seven locks in the Barge Canal system, and thirty-five locks on the Erie Canal branch. The locks will not permit the passage of a boat over 311 feet long, or over 45 feet wide, and with about 10-foot draft, which would afford a capacity of about 3,000 tons.

The type of boats most desirable has not yet been determined, but two or four boats may be used instead of the one larger boat, but the aggregate tonnage which could pass the locks at any one time would remain about 3,000 tons. If allowance were made for boats going in the opposite direction through the lock channels, then only about half the tonnage, or 1,500 tons, could pass at one time.

Canal Terminals and Public Markets.

Also there seems to be little consideration given regarding the question of the location of Barge Canal terminals in relation to the proposed public market. Freight brought to New York by the canal may be for export or coastwise shipment, and therefore will need to be transferred to ocean-going vessels, but little or no attention seems to be given to this question.

Now it is proposed to establish a free port district in New York Harbor. Fortunately, this has aroused the interest of the owners of water-front properties, railroads and steamship companies, the bonded warehouse interests, importers and exporters, and manufacturers, whose product is shipped for export trade. The term "free port" is often misunderstood. The free port district, as proposed for

WILLARD REED MESSENGER.

New York, would comprise one or two hundred acres, or as some advocate, possibly one or two thousand acres, with piers, docks and terminal facilities, where vessels carrying cargoes of imported goods would be permitted to discharge their cargoes without customs inspection or detention, and without payment of customs duties by the merchants, importers and manufacturers receiving the goods.

Free from Inspection and Tariff Duty.

Within the area of the free port district, the goods would be free from inspection and free from tariff duty. The goods could thus be conveniently handled, repacked, assembled, assorted, or manufactured for trans-shipment to South America or Canada or Australia, or any other foreign point, without any restriction, or delays, from the customs authorities. But such goods as were not trans-shipped to foreign ports, or to other ports in this country, but entered the United States beyond the area of the free port district, would pay the usual customs duties.

Four Fundamentals.

The four fundamental requirements of a free port district at New York should be:

1st. Adequate water depth and adequate pier and dock facilities, and terminal equipment.

2nd. Railroad connections, articulating with the docks and piers.

3rd. An adjacent labor market for the manufacturing industries.

4th. A sufficient area of moderately priced land.

The establishment of free port districts at New York Harbor has been recently urged by a large number of prominent business men, and has in the past been advocated by government officials. Hon. Leslie M. Shaw, ex-secretary of the United States Treasury, several years ago publicly advocated the creation of bonded zones for export, and recommended their establishment at Atlantic and Gulf seaports in the United States. Mr. Austin Corbin, as far back as 1914, while then president of the Long Island Railroad, advocated the establishment of a free port district at Montauk Point. The Merchants' Association of New York has indicated an interest in this subject, and has recently published the report of an expert who was retained by the association to investigate the free ports of Europe. The association has also recently retained an engineer to make a study of the physical facilities of New York Harbor in connection with the proposed free port district, but this report is not yet published.

A Meeting Called.

On Tuesday, May 12, the association will hold a meeting in the Woolworth Building, 233 Broadway, under the auspices of the Foreign Trade Committee, Paul Fuller, Jr., chairman. The object of the meeting is to decide whether to start an active campaign to make New York a free port, or whether to drop the entire subject definitely.

While investigating commercial and industrial conditions abroad during the past year, I made a special visit to the principal seaports of both northern and southern Europe, where free port districts exist, and such districts have met with almost universal favor. I found that the railroads were not opposed to such free port districts, and I believe that the railroads in the United States would not oppose the creation of free port districts at seaports here, because I believe the opinion to be that such districts would tend to increase the total volume of business.

Some few persons who have given superficial attention to the subject from a purely theoretical standpoint, have been led to feel that free port districts have not been a success in Europe, but this results largely from carelessness in the use of the term "free port" and the term "free port district." Free ports have existed in Europe since the sixteenth century, and have been created or abolished from time to time as result of wars, revolutions and political changes. Thus, Italy's free ports were abolished in 1865, soon after the Italian Unity. The free ports of France were abolished at the time of the revolution. Hamburg, Bremen and Lubeck were originally free ports and also free cities. Most of the seaports which were originally free ports have adopted a plan of free port districts. From the economic and commercial, and also from the industrial standpoint, such free port districts have been quite generally endorsed. Attention is sometimes called to the fact that some countries, such as England, have no free port, although Gibraltar is a free port; but this is accounted for from the fact that such countries are usually free trade countries. Although there are no free port districts in the United States, the government has done a great deal in various directions to encourage commerce and industry by the same principle which renders a free port district desirable, especially in such a large shipping port as New York.

The Mexican government established what was practically a free tariff district until about ten years ago along the United States border. The Mexican free zone was a strip of land about twelve miles wide, extending along the entire boundary of Mexico. It was not a strictly free zone, since the goods entering the zone from the United States paid 11½ per cent. of the usual impost levied by the Mexican Government.

This zone was originally established along part of the Northern Mexican boundary in 1858, and extended across the entire frontier in 1885, and its object was to discourage the emigration of Mexicans to the United States. The object of a free port district in New York would be to discourage the emigration of industry and the loss of shipping, which might be retained or obtained by means of a free port district.

The government has recognized the necessity for the extension of bonded warehouse facilities, and for a number of years has permitted bonded manufacturing warehouses where imported goods may be manufactured and re-exported without the payment of duty, and goods may be transferred from a bonded warehouse to a bonded manufacturing warehouse without the payment of duty; but this is only possible under strict supervision and inspection, which is both costly and inconvenient.

CREATING A RESIDENTIAL PARK AT MALBA

WHILE located within the city limits Malba on the North Shore of Long Island, embraces many of the advantages of a strictly suburban section, yet having all municipal improvements. The property, which is owned by the Malba Estates Corporation, is distant about twelve miles from the Pennsylvania station at Seventh avenue and 33rd street, having a service of about fifty trains daily. The running time is slightly less than one-half an hour, by express, the electrification of the road and the tunnels under the East River having materially reduced the train time.

Malba is a strictly home section, all of the property being restricted to high-class residences, except a short stretch in 21st street, which is adjacent to the railroad station. While no store buildings have been erected as yet, still it is the purpose of the company to either build structures of this type, or sell to builders, so that the residents may obtain their supplies on the spot. Malba has the advantage of free delivery from the large department stores in Manhattan and in addition there are abundant shops in Flushing and Whitestone where goods may be purchased.

The tract is exceedingly favorably situated in a cove just west of Whitestone, and from the property a wide and diversified view may be obtained over the Long Island Sound. Excellent bathing, boating and fishing can be had in the Sound and one of the features of the place is the interest taken in water sports.

In addition to the service of the Long Island Railroad, Malba has the advantage of a trolley service to Flushing, and during the summer months the Wall street boat makes a stop at the pier which is at the property. This affords a delightful trip to and from business and while more time is consumed, still for those not in a hurry the comfort well repays the time expended.

After the property was first opened several large and costly houses were erected. The prices ranged from $15,000 to $35,000, but now the company is going to inaugurate a new policy of erecting a number of dwellings, which with the plots, will average from $8,000 to $15,000. These dwellings will be complete in every particular, though will not have the number of rooms that are contained in the larger structures.

William Sugarman, president of the Alco Building Company, who is also associated with the Realty Trust, has assumed active supervision of the Malba development. Mr. Sugarman said last week: "The company is going to start an active campaign, under my supervision, and before many weeks we expect to have accomplished great results. It is the intention of the company to erect about forty stucco and tile residences, which will cost on an average of about $10,000. These houses will be built in various sections of the property and are designed to meet the requirements of the most exacting home-seekers. One of the large residences, which is now erected and owned by the company will be converted into a clubhouse for the use of the owners.

"Water, sewers, electric lights and gas have been installed; also a considerable amount of macadamized roads, sidewalks and curbs laid. Last week I placed a large force of men at work on the property and before the end of the summer the property will be materially beautified. Malba is thoroughly restricted and contains about 163 acres of land, much of which is wooded."

Another Alco Development.

Mapleton Park presents a typical example of the enhancement of real estate values which precedes the opening of the new subway facilities. The Sea Beach subway which runs through the heart of Mapleton Park is now one-third completed and the operation of both express and local trains is definitely announced to commence in April, 1915. The owners and developers of Mapleton Park are the Alco Building Co., William Sugarman, president.

Five years ago what is now Mapleton Park was then a bare stretch of farm land where vegetables were raised and sent "to the city." Today Mapleton Park has about 850 private one-family residences, eleven blocks of stores and flats; a motion picture theatre; the Mapleton Park Clubhouse, and is on the verge of getting the finest four-track subway service in Greater New York, to be an open cut, operated as an extension of the Fourth Avenue subway. Mapleton Park will have an express station at 62nd street and New Utrecht avenue, and three local stations, at 18th, 20th and 22nd avenues.

TYPICAL VIEWS OF MALBA AND MAPLETON SECTIONS.

TO IMPROVE CONDEMNATION PROCEDURE

City Should Stand For Tax Department's Appraisal and Make Prompt Payment on Taking Title—Let the Court Fix Compensation of Experts.

BY BENNO LEWINSON

SHORTLY after his induction into office, Mayor Mitchel is reported to have suggested that steps be taken for the creation of a civil service list from which appointees as condemnation commissioners should be selected. The Mayor seemed to think that by this means would be most readily cured the many crying evils in the present practice and procedure for the taking of land for public purposes.

The present condemnation law is archaic, unfair and insufficient; and much of the practice under it is so unsatisfactory as often to have been almost scandalous. Many efforts have from time to time been made to cure these evils; only to fail of final accomplishment. I refer particularly to a well-organized movement in 1904, in the course of which there was a most thorough investigation of the grievances called forth by the law and the practices under it: with a voluminous and exhaustive report to the Legislature by a commission, of which J. Noble Hayes was the chairman, which resulted in the passage by the Legislature of an act for the appointment of a body of commissioners of condemnation by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court in the First Department.

This was the most hopeful movement of all; but it failed because the then Governor vetoed the legislation upon the opinion of the Attorney General, who advised that the law was unconstitutional in that it deprived the judges of the Supreme Court, as individual judges, of the untrammeled right given them by the Constitution, to make their own selection of commissioners upon each separate application.

Only Scratched the Surface.

It is hard to see how, in view of this opinion, the proposed measure of Mayor Mitchel can be made effectual. But, even if it could, the taking of the appointments for these commissions from a competitive civil service list would be only a scratch on the surface of the crying evils of today.

It is my purpose to point out some of the deficiencies of the present law; but before doing so I venture to call attention to the fact that the commissioners who are now being appointed from time to time are on the whole, perfectly competent and generally earnest. I doubt very much whether a higher class of men would submit to examination for the purpose of being placed upon such a competitive list, than the average of the body of men now being appointed.

And that is so, because the compensation which the law awards to these commissioners is senseless and inadequate. In the ordinary proceeding (to which there are now very rare exceptions) a condemnation commissioner receives ten dollars a day for each day upon which he acts as commissioner in a procceding, provided the session of the commission lasts not less than one full hour. Often it is less, through no fault of the commissioners, as, for instance, when the parties are not ready to proceed. I say that very frequently, although a commissioner may have sacrificed practically half a day, he cannot be paid even this small amount of ten dollars.

There doubtless are men who, when they have nothing else to do, would be very glad to be upon a civil service list and serve for that compensation. But no man of any kind of success in life can afford to take this work to the exclusion of other work; and it will be conceded by all reasonable men that a person who is willing to wait for the casual sittings of these commissioners to earn not to exceed ten dollars a day is not likely to be a man of the qualifications which are desirable for a good condemnation commissioner. Wherefore it would certainly seem doubtful whether a competitive list could be made up which would improve the tone of the commissionerships.

BUT for certain defects in the bill passed at the last session of the Legislature with the intent to carry out a constitutional amendment providing for excess condemnation and give some relief from present burdensome methods in condemning property, the Mayor would have given his approval to the bill. As it was, he expressed his sympathy with the intent of the bill and returned it to the Legislature for reconstruction into correct form. The present article by Mr. Lewinson makes suggestions for further improving the practice in condemnation procedure so as to lessen the delays and stop the hardships to which owners are subject.

Let the Court Fix the Compensation.

There is only one single practicable cure for these particular evils; this consists in changing the law so that the compensation of these commissioners shall be, in each instance, such gross amount as shall be fixed by the Supreme Court after the completion of the proceeding and upon notice to all parties in interest, as was provided for by special legislation in the recent case of the new court house proceeding.

I have often felt that it would be another salutary reform if the law provided that the commissioners could, in any particular proceeding, apply to the Supreme Court for the designation by the court of an expert witness, his compensation to be taxed in the proceedings; particularly in such proceedings where (as is only too often the case) the testimony of the experts retained by the respective parties is irreconcilable and therefore of little aid to the commission.

Of course the owner cannot be denied the right to produce witnesses of his own; but I am quite certain that if the practice were that the court designate an expert the effect of that would be to discourage owners from going to the expense (often very considerable) of hiring witnesses of their own. I understand that in the Court House proceeding one owner's "expert" received a fee of ten thousand dollars for his services.

If the suggestion were carried out, that the court should select experts, then nothing better could happen, as a practical matter, than that the Real Estate Board of New York should be constituted a body from among whom to designate these official witnesses, because that organization maintains a particularly effective service of that kind: assigning the making of estimates of value among its members in accordance with an established method of selection, which secures the best expert opinion for each particular location and parcel.

The foregoing suggestions, in my opinion, cover the principal weakness of the present practice.

There are other things which might be required which would lessen the delays and cure many other hardships of these proceedings. I would like to see the law amended so as to make the following changes as well, namely:

File Official Searches.

1. With every application for the appointment of a condemnation commission the petitioner should be required to file official searches, or else the certificate of a recognized title insurance company, showing who is the present owner of record of each parcel affected, and also all liens and incumbrances then existing against such parcel. The returns on such searches or certificate shall be deemed prima facie evidence of the facts thus disclosed. Any party desiring to contest a return so made shall file an affidavit stating concisely the nature of his claim; and the condemnation commissioners may then determine the issue or issues thus raised.

(This simple procedure, which modern methods of searching have made practicable, will do away with a great deal of time-consuming labor in the ascertainment of title and liens.)

Tax Department's Appraisal.

2. Such petitioner shall also file with his papers a certificate from the Board of Tax Commissioners stating the value of each parcel affected as appraised by the city for the purpose of taxation.

(The city ought not to be heard, either in law or morals, to say that property is worth less than the amount at which it assesses it for taxation. An additional reason for this suggestion will appear further on.)

3. With the filing of the petition for the appointment of condemnation commissioners the applicant shall also file in the County Clerk's office a notice of lis pendens; and the proceeding shall not in any way be affected by any rights, liens or other interests which may arise subsequent to the filing of such notice of lis pendens.

(This is in analogy to the practice in foreclosures, and there is no reason why this should not be done. It will often save much time by obviating the necessity of considering interests which may arise subsequent to the appointment of a commission, but prior to the vesting of title.)

When to Vest Title.

4. Title in the property sought to be condemned shall always vest in the petitioner (city), thirty days after the entry of the order appointing commissioners, unless a notice of appeal from such order shall have been filed prior to the expiration of said thirty days, in which case title shall vest thirty days after entry of the order of affirmance.

(There is no reason why, when once the court has determined that the petitioner is entitled to maintain his condemnation proceedings, the title should not vest. This is infinitely better than the "suspended" ownership otherwise created, and it prevents a situation which has sometimes arisen, when, between the commencement of the proceedings and the vesting by confirmation, values have so changed that the evidence has to be taken all over again. This suggestion is made in connection with the succeeding one, which, if adopted, makes it doubly valuable.)

Prompt Payment.

5. Whenever title shall have thus vested, any party to the proceeding claiming to be entitled thereto shall be permitted to make an application to the

BUILDING CODE REVISION PLANNED

Order in Which the Subjects Will Be Taken Up—The Fire Limits Will Be First Considered—New Suggestions Invited.

TEMPORARILY released of his duties as Superintendent of Buildings for the Borough of Manhattan, Mr. Rudolph P. Miller has taken up at the direction of the Board of Aldermen the task of assisting the Building Committee in revising the Building Code. The existing code went into effect in December, 1899, since which date changes in the municipal government and in building practice have occurred that in the opinion of the authorities long ago rendered a revision of the building law advisable.

Of all the cities of the United States, New York was the first to enact specific laws relating to the construction of buildings. In a primitive way up to the year 1860 public supervision over buildings was exercised by Fire Wardens. The regulations of that period aimed simply to prevent the erection of frame buildings in downtown streets. In the year 1866 the line was advanced from 52nd to 86th street, between the North and East rivers, and by the year 1899 to 190th street in Manhattan and 149th street in the Bronx.

In 1860 a separate building law for New York City was enacted by the Legislature. It created a Department of Buildings and provided for the appointment of a Superintendent of Buildings, a Deputy Superintendent and eight inspectors. The first Superintendent of Buildings was Jonas N. Phillips and the first Deputy Superintendent was James M. MacGregor. By a series of progressive steps the building law was brought up to a high standard of excellence, for the art of building is progressive, and in order to keep up with modern methods the code needed almost yearly revision.

Between 1892 and 1899, however, the code remained substantially unaltered, except for changes in the fire limits and a reduction of the allowable height for non-fireproof buildings from 85 to 75 feet. The existing code was framed by a commission of which Building Commissioner Thomas J. Brady was chairman. The late William J. Fryer was the editor of the code. Only seven important amendments have been made to the code since its enactment, one being the theatre section. Mr. Miller says it was a good code and would still be good if amendments were made to meet new conditions. It is an advantage to continue an existing code, not only because the public is familiar with it but also because it has been the subject of thorough interpretation by the department and of judicial decisions by the courts.

Mr. Miller's duty is, however, to revise the latest of several successive revisions, and particularly the one inherited by the present building committee, of which Alderman James Hamilton is chairman, from the building committee of the preceding administration, of which committee Alderman A. W. Herbst was chairman.

Planning the Work.

For convenience in discussing the several parts of the Amended Code the sections are to be considered by Mr. Miller in about the following order: Anyone desiring to discuss any of these subjects is invited by Mr. Miller to communicate with him at room 1227, Municipal Building, indicate the particular part of the code he wishes to discuss and he will then in due time be notified by mail when the questions will come up. By arrangement with Mr. Miller the Record and Guide will keep its readers informed of the progress of the work, so that all those interested may, if they have any further suggestion of real importance to offer, submit it at the opportune time.

The grouping arrangement of subjects is made entirely for convenience and is not to be considered as in any way indicative of any sections in the final draft. CONDEMNATION PROCEDURE.

court, on motion, for an order directing the condemning party to pay over to him "pro tanto" the amount which in the certificate of the Board of Tax Commissioners is stated to be the assessed value of the parcel affected. Notice of such application shall be given to such parties and in such manner as the court may direct; and the court may also require the petitioning party to give an undertaking of indemnity, as the circumstances may warrant.

(I have already argued that the city ought not to be heard to say that the property is worth less than its appraised value in any event. So, premising, I see no reason why that much should not be paid to the claimants at the outset. This will leave comparatively moderate interests for a contest; and the great benefit to the city will be that upon such amounts thus paid the city will save interest charges. But the main benefit of this benign provision would be in preventing the great hardship of the present method whereby owners are deprived both of their property and of its value; sometimes for periods of such great length as to create, in many instances, real suffering and great injustice.)

Taxing the Costs.

6. Just as we tax the city's costs and expenses as part of the proceedings which are paid for on condemnation, so equally the costs of the property owner whose land is being taken should, after having been taxed and approved by the court, be added to the cost of the proceeding and included in the assessments, so that the property owner may have his award without any loss for expenses and attorneys' fees.

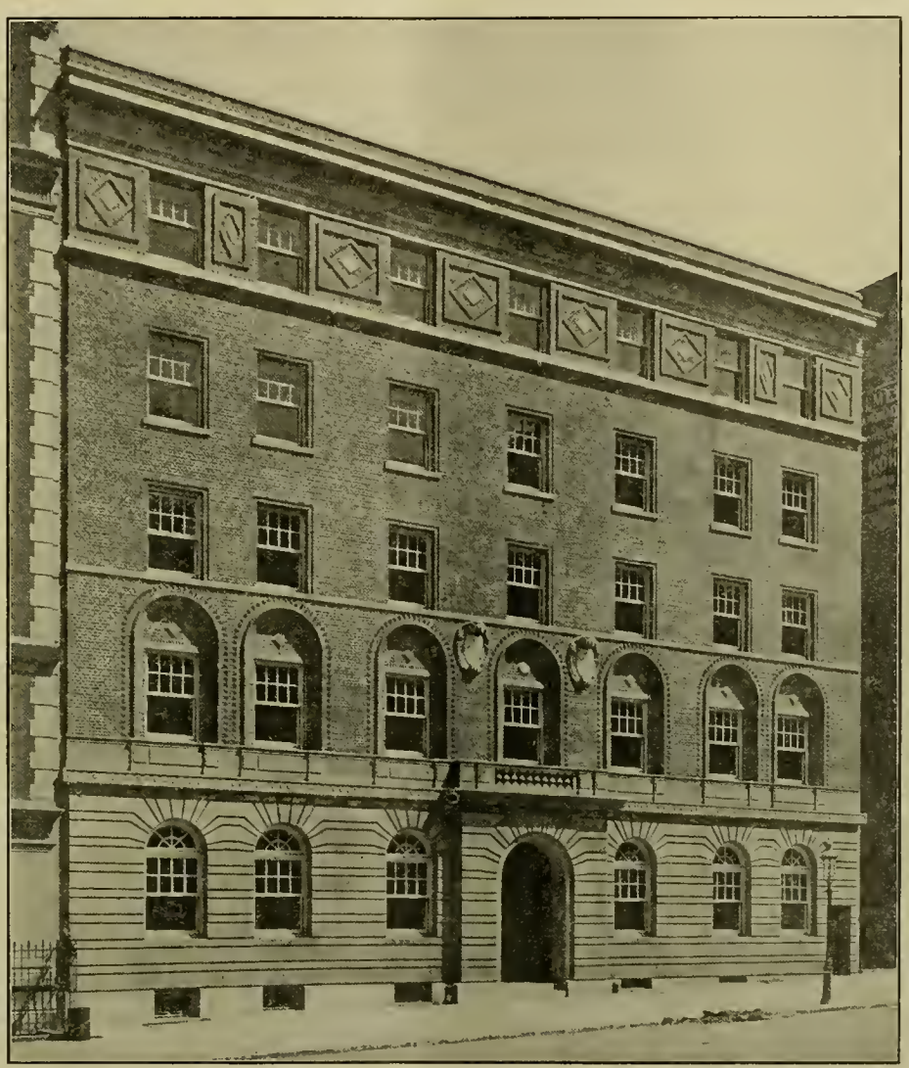
(Under the law the commissioners may give an owner only the fair market value which the property has at the time it is being taken. This "market" value means a price which a person willing, but not obliged, to sell can realize from another who is willing, but not compelled, to buy. This limitation of the award is sound enough in theory; but it doubtless works a hardship very frequently.)

REAL HOMES FOR SELF-SUPPORTING WOMEN

Responding to a Pressing Need, Several New Hotels Are to Be Opened—The Devinclare Residence Managers Will Supervise the Recreations of Their Guests.

RECENT real estate and building developments prove conclusively that New York is fully awake to the necessity for providing suitable housing facilities for the constantly increasing number of self-supporting women. A large percentage of these women have no families. Many have come to the city from distant towns, but have not the time, means or inclination to maintain separate homes. They have depended largely upon boarding and rooming houses, but few of these have ever been homes except in name.

These young women are demanding and have a right to better accommodations than they have been able to obtain in the past and there is no question that better housing can be had for little more outlay, with rooms furnished with greater care and kept in better shape than those found in the average boarding-house, where second-hand and oftentimes ready-to-be discarded furniture is used. It is the personal touch in the room that makes it a home rather than merely a place to sleep. Rooms should have furniture that will stand on its own legs and hangings that have not lost their freshness. The materials need not be silk or velour; chintz is far more comfortable and homelike as well as being more sanitary. A built-in bookcase and a well placed bank of drawers make all the difference in the world to the woman of education and taste who, although she has to spend many hours of her day in gainful employment, still has a longing for the little comforts that make life worth living.



A further and most natural demand is that the meals should be improved both in quality and service. Only one who has been forced to live in a boarding house can possibly know the feeling aroused as the front door is opened and the boarder is greeted by the familiar odor of the menu always scheduled for that day. A calendar is unnecessary; the sense of smell will quickly inform her what day of the week it is. Much can and will be done to improve the service, and vary the menu for the business women, with the result that their efficiency will be increased as well as the profits of those catering to their wants and necessities.

Hotels managed and run exclusively for women guests and more particularly for the woman who must work, seem to give the best response to the quest for real homes. The Martha Washington, in East 29th street, the first hotel exclusively for women guests has prospered from its opening. During the past two weeks one new hotel has been opened and one hotel corporation has been chartered and is making preparations to erect a modern building.

The Hotel Avon, at the corner of 30th street and Lexington avenue, has been reorganized, remodeled and refurnished for the exclusive use of women. Many innovations have been introduced by the new management for the comfort and convenience of the guests. On account of its central location and the quality of the service offered, the hotel should attract many women as permanent guests.

This hostelry, which will be known as the "Business Women's Hotel," was formally opened Tuesday evening. The lobby was decorated with palms and flowers and an orchestra provided an interesting musical program. The entire building was open for inspection and on the opening date forty-two women had registered and will make this their home.

The Hotel Irvin for women has recently been chartered and has had preliminary plans prepared for the erection of an up-to-date fireproof building on the property at 308 to 312 West 30th street. This hotel will be twelve stories in height and will represent an investment of about $500,000 when ready for its opening.

West 120th Street. Lawlor & Haase, Architects.

DEVINCLARE RESIDENCE FOR SELF-SUPPORTING WOMEN.

A third project having the same object, but conducted along different lines, is now nearing completion in the Harlem section of the city. This building will be known as the Devinclare Residence for Self-Supporting Women. It is situated in the north side of 120th street, 200 feet east of Amsterdam avenue, and was built from plans by Lawlor & Haase, architects, 69 Wall street. The building with the ground it occupies, is the gift of Mrs. Susan Devin to the authorities of the Roman Catholic Church. The management of the project will be under the direction of the Regina Angelorum of the Sisters of Mercy.

The building is five stories in height, with basement, roof-garden and sun parlor. It occupies a plot 75x90 feet. Harvard brick and buff Indiana limestone were the materials employed in the construction and the building is fireproof throughout.

In the basement is the heating and service plant, laundry, service dining-room, kitchen and trunk and coal storage space.

The first floor has an entrance lobby and reception room, a large living-hall, the main dining-room, with serving-room and kitchen. A small chapel, having a seating capacity of 75, is also on this floor.

The second, third and fourth floors have all the same layout. They contain private bedrooms arranged for the accommodation of one or two guests, with baths and toilet rooms and a sewing-room on each floor.

The fifth floor has a large dormitory to be used by transient guests when the rooms are all occupied and where the prices for accommodations are considerably lower. There is also upon this floor a large assembly room where social gatherings and dances may be held.

The building is steam-heated and is lighted throughout by electricity and has telephone conveniences on every floor. The rooms will be furnished comfortably and in good taste. It is proposed to provide room and board at prices ranging from $3 to $5 per week, according to the location of the room and the number occupying it.

This project is not a charity in any sense of the word, nor is it intended for profit. If the managers are able to provide better quarters and board than can be found in the average boarding-house, supervise in a general way the recreations of the guests and still manage to break even, they will feel that their purpose has been accomplished.

The National Association of Real Estate Exchanges is to have its seventh annual convention in Pittsburgh on July 8, 9, 10 and 11 next.

The annual expenditure of New York City for the care of destitute aliens amounts to $2,000,000. This is one of the many reasons why rents and taxes are high.

The "deadly fire peril" which some fire prevention experts have said exists in the New York City schools was effectually overcome in the case of the fire which broke out in the Bronx school house, by the vigilance and efficiency of the fire department on the one hand and the efficacy of the children's fire drill on the other, two safeguards which have never failed.

While general business is rather flat at present it is the concensus of opinion of merchants and manufacturers that stocks of goods are low, and that a moderate increase of demand would practically exhaust them in a short time. It is conceded in nearly all quarters that business would revive quickly if the railroad rate matter were disposed of satisfactorily.

The city's credit improves under better municipal management. With the exception of one year, the yield from city bond sales has annually decreased during a long succession of years, until this present year, when it cost the city less to borrow than it did in the preceding year. The yield of the city bond sale of this year is reported at 4.18 per cent. as against a yield of 4.49 per cent. in 1913. For several years the city's credit had been strengthening, but during the money stringency it was not possible to effect an actual decrease in the price of capital to reward a conservative and really economical administration.

Growth Without Prosperity.

According to the Census Bureau the present population of the City of New York is 5,333,537. This is an increase of 566,000 over 1912, or almost 12 per cent. It would be interesting to know how and why the Census Bureau selected this particular rate of increase. During the decade from 1900 to 1910 the percentage of increase in population of the City of New York was approximately 38 per cent. or 3.8 per cent. for each year. If the same rate of growth were continued the increase for the four years would be nearer 15 than 12 per cent. and the existing total would be nearer 5,500,000 than 5,300,000. This comment, however, is not intended to cast any doubt on the validity of the estimate of the Census Bureau. In all probability the rate of increase has diminished. From 1900 to 1910 the change in industrial, commercial and financial conditions favored New York. It was a period of industrial and financial concentration, the economic effects of which were peculiarly beneficial to the financial and commercial metropolis of the country.

That phase of the economic development of the American people has come to a close, and the result has undoubtedly been to dry up some of the sources of the prosperity of New York. The moderate amount of stock speculation compared to 1901 or 1906 is in itself sufficient very considerably to diminish the purchasing power of New York City and its demand for labor. For these and other reasons the Census Bureau is almost certainly right in estimating a smaller rate of increase during the past four years than that which prevailed during the previous decennial period. Indeed, the probability is that the decrease has been greater rather than smaller than the official estimate. We shall know next year when the state census is taken; but in the meantime we cannot help wondering how and where this enormous increase in the population of New York City is swallowed up.

According to the bureau's figures there are some 566,000 more people living in New York now than there were four years ago. In other words, New York has added to her inhabitants a city of approximately the same size as Baltimore or Pittsburgh.

Its industries must have increased sufficiently to provide all these people with means of livelihood. At the present time the increase must be still continuing at the rate of something like 160,000 inhabitants every year. Yet in spite of the fact of this expansion in population the ground value of real estate has not, except in a few favored districts, perceptibly increased since 1910. On the contrary, it has in many parts of Manhattan actually decreased, and in all probability the full measure of this decrease has not yet been written off on the assessment rolls of the city. It is certainly an extraordinary fact that a city can add to the number of its inhabitants in four years another city equal in size to Baltimore or Pittsburgh and yet witness during that period stationary or declining real estate values.

Discrimination Against New York City.

There are other interesting phases to the recent estimate by the Census Bureau of the population of New York. According to that calculation there are approximately 5,300,000 people now living in the metropolis against about 9,900,000 living in the whole State. New York City, that is, has within its limits over 53 per cent. of the population of the State. If the representation in the State Legislature were proportionate to the population, there would be more Assemblymen and Senators from this city than there would be from all the rest of the State put together. But, of course, the representation is not proportionate to the population. When the existing State constitution was framed, almost twenty years ago, the possible future supremacy of New York City in population was anticipated. It was expressly provided that the control of the Legislature should remain with the rural districts.

New Yorkers have always chafed under this discrimination. They have believed and believed rightly that the tax system of the State has imposed excessive burdens on the business of this city and that in the distribution of the benefits the rural districts were favored. Under the provisions of the existing constitution the supremacy of the other parts of the State will continue, no matter what proportion of the population comes to reside in New York City. This is manifestly unfair, and a strenuous effort will be made to remedy this unfairness in the State Constitutional Convention which will assemble next April. Indeed it looks as if the controversy about the method of districting the State will dominate proceedings of the convention. The chief object of the Democrats in providing for the partisan designation of candidates for the position of delegate was that of securing a majority of Democrats pledged to a new system of districting.

When the question of whether a convention should or should not be held was submitted to popular vote a few weeks ago, the local Democratic organization got out a considerable vote in favor of the constitutional convention especially for the purpose of securing an opportunity to redistrict the State. The Republicans, on the other hand, exercised their influence against a convention because they did not want the question to be raised, and they almost succeeded in defeating the project. The convention will be held and New York will make a resolute attempt to do away with the discrimination against this city which has been written into the fundamental law of the State. It is a great pity that the deliberations of a constitutional convention should be prevented by the injection of a fierce partisan controversy, but New Yorkers can hardly be expected to submit without protest to a system of representation which deprives them of the influence on the policy of the State to which their numbers and their wealth entitle them.

The Work of the Advisory Council.

The subcommittee on plan and scope of the advisory council of real estate interests has made a most admirable report. The committee points out that the most important function of the Advisory Council will be to harmonize conflicting views of public policy which may be entertained by public officials on the one hand and on the other by the property owners and their organizations. It proposes to work wherever possible through these local organizations, but in order that it may give really useful advice to these organizations, and in order that its opinions may be listened to with sufficient respect by local and State officials, its action and counsel must be based upon full information and the most careful possible consideration of the facts. The committee considers consequently that the Advisory Council will need the assistance of a small permanent organization which will make a business of acquainting itself with the facts and of a fund large enough to permit it occasionally to employ expert assistance.

It is very much to be hoped that these recommendations of the subcommittee will be accepted. The Record and Guide has frequently pointed out that no real estate organization can exercise any sufficient influence on public policy as long as it merely voices the opinions and the interests of its members. The policy of a great municipality has become more and more a matter which cannot be effectively criticised except in the light of expert knowledge, such as can be obtained only by men who make a business of investigating municipal problems. Any powerful organization of the real estate interests must be able to reinforce its advice and opinions with authentic facts, and that is precisely what the subcommittee wants to do. If it succeeds, a new era of usefulness and influence will begin for the real estate organizations of New York City.

City Planning for Newark.

The latest report of the City Planning Commission of Newark summarizes much of the work which the commission has been doing during the last three years. Messrs. E. P. Goodrich and George B. Ford, who have been acting throughout this period as the experts of the commission, have tried to assemble in this one volume a discussion of almost all the phases of city planning. As there was virtually no precedent for this idea, the authors had to feel their way. Presumably it is in the hope of counteracting in the public mind any feeling of resentment because of the criticisms necessarily contained in the report that marked attention is paid to Newark's material advantages in the introductory pages of what is on the whole an exceptionally interesting, as well as highly scientific and complete consideration of the problem.

The opening chapter, which has to do with widening and extending streets, contains practical and pertinent suggestions, but more attention could advantageously have been devoted to showing the economic value of each of the suggestions made and combining with that a table of their relative urgency.

A chapter on decorative improvements consists of schemes for civic centers that have been presented to the commission from time to time by local architects. As yet the commission has not worked out a scheme of its own for these architectural problems, because it is not an urgent matter when compared with others on which attention has been concentrated. There are chapters on harbor development, public markets, trolley transportation, the Morris canal and municipal recreation. A review of the commission's work cites a number of other reports which have been published from time to time by this commission, including reports on housing, street traffic, paving and signs.

The community can well afford to give careful attention to the proposals contained in the present report. Apparently the most urgent matters have now been examined and discussed, but others should be considered if the commission is to furnish a comprehensive plan for the whole city. The subject of the water-front, the railroads, the streets, street fittings, sub-structures, rapid transit, industrial districts, market system, housing, recreation, parks and parkways, civic structures, restrictions, and finally the means of paying for improvements, are all matters and subjects yet unfinished. The ideal city planning report should cover all the subjects referred to in this report and should consist of resumes of the previous reports on each of the special subjects considered. The commission and the experts would have a clearer perspective and sense of proportion with regard to the whole problem.

Is New York the Biggest City?

While the City of New York (proper) contained in the 1910 census 4,766,883 inhabitants, it is officially estimated that on the first of July next it will hold 5,583,871 inhabitants. In "the metropolitan district" of New York which includes not only the city proper, but a large suburban territory, that is substantially a part of the metropolis, making 616,927 acres, there was in 1910, 6,474,568 inhabitants as compared with 7,252,963 in the metropolitan district of London, in 1911. New York was increasing at the rate of 40.5 per cent. in ten years and London at the rate of only 10.2 per cent.

It is now claimed by some statisticians, that New York's metropolitan district in this year of 1914 contains 7,454,296 inhabitants, against 7,448,681 in London. If this is correct, New York is now the greatest city in the world.

New York the Greatest Seaport.

According to statistics prepared by the Department of Commerce at Washington, New York is the greatest seaport in the world, having in 1913 had 14,464,161 tons of entered shipping and 14,370,619 of cleared shipping. Hamburg, Antwerp, London. Rotterdam and Hong Kong came after in amount of shipping entered and cleared.

EXCESS CONDEMNATION.

Why the Mayor Was Obliged to Disapprove of the McGrath Bill.

OWING to defects in the legislative bill intended to put in operation the municipal machinery for taking property by excess condemnation as provided for in a late amendment to the State Constitution, the city will not get the benefit of the new system immediately. Unfortunately, the title to the McGrath bill gave little or no indication of its contents and therefore received little or no attention from the public press, else certain defects in its construction might have been pointed out and remedied. As it was, the Mayor was obliged to withhold his approval from the bill while yet in sympathy with its purpose.

The theory of the bill is to allow the city to take more property than is physically needed for the particular improvement and to place the trial of condemnation cases in the Supreme Court without juries. The defects which the Mayor found in the bill and on which he based his disapproval were these:

"1. The law is to take effect immediately.

"2. It stops the present procedure in condemnation immediately.

"3. Throwing upon the courts the great number of condemnation proceedings that will be prosecuted in the near future will so crowd the machinery of the courts as to seriously interfere with their business.

"4. Although, as said above, this bill will throw the extra burden upon the courts, apparently no attempt has been made to take up with the Appellate Divisions the question of providing for additional judges, and additional parts to meet the extra burdens.

"5. The title of this bill contains no reference to excess condemnation. The question of excess condemnation has been considered of such great importance that a constitutional amendment has been made and voted for by the people, and yet no warning in the title conveys to the readers' mind the fact that excess condemnation is provided for in the bill. I believe that the bill on this ground alone is unconstitutional."

There were many minor mechanical defects in the bill, such as failure to provide for damages for intended regulation of streets and avenues. The Mayor regretted the necessity for disapproving the bill, but the matter was one of such great importance that he deemed it his duty to return the bill to the Legislature so that it may be reconstructed and put into correct form as soon as possible.

REAL ESTATE QUESTIONS.

Which the Advisory Council Will Be Called Upon to Consider.

In the report which Messrs. Cyrus C. Miller and Laurence M. D. McGuire, a subcommittee on plan and scope, have made to the Advisory Council of Real Estate Interests, some extracts from which have appeared in the daily press, they give a list of the matters which the council may be called upon to consider in behalf of property owners. The list is as interesting as it is formidable:

(1) The personnel of the commission to be appointed by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment for the purpose of recommending the boundaries of districts and property regulations in compliance with the provisions of that act of the Legislature empowering the Board of Estimate and Apportionment to regulate and limit the height and bulk of buildings hereafter erected, and to determine the area of yards, courts and other open spaces.

(2) The hearings to be given by the State Factory Investigation Commission relative to the proposed recodification of the labor law.

(3) The hearings to be given before the Mayor's Commission on Taxation.

(4) The repeal of the Secured Debt Law.

(5) The recodification of the new Building Code.

(6) The court house site and the civic center in all its details.

(7) A definite plan by which the various departments of State and city issuing orders affecting real estate may be combined in one department and until such combination is brought about, some definite procedure for the issuing of orders so they will not conflict.

(8) To consider the activities of various self-constituted bodies, which have been active in framing laws which are harmful to real estate and to confer with them on the manner of accomplishing necessary reforms so as to conserve the interests of the real estate owner.

(9) Proper representation before the Industrial Board of the State Labor Department and its various subcommittees, with a view to minimizing the requirements in low and comparatively safe buildings.

The committee believes that the various real estate interests of the city have looked forward to the formation of a council like this and will come to depend upon its labors more and more as its efficiency is shown.

THE WEEK'S REAL ESTATE NEWS

Brokerage Sales, Auctions, Foreclosure Suits, Building Loans, etc., Together With Brief Personal Items.

Interest Centered on the Bronx

United Owners New Activity.

At the last meeting of the United Real Estate Owners' Associations a committee, with L. Victor Weil as chairman, was appointed to study the new factory laws and to suggest amendments that may make them less burdensome. The committee will endeavor to obtain a more accurate definition of the word "factory," besides bringing the various provisions of the law to the attention of the city officials in an effort to enlist their support for possible modifications. The billboard committee has been working on a new ordinance to take the place of the one recently introduced in the Board of Aldermen. At the meeting held Tuesday the provisions of the proposed ordinance were considered and discussed. It is expected that it will be in shape for submision within a week or two.

PRIVATE REALTY SALES.

Considerable interest in Bronx properties was manifested this week, principally along the line of the proposed transit improvements. The West Bronx in particular attracted attention on account of the big auction sale, and buying along the line of the Jerome avenue extension. Other interesting deals in that borough concerned a large plot on the Grand Boulevard and Concourse and the block front on Fordham Road. In the other boroughs no new developments were noticeable, nor did there seem to be any indication of an improvement in the condition of the market. The more important deals concerned a loft building in 32nd street traded for Brooklyn and New Jersey property, similar structures on Audubon avenue and Broadway also traded for out of town holdings, and an apartment house in West 72nd street.

The total number of sales reported and not recorded in Manhattan this week was 30, as against 28 last week and 39 a year ago.

The number of sales south of 59th street was 8, compared with 12 last week, and 13 a year ago.

The sales north of 59th street aggregated 22, as compared with 16 last week and 26 a year ago.

The total number of conveyances in Manhattan was 143, as against 165 last week, 17, having stated considerations totaling $577,350. Mortgages recorded this week number 87, involving $2,832,037, as against 95 last week, aggregating $2,822,764.

From the Bronx 24 sales at private contract were recorded, as against 22 last week, and 14 a year ago.

The amount involved in Manhattan and Bronx auction sales this week was $1,103,393, compared with $1,320,170 last week, making a total since January 1 of $14,739,487. The figures for the corresponding week last year were $583,687, and the total from January 1, 1913, to May 3, 1913, was $20,565,743.

John Miles in $500,000 Deal.

John Miles has purchased through E. Nelson Erhart, the 6-story apartment house, "Greenville Hall," at 5000 Broadway, on plot 118.6x187.6, and containing 84 apartments. The building was completed about a year ago by the Hazel Real Estate Co. In part payment Mr. Miles gave 100x215 on Northern avenue which he recently bought from R. B. Dula, and also 60 acres at Elmsford, N. Y.

Haskins Estate Sells Block.

The Winnie Co., Maurice Muller, president, has purchased through Porter & Co. from the Haskins estate the south half of the two-block-long panel extensions from Fordham road to 192d street, between the Grand Boulevard and Concourse and Creston avenue, on which stands the old Haskin's mansion. The parcel sold extends from Fordham road north to the middle line of 191st street, when cut through, and has frontages of 128 feet on Fordham road, about 370 feet on both the Concourse and Creston avenue. The 191st street frontage will be about 200 feet, and there will also be a frontage of about 88 feet in 190th street. The new owners plan to improve with apartment houses.

Prominent Institution on Grand Boulevard.

The Episcopal Home of the Holy Comforter for Aged People has bought through George R. Read & Co. from Major R. Dickinson Jewett, the northwest corner of the Grand Boulevard and Concourse and 196th street, having a frontage of 200 feet on the Concourse and 170 feet in the street. It is reported that a new home will be built on the plot.

J., adjoining the Morris County Golf Club. In the same deal the Mortgage Financing Co. sold 36 one-family houses in 66th street, between Eighteenth and Twentieth avenues, Brooklyn, to the Meany Realty Co., which gave in part payment 116 acres at Convent, N. J. The Brooklyn houses, with the four dwellings at Convent, were taken by the Bramko Co. in exchange for the 32d street loft building.

AUCTION SALES OF WEEK.

Except where otherwise stated, the properties offered were in foreclosure. Adjournments of legal sales to next week are noted under Advertised Legal Sales.

* Indicates that the property described was bid in for the plaintiff's account.

The Auction Market.

Interest this week was focused on the big Bronx sale held by Joseph P. Day and J. Clarence Davies, comprising 134 lots on University Heights, for the account of the Ellen M. Hennessy estate. The total sum realized was $284,350, the average lot price being about $2,122, or about $6,400 above the assessed valuation of the tract. The willingness of small buyers to invest, in spite of the prevailing impression of hard times, revealed a confidence in well located properties which is most encouraging.

Buying was confined in the main to local owners, William C. Bergen and John F. Kaiser being the largest individual purchasers. Mr. Bergen, a pioneer builder on University Heights, obtained for $57,850 one of the choicest parcels, a plot of 13 lots opposite Public School No. 26, just east of the gore plot at the corner of Burnside and University avenues, which brought $7,000, the highest price for any single lot offered.

Mr. Day began the sale with lot No. 97, in West 179th street. The first bid was $500, but it eventually was struck down to Philip Kaufman for $1,350. Adjoining lots were later sold for $1,425. Inside lots on Andrews avenue brought $2,400; in the west side of Loring Place $1,525, and the east side $1,975. In Hennessy Place several lots sold for $800, while in Osborne Place $950 was realized for inside lots. Most of the property on West Burnside avenue was bought by John F. Kaiser who paid $20,920 for the block front on that avenue between Loring and Hennessy Place.

At the other sales of the week, held in the Exchange salesrooms, buying was confined principally to plaintiffs and other parties in interest; of the total number of forty-one offerings, such buyers obtained thirty-one, outside buyers purchased six and four were either withdrawn or adjourned. The Bowery Savings Bank on a bid of $105,000 became the owner of the dwelling at 9 East 69th street.

For the coming week the usual assortment of miscellaneous properties will be sold by the various auctioneers, with tenements and dwellings comprising the bulk of the offerings.

BUILDING MANAGEMENT

PRACTICAL DEVICES FOR MINIMIZING THE SLIPPING HAZARD

BY H. W. MOWERY, Sales Manager, American Abrasive Metals Co.

Conducted by Raymond P. Roberts, Building Manager for the American Real Estate Co.

SLIPPING is the prime or contributing cause of probably one-fourth of all preventable industrial accidents and an indefinite number of injuries to people passing along streets, in buildings, shopping, traveling and otherwise engaged in activities not industrial. Experience and trustworthy statistics from explicit classifications, in the near future, should point the way to amended laws and new rulings, that will cover a wider field than simply stair treads in factories as at present, and make compulsory the providing of efficient anti-slip surfaces wherever needed. In the meantime architects and builders can lend their efforts and in no small measure promote the cause of universal safety by specifying and using for certain purposes such materials as will minimize the slipping hazard.

Heretofore, accidents from slipping, though they are a specific type, have received very little consideration. Federal, state and municipal departments, where such records should be obtainable, in general have no statistics that throw light on this subject. The reason for this lack of facts and figures with regard to accidents from slipping is not difficult to find, because such accidents are usually placed in various classifications that are either misleading or at best so vague as to be useless for any practical purpose. If a man working around moving machinery slips and gets caught, losing a finger or his life, the cause of the accident is given as "unguarded machinery." If a person in an office building is injured by slipping on a metal elevator door saddle it is classified as "injured getting on and off elevator cars."

No Accurate Statistics.

Though it is impossible at present to show any exact statistics, nevertheless there are instances where the available information tends to show the seriousness of slipping as a hazard. The United Gas Improvement Company, of Philadelphia, investigated 2,200 industrial accidents and found that double the average from any one cause, or exactly 12.8 per cent. were from "slipping, tripping and falls." The Massachusetts Industrial Accident Board in the year ending June 30, 1913, summarized a total of 89,694 accidents. Of this total there were 8,411 or 9.3 per cent due to "falls," as follows:

		Percentage of accidents due to falls.
From fixed ladders	19	.02
Into holes, pits, etc	459	5.45
Over obstructions	481	5.71
From permanent structures	162	1.92
From poles	60	.71
From or with portable ladders	802	9.53
From scaffolding, etc	780	9.27
Slipping on floor level	1,381	16.42
Down stairways	858	10.20
Miscellaneous	3,409	40.77

It should be noted particularly that there were 2,239 accidents from "falls on stairs" and "slipping on floor level." It does not embrace those accidents to the general public through slipping on sidewalks, coal-hole covers or stairs. In New York City, according to the coroner's office, there were 327 immediate deaths due to falls on stairs and sidewalks in 1912 and 1913. Owing to the nature of the classification, these deaths must have been caused largely by slipping. And it is reasonable to assume that there must have been a very great number of subsequent deaths and disabilities from the same cause.

While it actually pays to prevent accidents in general, there is an added reason for preventing slipping. By providing a sure foothold for workmen, efficiency is greatly increased. Firemen can not rake their fires properly when working on slippery cast or rolled metal plate. Men pulling heavy loads cannot get the best results when they have a slippery footing. Machinists often spoil heavy parts and damage costly tools by losing their balance on slippery, oily surfaces. Operatives in rolling mills, planing mills and other wood-working establishments, and industrial plants in general, not only endanger life and limb but also frequently spoil costly work through insecure footing on oily or slippery floors and other surfaces. The simple feeling that he is safe from slipping makes every operative work with more confidence and increased skill.

Move in Right Direction.

It is gratifying to note that new laws and rulings show an awakening to the need of eliminating slipping as a hazard. The amended Labor Law of New York State, 79-a, 3, requires that in all factory buildings over one story in height, the stair "treads shall be constructed and maintained in such manner as to prevent persons slipping thereon." Other States are considering similar requirements. The National Fire Protection Association, at its last annual meeting, embodied the same provision in its specifications for standard buildings. Inspectors from State labor departments and accident liability insurance companies are insisting that slippery surfaces be eliminated by the use of an efficient anti-slip material properly installed in new construction or replacing or covering ordinary materials in old structures.

In factories and office buildings probably the most common hazard from slipping is to be found in threshold plates at elevator and fire doors. These are usually of cast iron or checkered steel worn bright and slippery. A little oil or moisture makes them exceedingly dangerous. For places of this nature there is no question as to the desirability of an anti-slip material. Stair treads more than all other surfaces should be made of good durable anti-slip material and in general should be constructed with much more regard to safety than is given them. In the case of reinforced concrete stairs it is essential to give some special protection.

In new construction the proper method of protecting concrete steps against chipping and wear, and to safeguard people from slipping is by setting a 6-inch wide abrasive metal insert, flush with the surrounding cement surface, extending to within 4 inches of the stringers and held in place by metal anchors.

Station Stair Construction.

The new elevated railroad station at 38th street and Sixth avenue, Manhattan, has an excellent form of stair construction. The riser is cast with flange on back at top and on front at bottom. On these flanges rests a tread of abrasive metal, only ⅜ inch thick, with holes for fastening spaced symmetrically and front and back edges rounded off so that either edge may be the front and when worn smooth can be changed around to the back. The risers carry the load and are bolted to angles which in turn are riveted to the plate strings. For ordinary service a plate and angle riser instead of the cast iron riser is preferable.

Very few accidents happen to people going upstairs. It is when going down that they are injured most frequently and severely. Therefore, it is obvious that the foot of a person descending a stair should have a contact point that will not permit slipping. This contact point is the nosing or front edge of the step, and if accidents from slipping on stairs are to be prevented it must provide a positive anti-slip surface of extreme durability along its entire length.

If in addition to the slippery edge there is in the body of the tread a series of grooves parallel to the edge, a condition exists that is a positive menace; for a slight slip on the nosing will cause the front edge of the heel to catch in one of the grooves, pitching the persons forward, to strike on his head.

On steps a series of grooves parallel to the nosings, besides catching heels, make it almost impossible for a person descending a stair to distinguish where one step ends and other begins.

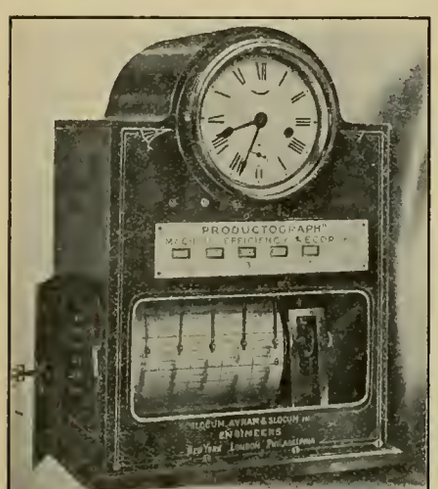
Dangers of Coal Holes.

Coal-hole and man-hole covers, drainage gratings and similar metal surfaces, as they are commonly found on the streets and sidewalks, are possibly the most vicious type of slipping hazard. Putting rivet heads in them, or making them with irregular surfaces, does not prevent slipping, unless carried to such an extreme that tripping is likely to occur. When new coal and man-hole covers are to be installed they should be so constructed and set that the cover and frame are flush with the surrounding surfaces.

In the old-style sidewalk or vault light where the glasses are set in an iron frame, there is usually a border which adds to the danger of slipping on such surfaces especially on wet or snowy days. Sometimes rivet heads are put in these borders. They make a very unpleasant surface on which to walk. In newly constructed sidewalk lights, the method of preventing slipping is by placing crosses of abrasive metal in the cement between each glass and projecting about 1-16 inch above the surface, before it hardens.

When the "lead-filled" steel plate is used in exposed places the lead is frequently removed by vandals. Considered from a purely technical point of view, a "lead-filled" steel plate is not efficient as a preventive of slipping. The lead is softer and wears away more rapidly than the steel, so that it does not project and is not the point of contact. The tops of steel ribs are the points of contact. In addition, lead itself is not an anti-slip element. It is used for bearings and is the base of all anti-friction metals, as babbitt and magnolia metal.

The efforts put forth by progressive commissions, boards and corporations show beyond all doubt that there is a general feeling of need for preventing accidents from slipping. They thought that action along this line was desirable, searched for a means to prevent such accidents and now they know that preventing slipping actually pays in greater efficiency and lower maintenaince costs as well as less expense for compensation, hospital and medical attention, lawyers' fees or breaking in new men. But while many industrialists have taken up this sort of accident prevention for their own profit, what protection against slipping hazards will be given in the ordinary factory or public place? Much of the responsibility for the existence of the enormous number of slipping hazards in all kinds of buildings can be laid directly to the architect. It rests with him to specify and insist upon the use of efficient and durable anti-slip surfaces wherever people must walk.

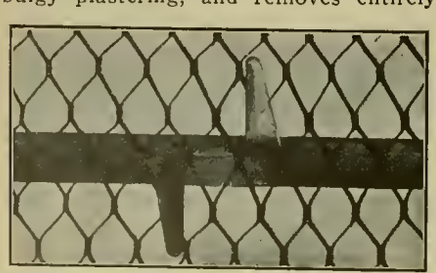


USEFUL APPLIANCES

Novelties, New Applications of Familiar Devices and the Trend of Invention, Designed to Aid the Architect, Builder and Building Manager, Described Without Regard to Advertising Consideration.

A Machinery Detectograph.

WHAT the detectograph is to the detective so the "Productograph" could be to the building manager. This device gives a positive record of the work each machine or engine in the mechanical department of a building performs, how long it operates and under what conditions it was operated. It checks off the possibility of wasteful, slow speed or excessive racing. It is a device that finds a position on the top of the manager's roll top desk or on the wall, and there it gives a record by minutes during the entire day of just how efficient each machine has been and permits a comparison at a glance.



It furnishes an accurate and permanent record of the operation of any kind of a machine to which it may be attached, according to the manufacturers, Slocum, Avram, Slocum, Inc., 87 Nassau street. On an indelible chart responsibility for delays and break-downs is fixed beyond dispute. Furthermore, it eliminates the necessity of providing supervision in mechanical departments, all of which is taken care of mechanically in the manager's own office. In operation immediately a machine begins to work the pin makes a mark across the chart in the space corresponding to the machine no matter in what part of the building the machine may be. This marking is arranged so that the rate of speed can be seen at a glance, each hundredth mark or multiple thereof being extended as shown in the illustration. It is a positive check on machines which are rented on a basis of royalty, according to their production, and for this reason it would seem to have a value on brick manufacturing plants where royalties are based upon machine outputs.

Prongs Hold Metal Lath.

A NOTICEABLE improvement in the use of metal lath is made possible by the use of a prong studding that grips the lath, as shown in the illustration, preventing skipping on tieing, sagging and bulgy plastering, and removes entirely the necessity of using wire bonds to fasten the lath to studding in partition and fireproofing work. The prongs grip the lath on both sides and are affixed to the lath by a sharp blow of a hammer. Being a composite part of the studding itself, there can be no slipping or warping of the fabric upon which the plaster is laid. Furthermore, it makes possible the drawing taut of the lath with more force than ordinarily can be exerted by the use of wire and plyers.

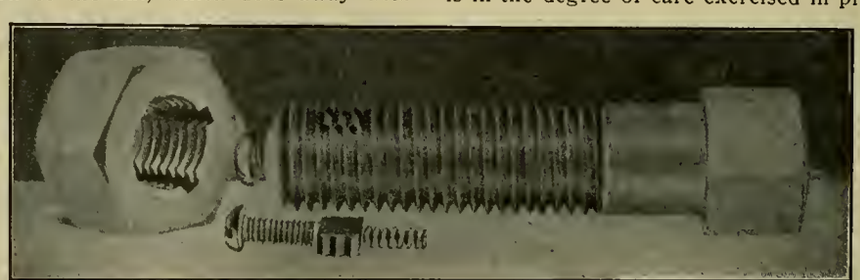
Combines Gas and Coal Stove.



HERE is a device to appeal to prospective builders as well as to occupants of flats and small apartments. It is in the form of a coal stove combined with a gas stove that permits the use of coal in winter when the surplus heat may be used to good advantage for warming the abode, while in the summer months the same equipment can be used for cooking by gas, giving heat on the utensil where it is needed without unnecessarily heating up the house. The illustration shows the device as it is being turned out by the Valley Star Stove Company, of Wheeling, West Virginia. The stove, according to the manufacturers, is simply made. The gas burners can be removed as easily as a lid can be taken off an ordinary stove and yet the heating efficiency is not sacrificed.

A New Patented Nut Lock.

THIS newly patented device is in the form of a nut lock, the basic idea of which is the off-setting of some of the threads by a screw attachment fixed in the center of the bolt. The features claimed for it are that it retains its tensile, bending and shearing strength and locks automatically at the slightest turn of the nut, which does away with the use of washers. The thread in the end of the bolt can be tapped out of standard or filled with composition to keep unauthorized persons from meddling, and it makes jarring loose of mechanical parts impossible.

The device is said to be not only novel, but safe, simple, durable and effective. The set screw in the end of the bolt moves the threads in or out of alignment, unlocking or locking the nut automatically with a click. The tension is off the spring when it is locked. No parts are exposed to the elements and the set screw is removed after locking.

Patching Broken Wash Stands.

FREQUENTLY accidents happen to iron, porcelain and soapstone tubs, bowls and wash trays, causing them to crack, but not sufficiently damaging the fixture, providing a proper cement can be applied. For cases of this kind a satisfactory cement may be made that will stand hot water and long use by mixing powdered litharge with concentrated glycerine. This must be applied quickly for it hardens rapidly. It is essential that the surface be dried when it is applied and that no water be permitted to touch the repaired part for at least half an hour after the cement has been applied. For indentations mix two parts by weight of mineral brown and one part of powdered litharge, three parts of iron filings with enough strong boiled linseed oil to make the consistency of putty. This must be well kneaded. For stone tubs mix twenty parts by weight of fine river sand, two parts of powdered litharge, one part fresh lime, powdered with boiled linseed oil to proper consistency for use.

Keyless Pad Lock.

ONE of the novelties being introduced in the hardware trade this year is a keyless padlock that works on the principle of a safe combination. It has a special value to contractors and office managers because it cannot be picked or opened in any way except by one who knows the combination. It has the additional value of not requiring illumination for opening, thus doing away with dangers from fire by employes striking matches in dark places where tool and supply chests are kept. It is manufactured by the American Minute Photo Company, 2214 Ogden avenue, Chicago. The locks are made of an anti-rusting metal and cannot become clogged by dust, oil, grease, water, heat or coal. More than 50,000 combinations are possible in operating the lock.

The Menacing Catch-All.

FIRE prevention is the only real economy now possible in safety planning in view of the excessive losses all over the country in spite of the fact that the expense of maintenance of fire departments is enormous and increasing as rapidly as the losses. To make our important buildings reasonably safe by preventive measures against fire would be better for the city at large than any possible expansion in the fire department that could be urged. In fact, when weighed fairly there is a great deal more efficiency on the side of the fire-fighting facilities in New York City than there is in the degree of care exercised in preventing fire. Fire-prevention has its root in ordinary cleanliness around a building. Are there any catch-all closets, areas or receptacles in your buildings?

Key Locks Light Globes On.

THERE need be no further danger of panic from sudden darkness by maliciously inclined persons, for the General Electric Company, 30 Church street, is introducing an incandescent lamp socket that affords positive protection to lamps in public or semi-public places from theft or disturbance. The locking device on these sockets is said to actually prevent the removal of the lamp by unauthorized persons. The key is removable and when it is not in position to lock or unlock the globe the bulb swivels freely in the socket, preventing injury to either lamp base or socket if an attempt is made to remove the lamp without the key. There is a special need for such a locking device in public buildings, lavatories and factories.

AN EXAMPLE OF SPECIALIZED CONSTRUCTION

The Hill Building on Tenth Avenue Has the Deepest Terra Cotta Floor Construction Ever Used in New York, and Will Be Vibrationproof and Soundproof.

DURING the past winter the steel frame for an eleven-story building intended for the printing and publishing trade was fully completed and enclosed at Tenth avenue and 36th street, and some time during the spring the owner will take possession. There is no building so tall anywhere near it, and from its upper stories one can overlook everything as far eastward as Broadway. The newcomer is a striking example of the remarkable rebuilding movement that is taking place on the far West Side.

This is the first publisher's building to come into the section, or at least so far from Broadway. It is a special building in every sense of the word. The best models of business buildings for a number of lines of industry have been built in the last two years over here where the city's great terminals are going to be established some time, where the marginal railroad is to run and where the oversea commerce of the country will center.

Specialized Construction.

What is meant by specialized construction and equipment can best be learned by a study of one of these special buildings, and for example the Hill Building. Publishers and large printers in the city have mostly had to accommodate their business to somebody's conventional loft building. Rarely have they been privileged to arrange their works as they knew they ought to be for efficient service; they have not been able to plan a logical layout of the component parts of their establishments so that there will be an orderly sequence for material and product, and comfortable working conditions for those who pass most of their conscious hours therein. Skimpy pressrooms, low ceilings, inadequate light and danger from fire have been accepted as the common lot.

Things will be different in the Hill Building, as it has been designed around its business. On the outside it is good to look at, being surfaced with ivory colored tile like the Woolworth, Candler and some other buildings. About three-fourths of its external surface is glass, which means as good light as can be obtained for a class of work requiring the keenest of perception. There will be no quivering or throbbing to this structure to wear out the nerves of its tenants; the floors are too thick and the walls too sturdy. The floor girders are double and between them is a hollow-tile arch sixteen inches deep with six inches of solid stone concrete on top, which is the deepest terra cotta floor construction that has ever been used in this city. So far as architectural skill can make it, this building is or will be vibration proof and sound proof.

Unusual Conveniences.

The floors are designed for live loads of 300 lbs. per square foot on all floors. The steel beams are spaced 8 feet on centers.

Shippers from ordinary loft buildings waste time, money and patience, and annoy their neighbors as well, because of inefficient freight-handling facilities. Into this building teams will be driven right up to the elevator doors and will discharge their loads on to the elevators without intermemediate handling or congestion. The entrance for teams is twenty feet wide, and the elevators will lift any machine or load that a truck can carry. Besides the elevator there is a spiral merchandise chute through which to send sacks or bundles to the street in a hurry. The chute is also an ideal fire-escape.

Filtered and chilled drinking water circulates through the building and hot-water is the heating medium, because it gives you just the right amount of heat.

Goldwin Starrett & Van Vleck, Architects.
Tenth Avenue at 36th Street.
THE HILL BUILDING.

Variation in humidity is the enemy of register, and with bad heat conditions is the principal cause of static electricity (a hole where printer's profits drop through). In the Hill Building the windows are closed, no dirt or noise from the outside. Over each floor is distributed a constant stream of air drawn from the street by powerful machinery, washed, tempered, and humidified, 30 cu. ft. per minute for each person on each floor. On the roof a similar set of fans exhaust the used air in the same quantity.

The Hill Publishing Company will occupy the top floors. The estimated cost of the structure, exclusive of land and equipment costs, was $650,000, and it is understood that the owner has set a rental price of $11,000 per floor for the remaining seven floors, which figures out about 63 cents per square foot for gross area. Goldwin Starrett & Van Vleck are the architects, and the Theodore Starrett Co. is the general contractor.

Need of Skilled Workmen.

The American architect is handicapped almost fatally by the lack of good artificers to work out the detail of his plans, is the opinion held by Ralph Adams Cram, consulting architect of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine. The blame is placed largely upon our school system, which does not educate craftsmen and upon those labor unions that discourage the spirit of emulation. Mr. Cram's views are expressed in a paper which was read by him before the fourth annual convention of the American Federation of Arts.

"Nearly all our expert labor in the artistic trades," says Mr. Cram, "is imported from Europe. We pay large wages to foreign workmen but refuse to educate our own people so that this financial benefit may accrue to them. In other words, our prosperity results in benefiting the alien, and we allow our citizens to degenerate, furnishing no new employment for the rising generation, but fitting it only to those limited callings which already are overstocked, and in which it can command but a minimum wage.

"Every architect knows that the success or failure of his work depends largely on the craftsmen who carry it out and complete it with all the decorative features of form and color, and yet in a nation of 100,000,000 people, with a dozen schools of architecture, practically nothing is done toward educating these same craftsmen, and we either secure the services of foreign-trained men, accept tenth-rate native work, or go without.

"Take a case in point; it is decided to build a metropolitan cathedral with little regard to cost; plans are made (we will say satisfactorily), what then? If it is to be a great and comprehensive work of art it needs (and exactly as much as it needs its architect) sculptors, painters, carvers in wood and stone, glass-makers, mosaicists, embroiderers, leather workers. Are there enough schools in America to train all the craftsmen needed in this one monument—if so, where?

Training Schools Suggested.

"One of the foolish arguments against Gothic is that it is quite dependent on the artist-craftsman, and as we have none, we must abandon the style; one of the foolish arguments in favor of classical design is that anybody can learn to carve an acanthus, therefore we had better stick to what we know we can do. Neither argument is sound; if we have no artist-craftsmen then it would be better for us to close up half the schools that are turning out architects and employ the funds for the training of the only men who can give life to the architect's designs."

3. Heating and ventilating work complete.
4. Electric wiring work complete.

These four contracts may be let separately, preferably to concerns making a specialty of the trades covered.

Blanks will be furnished to each prospective bidder, and all proposals must be made out upon such blanks, and attention is directed to the necessity of filling out all alternate estimates required.

Each bid shall be made upon the whole work covered under this specification and must be based upon the work as set forth by them and the contract drawings, and if signed by any one acting as agent for the principal, must be accompanied by a power of attorney for such signature.

It is incumbent upon each bidder to examine the existing conditions at the site before making up his proposals, and the fact of the submittal of such proposal will be considered as evidence that these conditions have been so examined and that the bidder is familiar with the terms and requirements of the drawings, specifications, contract and the bond, and thereby signifies his acceptance of each and all of them. No claim for relief on account of mistakes or omissions in bidding will be entertained, and each bidder will be held strictly to his bid under penalty of forfeiture of his deposit.

Any bid will be rejected when opened, if the same is not submitted on a furnished form blank and upon which the alternative bids required are not fully priced.

Any bid will be rejected when opened, if the same contains any erasure or written memoranda qualifying the same.

The bidder or bidders to whom the award of the contract is made will be required to furnish a satisfactory bond in the form to be provided by W. B. Tubby, Architect, of 81 Fulton Street, New York City, and executed by an acceptable Surety Company for the faithful performance of said contract and covering the guarantee in accordance with the contract plans and specifications, in a sum equal to 33⅓% of the amount of said contract.

For the convenience and use of intending bidders, a full set of drawings and specifications will be loaned to them by the architect, upon receipt of a deposit of Twenty-five ($25) Dollars, in cash or a certified check, drawn to the order of said architect.

Such plans and specifications must be returned to the architect's office, prior to the day of the opening of the bids, whereupon the deposit will be returned, and in the event of the non-return of such drawings and specifications as above stated, the deposits shall be forfeited.

The Board of Supervisors reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

The form of contract and of the bond which the successful bidder shall be required to execute may be had upon application to the architect.

Dated, at Mineola, April 13th, 1914.

By order of the Board of Supervisors,
GEORGE M. GOODALE,
Clerk.

This report will deal with the questions of proper methods of manufacture, handling and caring for gum lumber, and will be of considerable importance to those interested in obtaining the wonderful decorative and utilitarian results that can be obtained from the use of this wood.

FEDERATED CIVIC ASSOCIATIONS.—It has been found desirable to postpone the conference of delegates, to further consider the matter of increased transportation facilities across the North River, which was scheduled to be held in the sun parlor of the Waldorf-Astoria, Tuesday, May 5. The revised date for this conference will be Tuesday, May 19, at four o'clock, at the same place. Representatives of the New York and New Jersey Bridge and Tunnel commissions and their engineers will be present for the purpose of explaining the situation as its exists and of answering any questions delegates may wish to ask. The last conference upon this subject, consisting of representatives of about twenty associations, was a most interesting one, but few of the delegates present felt that the organizations they represented were sufficiently informed to take definite action upon the question at that time. The subject is of such importance to the community, however, that every association affected should be fully informed upon it so that it may be in a position to determine its opinion and exert its influence accordingly. Robert Grier Cooke is president.

BUILDING MATERIALS AND SUPPLIES

GENERAL SLUMP IN QUOTATIONS ON MAY FIRST AS COMPARED WITH THOSE RULING A MONTH AGO—STRUCTURAL STEEL WEAK.

Second Hand Brick in Heavy Demand — Plan Filings Compared.

PRICES of building materials on May first reflect the sluggishness of demand throughout the district. White lead in oil, second-hand common brick and wax are the only building commodities that do not show a cut from last month's wholesale quotations, and two of these represent a gain of only a fraction of a cent a pound. Linseed oil is the only one that reports stiffness sufficient to warrant expectations of an early advance, although gravel in the New York market is remarkably firm. This strength, however, is attributed to subway construction and not to heavier building requirements.

Brick heads the list with a slump of about seventy-five cents a thousand for Hudsons and fifty cents for Raritans. Second-hand brick, however, shows a jump in price of a dollar a thousand or $3.50 per M., with $4.50 quoted for cartloads of 1,500. Newark common brick yard prices remain steady at $7.25 to $7.50, with only a moderate call. Portland and natural cement stand pat, the former at the ninety cent mill base.

No changes are reported from the winter schedule of prices in crushed stone, gravel, terra cotta interior or exterior hollow tile, lime or lubricants, but uniform cuts of a dollar to two dollars are shown down the entire soft lumber column, including yellow pine, hemlock, and spruce. Hardwoods are firm on price but in light demand.

But the most significant feature about May prices current is the slump in structural steel quotations at tidewater. At the first of April the quotations in this department ruled at 1.31c and 1.36c, while today the figures are 1.26c and 1.31c. On March first the quotation temporarily was at 1.36c and 1.41c. The material market has proved true to tradition: "As goes steel, so goes other structural commodities."

Building financiers seem less inclined to lend money on speculative enterprises. The great majority of mortgages now being recorded call for six per cent. interest, while rates on other classes of investment are lower than that by one to one and a half per cent.

As for class of construction now prevailing, apartment houses seem to be moving more freely in the Washington Heights section of Manhattan and for cheaper apartments in the Bronx, while Brooklyn and Queens operations are confined more generally to flats and dwellings. Washington square is also showing activity in apartment house construction. In East Jersey, factory extension and dwelling construction leads. Materials are moving sluggishly in that section and dealers are buying only from hand to mouth. A revival in loft building construction seems to be under way on Fourth avenue after about a year's cessation.

The crisis in Mexico is having a retarding effect upon building investment, but those who are closely informed say that it may, in the end, work for good. Legislation has hit building owners hard during the winter and it has also operated as a retarding influence upon business in general. Some profess to believe that money is being manipulated to the end that the Interstate Commerce Commission may be made to see the wisdom of granting the railroads the freight rate increase they ask for and to encourage the Administration to postpone action on contemplated legislation affecting big business. They hold that the Mexican crisis may serve to act as a counter-irritant to the Administration, diverting the attention of the Congress from its trust-controlling program toward other matters; in the mean time permitting business to get its bearings, as it were, under the new laws before further legislation along that line is attempted.

DEALERS in common brick were active buyers in both the wholesale and retail markets this week. Unloading exceeded last week's gain by a slight margin. Sales at the wholesale docks were heavier than at any time this year. Two Hudson plants have started their dryers, but no open yards have resumed yet. Prices remain unchanged. New building plan filings were slightly heavier.

REAL ESTATE RECORD AND BUILDERS GUIDE.

OUR CHAOTIC BUILDING REGULATIONS

Thirteen Separate Departments of Government Exercise Jurisdiction Over Buildings to the Great Annoyance and Injury of Owners

HARDLY a year passes but some new board, commission or bureau is created by either the Legislature or the Board of Aldermen to regulate or supervise something relating to buildings. When a great disaster occurs in a building our legislators at once begin to work the grist mill of legislation overtime, turning out new laws, creating new commissions and boards to employ regiments of inspectors, in an attempt to remedy conditions supposedly responsible for the disaster. Rarely, if ever, is an attempt made to strengthen an existing department or bureau in order to render it more efficient, the belief apparently being that only by the creation of new commissions, boards or bureaus can the conditions be remedied and the results desired brought about.

Thirteen Corps of Inspectors.

At this time there are thirteen departments, boards or bureaus that have jurisdiction over matters affecting buildings, as follows:

First, the Bureau of Buildings. The duty of this bureau is to pass upon plans and applications for new construction and alterations to existing buildings, plumbing and elevators, to issue permits therefor, and to generally enforce the provisions of the Building Code. This bureau is also charged with the duty of inspecting the buildings during the construction and alterations.

Second, the Tenement House Department, whose jurisdiction extends to all boroughs, over all houses or buildings occupied, in whole or in part, as the home or residence of three families or more, living independently of each other and doing their cooking upon the premises, and includes apartment houses, flat houses and all other houses so occupied. Before a multi-family house can be erected or altered, plans must be filed and approved by this department in conforming to the requirements of the Tenement House Law. Afterward the plans must be sent to the Bureau of Buildings for approval as to construction, two sets of plans being necessary.

The Firemen's Inspections.

The Fire Prevention Bureau of the Fire Department has jurisdiction over all matters pertaining to exits and means of egress from buildings, and, according to the opinion of the Corporation Counsel, it also has jurisdiction over the following:

1, The construction of fireproof buildings; 2, fireproofing; 3, fire walls; 4, fireproof partitions; 5, chimneys, flues and the installation of appliances for heat, light and power; 6, floor and roof openings for hoistways, dumbwaiters, conduits and pipes; 7, the protection of windows and other openings in walls by fireproof shutters, sills or sashes, or by wire glass construction.

While the law does not specifically require that plans be filed with the Fire Department, yet, as it has jurisdiction, prudence would dictate that plans be submitted to it for approval; this course is being followed to a large extent.

The Bureau of Combustibles has jurisdiction over garages and other places where combustibles are kept.

THE present status of the supervision of buildings and their construction in New York City can be described only as chaotic. The property owner hardly knows where to turn. He is confronted on every side by a multiplicity of city departments, each having jurisdiction over something that pertains to the construction or equipment of his building, and the jurisdictions overlap. In attempting to comply with the orders of one department, an owner frequently finds that he is conflicting with the requirements of some other department. Complaints coming from every direction against this economic waste have caused the Real Estate Board of New York to make an expert analysis of the situation, and the results are given in this article.

The Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity has jurisdiction over wiring and the installation of electrical equipment.

Police Department: All theatrical and concert licenses are issued by this department upon certification by the Fire Department and the Bureau of Buildings that all requirements of the law relating to places of public amusement have been met.

Bureau of Boiler Inspection: Under the charter of the City of New York all steam boilers must be inspected, and the police are charged with this duty.

Must Have a License.

The Bureau of Licenses, Mayor's office, issues licenses for moving picture shows where the seating capacity is less than six hundred, and for other places of amusement seating less than three hundred persons, where theatrical and concert licenses are not required; also dance halls, etc. Before issuing licenses the Bureau of Licenses requests reports from the Bureau of Buildings and the Fire Department.

The Department of Docks and Ferries has jurisdiction over buildings located on or near the waterfront, including those on land formerly under water, but since reclaimed.

The Department of Parks has jurisdiction over projections on buildings within 350 feet of any park, parkway, etc. Plans must be submitted and approved. Special ordinances cover projections on Riverside drive, Fifth avenue fronting on Central Park.

The Department of Health, under the provisions of the Sanitary Code, exercises jurisdiction over all classes of buildings in the matter of ventilation, drainage and plumbing.

The Bureau of Highways has jurisdiction generally over all projections on buildings extending beyond the building line, except such as may front on parks, parkways or within 300 feet thereof, which come within the jurisdiction of the Park Department. These projections include awnings, marquises, storm doors and signs. Permits for the use of streets and sidewalks during building operations are also issued by this bureau.

The Department of Bridges has no specific jurisdiction in the matter of buildings; on occasions, however, by special legislation, certain buildings have been placed under its jurisdiction—the new Municipal Building, for instance.

Factory Inspections.

The Industrial Board of the Department of Labor is a State department, and the Commissioner is appointed by the Governor. The Industrial Board has jurisdiction over all factories, factory buildings, mercantile establishments, etc. The act creating the Industrial Board provides as follows:

> "All factories, factory buildings, mercantile establishments and other places to which this chapter is applicable shall be so constructed, equipped, arranged, operated and conducted in all respects as to provide reasonable and adequate protection to the lives, health and safety of all persons employed therein; and the said board shall from time to time make such rules and regulations as will effectuate the said policy and intent."

Under this act it will appear that the Industrial Board has full jurisdiction over all matters pertaining to any of the above enumerated buildings, including exits and means of egress which, under the Fire Prevention Law, were formerly within the jurisdiction of the Fire Department.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture: Under certain conditions it may be necessary to file plans with this department, as, for instance, when a factory is to prepare food and engage in interstate commerce, the Pure Food Law would be operative.

A Wasteful System.

When so many bureaus or bodies exercise jurisdiction (which is not too well defined) over matters pertaining to buildings, it cannot be surprising that confusion and conflict or overlapping of jurisdiction results.

In order to maintain these numerous bodies having to do with the inspection, construction, supervision, etc., of buildings, an appropriation per annum of over $2,000,000 is needed, and between six hundred and seven hundred inspectors and engineers are required—or are, at least, employed; in addition a numerous clerical force is needed for administration.

One of the greatest drawbacks to the present wasteful system is the large number of inspectors rendered necessary to perform the functions of the various departments and bureaus, each operating independently of the other. One qualified inspector should be able to look after, in large part, everything that pertains to the construction and appurtenances of a building, instead of the three or four that are now necessary under the present system, which makes duplication of work unavoidable.

The scattering of authority and the lack of concentration has not only increased the cost of building operations in this city very materially to the owner, architect and builder, but has also made the enforcement of the laws relating to buildings more difficult.

In order to conduct a building operation in this city, in many instances it may be necessary to secure permits from three to eight different bureaus or departments; this is a wholly needless and unnecessary expense.

The Remedy.

In the preceding discussion an attempt has been made to indicate in a way the chaotic conditions of matters relating to buildings in this city, and the consequent confusion and annoyance to citizens resulting from the lack of concentration of authority.

The rational and effective remedy would be the uniting or consolidation of the various departments, bureaus or commissions that may have to do with buildings into one great department which should have exclusive jurisdiction over all matters pertaining to buildings of every description, including the issuance of licenses for concert, theatrical and other shows.

The creation of such a department would center responsibility in one head, and would make for both increased efficiency and economy. A conservative estimate would be $300,000 saved per annum.

It is probably too much to expect at this time so radical a departure from past policy, as such a reform would necessitate the discharge of several hundred city employes, and might not be considered good politics, at least. However, a beginning could be made, and a step in the right direction would be the consolidation of the Bureau of Buildings and the Fire Prevention Bureau of the Fire Department, or else the creation of a new department to take over the functions of both of the above bureaus.

It may be an open question which of the two methods would give the better results, and arguments can be advanced in favor of each. The essential point, however, is the consolidation by whichever method, and this seems to admit of comparatively little argument, at least from the standpoint of those having dealings with the Bureaus of Buildings and the Fire Prevention Bureau.

Architects Take Action.

At the last meeting of Brooklyn Chapter, American Institute of Architects, a resolution was adopted saying that the present system of departmental control over buildings and building operations in the City of New York is cumbersome, extravagant and illogical for the following reasons:

"1st. The employment of plan examiners to go over practically the same ground by two departments when the building is to be a tenement, by two departments when the building is a place of public assemblage, by two departments when the building is to be a factory.

"2nd. The present system requires a duplication of indexing and filing at an enormous cost for labor and for filing space.

"3rd. The employment of inspectors representing each department when one inspector could easily do the work of two, this duplicate inspection being an inexcusable waste of public funds.

"4th. That the present system not only leads to wasteful use of public funds but also results in contradiction of orders as a result of conflicting rulings of the various departments having jurisdiction.

"5th. That the present system is a source of unnecessary annoyance and expense to owners of buildings and all interested in the construction of buildings.

"The Brooklyn Chapter of the A. I. A. hereby urges the Board of Estimate and Apportionment and those having in charge of the preparation of a new Charter for the City of New York to endeavor to obtain such legislation as may be necessary to bring about the consolidation of the Bureau of Buildings, the Tenement House Department, the Industrial Board and the Bureau of Fire Prevention, that the present cumbersome, extravagant and illogical system may be abolished, adhering to and possibly extending the requirements of the above mentioned departments with a view to the safety, health and welfare of the community."

TWO WAYS OF HELPING MORTGAGE MARKET

The Amortization Plan Generally Adopted Would Be Popular—Bring the Buying Public to Foreclosure Sales—Views of Mr. Morgenthau.

MUCH has been written about the present-day mortgage market conditions, and many real estate men take the stand that until this branch of the business becomes straightened out no material improvement can be hoped for. Mr. M. Morgenthau, Jr., chairman of the Mortgage Loan Committee of the Real Estate Board, said this week:

"It is difficult to tell from which direction the wind is coming when the flag hangs listless from the flagpole. So too, it is difficult to discern the trend of the mortgage market when the market is as dull as at present. We can philosophize and prophesy, but after all the correctness of our deductions will depend very largely on shrewd guess work. Nevertheless, a brief review of the present situation may be helpful.

"There has been no material change in the mortgage loans situation since the beginning of the year. Just after January 1 there was quite a demand for choice mortgages, but this demand was quickly satisfied and it then became apparent that no definite revival had taken place. The demand was merely incidental to the larger market for all investment securities, due to the January disbursements.

Number of Mortgages Recorded.

"Since the first of the year up to April 16 the records show that there were 1,287 mortgages recorded in Manhattan against 1,620 recorded last year. The amount involved was $39,000,000, against $68,000,000 last year. While this, of course, was counterbalanced to the extent of about $2,500,000 increase in mortgage extensions, there was still a falling-off in Manhattan alone of about 33 1-3 per cent. About the same per cent. of falling-off is recorded in the Bronx.

"Now, we must not forget that this record of this year is compared with the year of 1913, which in turn was the worst year which we have had in the mortgage market for many years. In Manhattan alone for 1913 there was a falling-off of over $100,000,000 in recorded mortgages. The deduction is that the contraction in business has not yet run its course.

A Turn in the Market.

"In considering the question of whether a turn in the market may now be expected, we must remember the various causes that have led up to this tremendous change in the mortgage situation. These causes are well known to those who have been in direct touch with the real estate situation. We may refer in passing to the increased expense incident to the holding of real estate, due to increased taxes, and to the multiplication of inspection. We might also refer to the tremendous falling off in real estate speculation due in part to the above and to the money stringency and high rates prevailing throughout the world. On the whole, the outlook is more encouraging now than it has been for many months past. There has been a decided reaction against over-regulation and over-inspection of real estate.

"Rental conditions throughout the city are good. In addition to this, concerted action on the part of the real estate organizations has at last been obtained and a permanent association has been formed which will do much to see that justice is done the property owner in future. Furthermore, Mayor Mitchel has appointed a commission on taxation, including in its membership some of the best known real estate men; and President Marks of the Borough of Manhattan has given the real estate community every assurance that they will get fair treatment and co-operation from him and the departments which are under his guidance.

Helpful Factors.

"All of these factors are helping to restore confidence in real estate and this is all that is needed to bring the mortgage market back to a normal condition. No one has questioned that real estate still offers the very best security for the investment of money. The percentage which may be loaned with safety may vary somewhat and the desirability of certain particular classes of property as security for conservative loans may change, but with proper and intelligent care money may still be more safely invested in first mortgages on choice New York real estate than in any other security devised by man.

Amortised Mortgages Favored.

"I am one of those who believe that the real estate market would be tremendously benefited if a form of amortised mortgages would be introduced. Steps in this direction have already been taken, but a campaign of education will be necessary to show both borrowers and lenders the advantages of this over the old methods. Some of our best authorities agree that the present situation would not have developed if the system of first mortgages with annual payments had been introduced years ago. It is, of course, much easier for the owner to pay a small amount annually in the reduction of his mortgage than to meet a large payment at maturity. And as these payments will take care of any possible depreciation the mortgage is at all times safer.

"Another important matter which has recently been brought very forcibly to my attention is the need for a wider actual market for parties forced to foreclosure. It is true that many of these foreclosures are the result of over-lending and lending without proper judgment, but many of them do not fall in these classes. The mortgage situation has been hurt very much by the fact that so many of these properties are sold to the plaintiff, that is to the lender. We have found that a little intelligent publicity and bringing the offering to the attention of those who might be interested in purchasing a bargain in that particular section will do a great deal to eliminate this. The difficulty is that the legal fees in foreclosures are not sufficient to allow for this publicity and work. Some method of eliminating this difficulty should be devised."

HESTER STREET VALUES ON STABLE BASIS

Old Thoroughfare, After Many Changes, Now On Permanent Footing—Owners Receive Good Returns on Investment—Few Store Vacancies.

FORMERLY a beautiful Quaker settlement lined with stately trees and pretty residences, Hester street is today a flourishing business thoroughfare, which is persistently maintaining its own. The thoroughfare begins at Centre street and runs east to Clinton street, the heart of the Ghetto of the lower East Side. The Bowery is a clear line of demarcation between its Jewish and Italian divisions, the first named population confining itself to the east and the latter to the west. The generally prevailing type of construction is the five-story tenement with stores, on a lot 25x100 feet, with an average room rental of about $5.50 for three and four room flats.

East of the Bowery and covering about nine blocks there are forty-one five-story structures, seventeen six-story, five four-story, thirteen three-story dwelling houses remodelled for business, three two-story and two one-story. West of the Bowery, a distance of five blocks, there are seventeen five-story buildings, twelve six-story, twelve four-story, four three-story, one two-story, one seven-story, one nine-story, the latter the new Italian school and Children's Aid Society Building, at the corner of Elizabeth street.

An Italian Quarter.

The push cart element in the business of the street which has been materially lessened on account of the general exodus to desirable locations under the Williamsburgh Bridge does not become particularly conspicuous until one reaches Mulberry street, walking east from Centre. This is a typical Italian quarter and the push cart dealers sell almost every household commodity. There is no particular business development in this neighborhood, although there are several large furniture concerns and kindred businesses in nearby and intersecting streets. The only relic of Quaker occupancy is the old church at the corner of Elizabeth street now occupied as the office of the Consolidated Gas Company.

In the Jewish Section.

East of the Bowery begins the Jewish section and the stores are occupied with woolen dress goods, trimmings, silks, velvets and clothing establishments. Scattered here and there are various jewelry concerns but the prevailing businesses are interested in high grade dressmaking and tailoring merchandise. Rentals in this neighborhood are unusually high when compared with some other sections of the city. A store in a building on a lot 25x100 feet brings $100 a month in Hester street, while corner stores net to their owners over twice that amount. So great is the demand for store properties that a canvass made this week revealed only a single vacancy in the whole length of the street.

East of Allen street the stores are chiefly occupied by lace, velvet and silk concerns; opposite Seward Park the same development is noticeable. The class of merchandise offered in these places is of such a grade that it attracts buyers from all sections of the city and even from neighboring cities. Storekeepers have little to fear from push cart competition, since the removal of a great number of these to places under the Bridge has reacted to their benefit. Around Seward Park there remain, however, a great number of peddlers who carry around on their shoulders second-hand garments to sell or exchange.

Hester street is dotted with schools, No. 62, the largest in the city, being at the corner of Essex street, opposite the playground in Seward Park. On the next block, at Ludlow street is Public School 42; in Allen street there are two more, in Forsythe street near Hester, is Public School 65, near Chrystie street is Public School No. 7, while in the Italian section, besides the new Italian educational institution at Elizabeth street, a new structure is being erected at the corner of Baxter street.

Has Become a Wholesale Center.

"Remarkable transformations in values on the East Side have been going on, although few people realize this fact," said Elias A. Cohen, this week. "Hester street has changed in its character from purely a retail neighborhood to a wholesale center which supplies stores in all sections of the country. Division street is the second largest market for millinery goods and cloaks and suits. Canal street supplies one-half the peddlers who travel through the Eastern States with notions, fancy goods and jewelry. The Bowery is a crockery and hardware center. Grand street is the amusement as well as the retail district.

"The sweat-shop industry, far over on the East Side, has fallen off and the factories are located in better structures than ever before. On the whole the East Side is as crowded as it ever was, and values in the main are as high as they were five years ago, in spite of the generally prevailing impression to the contrary. The difficulty which confronts the East Side landlord is the continual calling in of mortgages and the unwillingness of mortgagees to take the slightest trouble to ascertain real estate conditions and learn the truth for themselves.

"Hester street began to be built up about forty-five years ago. Lots were then worth about $8,000. Prices rose to a high mark in 1906 when lots brought about $35,000, but in 1908 values declined to about $25,000 and since then they have steadily maintained their firmness. Hester street with its great number of lace, ribbon and silk establishments caters to a large and extensive trade and dressmakers realizing the worth of the materials displayed there have made it the center of their buying activity."

LOOKING EAST IN HESTER STREET FROM LUDLOW STREET.

Opinions of Brokers.

Hiram Rinaldo, realty broker, said: "Hester street has always been a valuable tenement section and produced most excellent income for its property owners. The large number of stores along the street attracts great crowds of people, which has resulted in the steady demand for stores, and there are practically no vacancies. Present business is so firmly established and flourishing that there is but little doubt that Hester street will retain for a long time its present character. It will still be a market for all kinds of merchandise and the old tenements will continue to attract the same class of immigrant tenants."

"Hester street is one of the East Side streets which has upheld its prestige," said John H. Hallock. "While there have been no material changes, rentals in a number of cases are as high as they have ever been.

"In my opinion I can see no reason why the values of real estate in Hester street should not be maintained."

SEPARATE ORDINANCE FOR FIRE LIMITS

Will Not Be Part of the Building Code—Limits Recommended By the Fire Commissioner—Amendments to the Dumbwaiter Ordinance.

IN order that the fire limits may be considered independently when the revised Building Code comes up for adoption in the Board of Aldermen, they will be made the subject of a special ordinance, so that such opposition as may arise to any part of the geographical boundary to be set between frame construction and masonry construction may not reflect upon the code as a whole.

This will be the recommendation of Superintendent Miller, who is now engaged at the direction of the Board of Aldermen in assisting the Building Committee in revising the code which the present board inherited from the previous administration. The fire limits are the first of the subjects to receive attention.

The boundaries of the zones from which frame construction is barred at the present time are detailed in section 143 of the code now in force, which went into effect December 23, 1899. The limits proposed by the Building Committee of 1913 will be found in section 13 of the amended code, as printed in full in the City Record of January 15, 1914.

While the subject is now up, Mr. Miller is ready to receive new suggestions. The order in which other subjects will be considered was detailed in the Record and Guide of May 2. This paper will regularly report the weekly progress of the work of revision.

Using Charts.

In connection with the subject of fire limits Superintendent Miller is being materially aided by a series of colored charts, which were prepared by the Heights of Buildings Commission and exhibited at the City Planning Exposition held at the Public Library. Of the Borough of the Bronx there are three charts, which show (1) the residence and business sections, (2) the undeveloped sections, (3) the fire limits, to illustrate the amount of frame construction within the present fire limits, and also the amount of brick construction beyond the limits where frame construction is permissible.

In Superintendent Miller's opinion, the only valid reason for extending fire limits is to relieve existing buildings from a further hazard through the erection of additional inflammable structures.

The Commissioner's Recommendations.

Recommendations from the Fire Commissioner as to the extension of the city's fire limits are to the effect that the entire borough of Manhattan be included. At the present time a narrow irregular shaped strip at the north end is left out. The Fire Commissioner would include Inwood Hill and even Marble Hill.

Commissioner Adamson agrees with the Borough President of Richmond that no change need be made in the fire limits so far as the Borough of Richmond is concerned.

The Commissioner and the Superintendent of Buildings in the Bronx both believe that the fire limits in the Bronx should start in the latitude of 184th street. The exact line recommended to Superintendent Miller by the Fire Commissioner for the Borough of the Bronx is as follows:

Proposed Bronx Fire Limits.

"I recommend that that part of the Borough of the Bronx be included in the fire limits commencing at the bulkhead line on the south side of 184th street and Harlem river; 184th street south side to Fordham road, south side of Fordham road to Southern Boulevard, west side of Southern Boulevard to East 182nd street, south side of 182nd street to Bronx Park Square, south side of Bronx Park Square to Boston road, west side of Boston road to 180th street, south side of 180th street to Bronx river, Bronx river west and south sides to Long Island Sound, north side of Long Island Sound to East river, north side of East river to Bronx Kills, north side of Bronx Kills to Harlem river, east side of Harlem river to 184th street."

The limits suggested by the Fire Commissioner for Brooklyn can be briefly described as including Bay Ridge, part of the 29th Ward, and a large part of the 30th Ward, where buildings are already restricted under the present code to the use of but 80 per cent. of the width of the lot. The Commissioner would extend the limits in East New York and Brownsville, in Ridgewood out to the city line, and there is an extension proposed for Greenpoint, but not very much. For Coney Island the Fire Commissioner has suggested that the limits be set at Mermaid avenue on the north, Ocean avenue on the south, 37th street on the east and 9th street on the west.

In Queens, the Fire Commissioner would include all Long Island City south of Washington street and northwest of the Sunnyside Yards, and the main business street of Jamaica.

Presumably the Fire Commissioner's suggestions represent the maximum of the extensions that will be proposed, and the discussion will resolve itself into such questions as whether it is necessary to include such localities as University Heights, Marble Hill, Fort Washington Ridge and Inwood. Much opposition is likely from University Heights and Marble Hill at least.

Dumbwaiter Shafts.

Alderman Hamilton, chairman of the Building Committee, introduced this week an ordinance to amend section 97 of the Building Code relating to dumbwaiter shafts in an important particular. The section now provides that all dumbwaiter shafts except those which do not extend more than three stories above the cellar or basement in dwelling houses, shall be enclosed in suitable walls of brick or burnt-clay blocks set in iron frames of proper strength, or fireproof blocks, strengthened with metal dowels, or such other fireproof material or form of construction as may be approved by the Superintendent of Buildings having jurisdiction. All openings in the enclosing walls must be provided with self-closing fireproof doors.

The Court of Appeals after years of litigation has decided that the ordinance is retroactive. It means existing buildings as well as those to be erected. Superintendent Miller estimates the cost of building the fireproof enclosing walls at one to two thousand dollars in old buildings. The amending ordinance is proposed as a measure of relief to property owners, recommended by the United Real Estate Owners' Associations.

The principal amendment provides that the ordinance shall apply only to buildings "hereafter erected," except that in all existing buildings where the dumbwaiter shaft extends into the cellar or lowest story it shall be enclosed in that story with walls of brick eight inches thick, with openings provided with self-closing fireproof doors.

The Building Committee has under consideration a proposed ordinance, not yet introduced, regulating partition fences and retaining walls. It provides that when an excavation has been made in any lot requiring the construction of a retaining wall between the lands of two owners, such wall shall be made and retained jointly, and in the case of any dispute the Borough President or his representative will decide.

FUEL WASTE IN NEW YORK CITY

Instances Showing How Some Apartments Are Run Cheaper Than Others.

Government analyses of Pennsylvania, Maryland, and West Virginia bituminous coals, which are sold in this market to the volume of 7,000,000 short tons a year at an average price of $3.75 per ton, show that this coal averages about 14,100 British thermal units a pound. The cheapest anthracite coal that can be burned in ordinary boilers and comply with New York City's stringent smoke ordinance, is a pea sized coal costing $4.75 per ton. This grade of hard coal contains only about 12,000 heat units per pound, according to a booklet being issued under the title of "Cutting Coal Costs in New York City," by the Kewanee Boiler Company, of 47 West 42nd street. Some of the information contained in this booklet gives comparative statistics of fuel cost in typical apartment houses that are interesting.

In an apartment building at the corner of West End avenue and 71st street, where smokeless boilers are installed, a daily average of 1½ tons of bituminous coal costing $3.75 a ton is used. This puts the cost of coal at $5.62 a day. In another building of the same size, owned by the same concern, and erected by the same builders, under the supervision of the same engineer, another make of boiler is installed. To heat this building more than three tons of anthracite pea coal costing $4.50 a ton are used daily. This brings the daily coal cost up to $13.50. This makes the annual saving $1,654.80 for a heating season of 210 days, to the overhead charges of the apartment using the smokeless boiler.

Smoke is visible proof of wasted fuel. So any boiler which is capable of burning a highly volatile soft coal without smoke is proving itself to be highly efficient. For instance:

In an apartment house at 3 East 85th street a smokeless boiler equipment carrying 6,100 square feet of radiation and supplying in addition the hot water used, burns an average of 4-10 tons of bituminous coal a day. This coal costs $3.75 per ton which makes the daily coal cost about $1.50. In another apartment house nearby, an ordinary straight draught boiler is used to heat 5,300 square feet of radiation and burns daily an average of one ton of prepared anthracite coal costing $6.50.

Hearing on the Free Port Project.

The Merchants' Association's Committee on Foreign Trade announces that the date of the hearing on the "Free Port" project in the assembly room at the headquarters of The Merchants' Association has been changed to May 14 2 p. m.

In order to test the sentiment of the members of The Merchants' Association upon the project, an expression was invited by the committee. Of 250 answers received, 167 were in favor of the project, twenty-seven opposed it, and fifty-six declined to express any opinion.

STANDARDS OF BUILDING CONSTRUCTION

National Fire Protection Association Hears Recommendations of Special Committee of Which Ira H. Woolson Is Chairman

CONFERENCES held this week at Chicago by the National Fire Protection Association, in annual convention, undoubtedly will be the beginning of a number of radical changes in future construction. In the first place, the term "fireproof" will be tabooed hereafter whenever reference to type of construction is made. "Fire resistive" will be the term substituted. In the next place, it was the purpose of the committee, of which Ira H. Woolson, consulting engineer of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, is chairman, to rationalize and popularize the principles of fire-resistive construction, embracing all standards which have thus far been adopted by the association. The special committee's recommendations were drafted merely as a framework for future action by the national body, but so thoroughly has the work been done by the experts comprising the committee that it was the general belief that the recommendations eventually will find themselves in a formal standardization code covering the entire country.

The committee comprised the chairman, Ira H. Woolson; W. F. Ballinger, Phillip H. Bevier, E. T. Cairns, J. E. Curtis, Julius Francke, Richard L. Humphrey, Robert Palm, A. G. Patton, W. G. Sanderson, Walter Smedley, Mason R. Strong, Henry V. Thayer and J. Foster Warner. In their recommendations they urge the discontinuance of the term "fireproof," on the ground that it has in the past been erroneously applied to buildings and materials of a more or less fire-resistive or incombustible nature, and in its indiscriminate use has produced much misunderstanding, and has often engendered a feeling of security entirely unwarranted. Instead, the term "fire resistive" is suggested, which, however, is to be applied to all structures or materials which will satisfactorily resist the effects of a serious fire in accordance with the classification given below.

New Terms.

"Incombustible," if the committee's suggestion is followed, will be a term applied to structures or materials that will not readily ignite and burn when subjected to fire, while "non-inflammable" will refer to material which may burn when subjected to fire, but will not support flame.

The question naturally arises as to how the basis of these standards will be determined, and in answer the committee offers a standard test which discriminates between fire-resistive materials and systems of construction affording the full, partial and temporary protection against fire which may be properly summarized, with a few exceptions, as follows: (a) Full protection, implying a resistance to a severe fire for four hours, (b) implying a resistance to a severe fire for two hours, and (c) temporary protection, indicating a resistance to a severe fire for at least one hour.

STANDARD TEST REQUIREMENTS FOR FIRE-RESISTING CONSTRUCTION.

Floors, Roofs, Columns and Other Structural Supports.

Class.	Duration of test in minutes.	Average temperature, degrees F.	Minimum superficial area under test. sq. ft.	Minimum time for application of water under pressure. minutes.
(a)	240	1,700	100	10
(b)	120	1,700	100	5
(c)	60	1,500	100	2

In all cases the load applied after the fire shall be four times that during fire. The committee was not prepared to make any recommendation for loads, except for floor slabs, under full protection which shall be 150 pounds per square foot during fire. Columns will eventually be included in this table.

PARTITIONS.

Class.	Duration of test in minutes.	Average temperature, degrees F.	Thickness of material.	Minimum time for application of water under pressure. minutes.
(a)	180	1,700	6-in.	5
(b)	120	1,700	Optional	2
(c)	60	1,500	Optional

The minimum superficial area under test in class (c) sball be 137¾ sq. ft. 9'6"x14'6".

PROTECTION OF WALL AND PARTITION OPENINGS.

Class.	Duration of test in minutes.	Average temperature degrees F.
(a)	240	1,700
(b)	120	1,700
(c)	60	1,500

The committee is not at present prepared to make any recommendations as to thickness of material, area tested, or time of application of water. The above tables are only tentative drafts of requirements thus far considered by the committee. The test for wired glass windows shall be a temperature gradually rising to 1,500 degrees F. at the end of one hour.

Classification.

The classification of buildings is made according to occupancy, as follows:

Public buildings — Railroad stations, markets, armories, etc.

Federal, state, county and municipal buildings—Custom houses, post offices, state houses, court houses, city halls, police stations, fire houses, bath houses, etc.

Places of worship — Churches, synagogues, temples, etc.

Educational institutions — Colleges, schools, seminaries, etc.

Institutions for culture—Art galleries, libraries, museums, etc.

Places of amusement—Theaters, assembly halls, amusement pavilions, exposition and fair buildings, motion picture halls, skating rinks, etc.

Places for social intercourse—Lodges, dancing academies, etc.

Institutions for sick and infirm—Asylums, hospitals, sanatoriums, etc.

Penal and reformatory institutions—Prisons, houses of correction, etc.

Benevolent institutions—Orphanages, homes for incurables, etc.

Resident buildings—Including all buildings in which people are voluntarily housed or lodged.

The latter class includes all buildings subdivided, as follows:

Places for transient lodging—Hotels, apartment hotels, club houses, etc.

Places for permanent lodging—Tenement, apartment, lodging and rooming houses, nurseries, etc.

Private residences.

The final classification deals with business buildings, a term which embodies places where actual business is conducted and which are used for executive administration and for the manufacture, sale and storage of merchandise. These are to be listed as follows:

Places for executive administration—Office buildings, etc.

Places for manufacturing purposes—Factories, workshops, printing houses, powder mills, grain elevators, breweries, distilleries, slaughter and packing houses, canneries, gas producers, blasting furnaces, foundries, etc.

Places for sale of merchandise—Mercantile establishments of all kinds, stores, restaurants, etc.

Places for receiving, handling and storing merchandise—Freight stations, docks and wharves, car barns, stables, cold storage and warehouses, etc.

Fire-Resistive Furnishings.

The committee recommends fire-resistive furnishings for fire-resistive buildings, and adds:

All solid partitions to be of metal lath and cement plaster, terra cotta, brick, magnesia or other incombustible material, and all doors with trim shall be of metal or metal-covered or other non-inflammable material, and no wood shall be used, except metal cover.

All glazing of sash partitions, including doors, shall be of ¼-inch wired glass in metal frames, with the remainder of the construction of metal, or metal and plaster, or other incombustible material, and no wood, unless covered with metal, shall be used.

Wooden slat partitions or slat guards back of fire doors or elsewhere shall not be used; wire screens set in metal frames or other metal guards are suggested.

All shelving shall be of metal or other suitable incombustible material. Where the contents of the shelving is of an inflammable nature, the fronts of all shelving are to be provided with doors of same material as shelves, and, if required to be glazed, the same must be done with wired glass fastened with metal, independent of putty.

All clothes lockers or closets shall be of metal and not more than ten in one space or area, unless kept in a separate room, enclosed with fire-resistive partitions and doors.

Table Tops Only Exceptions.

All furniture, such as tables, benches and chairs, shall be of metal or other fire-resistive material. No wood shall be allowed, except in tops, where the under side must be protected with metal.

All stock rooms or storage rooms containing inflammable goods must be enclosed to the ceiling with fire-resistive material; no wooden slat partitions shall be used.

In order to reduce the fire hazard due to inflammable goods, it is recommended, where large quantities are stored, to have more than one room, and that the area of no such room exceed 500 square feet, unless the goods are packed or stored in separate enclosed fire-resistive shelving or closets, in which case the area of stock or storage room is not to exceed 5,000 square feet, unless equipped with automatic sprinklers, in which case it is not to exceed 10,000 square feet.

No inflammable material, unless in actual process of manufacture, is to remain exposed, but shall be kept in fire-resistive stock or storage rooms or fire-resistive enclosed shelving or closets.

Fire-resistive solid boxes or receptacles, with covers of metal or wood, metal-covered, are to be used for all waste rubbage or refuse, which must be collected and placed therein twice a day, and removed or destroyed once every day. Oily waste or rubbish should have the receptacles set above the floor on legs twelve inches high. Small quantities of excelsior or other inflammable material used for packing shall be kept in fire-resistive receptacles, and large quantities should be stored in separate fire-resistive rooms or vaults.

The use of electricity is recommended in preference to gas for illuminating.

Is not the Broadway Association arguing after judgment has been entered in its propaganda against limiting the height of buildings? What has inspired its belated appeal?

A general revolt against over-regulation and unnecessary inspections of buildings is imminent. The Brooklyn architects, the Real Estate Board and Miss Anne Morgan, with other ladies, have recently joined with property owners' associations in protesting against further imposition.

A special investigation as to what happened to the bill introduced by Senator Herrick to require the equipment of all passenger elevators (except those in private residences) with automatic devices to regulate starting, disclosed the fact that the bill was left in the Senate Judiciary Committee when the Legislature adjourned. This measure has been introduced in various forms in the last four or five years, but never did it come back from the committee to which it was referred, in this respect being like a number of other bills annually introduced at Albany by statesmen who do not seem to care how much trouble and expense drastic legislation may bring upon the real estate owners.

The first step to be taken by the Board of Estimate in putting into operation the new law for the limitation of the heights of buildings will be the appointment of the members of a commission to make rules and regulations. No resolution on the subject has yet been introduced. In the interim a small agitation has been started by certain downtown opponents of the principle of limiting building heights. They assert that the first attempt to restrict will be made the subject of a case in the courts to test the constitutionality of the law, and especially the districting feature. No doubt there are some who believe in free-for-all neighborhoods, but most of us don't.

The Passing of Old Hotels.

The new subway will be responsible for the destruction of two of the oldest hotels in New York. The Astor House was obliged to yield to condemnation a year ago, and every New Yorker who took any pleasure in the antiquities of the city, must have regretted its fate. It was not an attractive building, but it was dignified and substantial looking; it was associated with some interesting incidents in the history of New York, and was worthy of the pride with which it had early been regarded by the citizens. It was the first big building which prophesied the future metropolitan eminence of the city. It has had many successors, but none which aroused any high enthusiasm among the people in the midst of whom such buildings were constructed. Structures like the Woolworth or the new Equitable Building attract far less popular attention than did the Astor House when it was first constructed.

The Grand Union Hotel has gathered about it no corresponding associations. It was built at a later period and it was flimsier in construction and entirely lacking in architectural substance and dignity. But it was the first hotel erected near the Grand Central Station and it was long a favorite place for commercial travelers. Its destruction is not to be regretted, for it will be replaced by a much better looking and more useful building. Indeed, the interest which its tearing down arouses is more a matter of the future than of the past. What kind of a building will be substituted for it? Apparently, the neighborhood already contains as many hotels as the traffic will bear. The whole city is, for the time being, over-stocked with this particular class of housing accommodations. The New York Central Railroad Company has abandoned or indefinitely postponed its project of building a hotel chiefly for commercial travelers at Lexington avenue and 42d street, and if any such hotel is constructed the better site would be the cheaper property on Lexington avenue than the dearer property on Park avenue.

It is impossible also that the erection of an office or a loft building on the site would be a profitable investment in the near future. It is true that the 42d street building is fairly well rented and that the owner of the Rapid Transit Building has bought property in the rear on 43d street, for the purpose of extending the existing structure. Nevertheless, a skyscraper covering the site of the Grand Union Hotel would almost double the available office accommodation for rent in the neighborhood and in all probability it would not be fully occupied until several years after it was constructed. It must be admitted that the business development of this region tributary to the Grand Central Station has been, up to date, distinctly disappointing. The railroad company has been unsuccessful in securing tenants for its property and the whole neighborhood is for the time being standing still. Of course, this check is only temporary, but it remains to be seen how temporary it will be.

The Municipal Civil Service.

Of all the tasks which the existing administration of the city is pledged to undertake, probably the most important is the improvement of the municipal civil service. Any real efficiency and economy in the transaction of the city's business is practically impossible as long as the departmental offices are filled with clerks who take only an occasional and languid interest in their work, who have no ambition to gratify, and whose object is to get through their day's job with the least possible waste of personal energy. Practically everybody who has studied the question of municipal administration efficiency is agreed that the greatest leakage of all occurs in the city's payroll. If there was any way of measuring the labor cost of transacting the city's business, it would certainly be found very largely to exceed the corresponding labor cost of transacting the business of any ordinarily efficient private company.

The civil service rules and system do nothing to promote efficiency. Their whole effect is rather to encourage inefficiency and to prevent the subordinate official from acquiring any real interest in his work. The very protection which these rules afford against dismissal makes the departmental employee comparatively independent of his superiors and encourages him to prefer safe and slow routine methods to this expenditure of initiative and energy which would not be appreciated and rewarded. The whole service is lacking in esprit de corps, in wholesome official standards and public opinion and in any genuine interest in its work. The measures which are needed to remedy this condition must run very deep and be very comprehensive. They must include a better classification and grading of the whole civil service. A method of promotion which will encourage merit and a method of assigning work which will develop both special efficiency and a certain amount of versatility. A competent commission has, we understand, been at work for sometime on a plan of reorganization, which will doubtless be given to the public sometime during the current year.

The administration proposes, however, to go still further in its effort to convert the city into a good employer and its officials into loyal and efficient public servants. The Chamberlain, Mr. Henry Bruere, has submitted to the Mayor a plan for introducing a certain amount of democracy and self-government into the municipal departments. He wants to encourage staff patriotism by giving to the employees a real control over their own conditions of employment. The idea is to begin with the formation of an employees' conference committee who will be consulted from the start about the details and the purposes of any plan of reorganization. This committee will help to devise the details of a practicable system of departmental discipline and promotion. It will have in part to decide upon the basis of permanent representations, upon the classes into which the employees of any department will have to be divided, upon the kind of questions which will be submitted to representative committees and the kind which should be referred back to the whole body of the employees.

The conference committee will also be asked to consider a proper pension and retirement system, some method of training employees for more difficult work, and consequently for promotion, and a better plan of dealing with the grievances of the employees and of promoting their social welfare. Some method of giving pensions exist in many departments at present, but they have been so badly devised that they are certain to break down. A pension committee is now at work on the matter, but it could be enormously assisted by real co-operation from a committee of employees. The advantages of training schools are obvious and so far they have been introduced only into the Fire and Police Departments. But perhaps the most important matter of all is the provision of some regular method of investigating and adjusting grievances. Grievances, which spread from one person to another, or which affect whole classes of employees, provoke a kind of discontent which is fatal to efficiency. At present their proper adjustment is left to chance or to the caprice of the immediate superiors of the aggrieved individuals. Such employees should certainly have an arbitration board, before whom they could appear, and which would have full authority to investigate and to return a verdict for or against the complainant. The prosecutors of this wise and liberal idea should be watched with the keenest interest by the real estate interests of New York. If they want to encourage effective economy and efficiency in the municipal administration, they cannot do better than to give the city government their assistance in its present project.

New Regime for Snug Harbor Estate.

Considerable as are the income resources of Sailors' Snug Harbor, they have not sufficed to meet the expenses of extinguishing the outstanding ground leases and the improvement of any considerable portion of this large Manhattan estate. The capital resources of the Harbor not being available for that purpose without a sale of some of the land, the trustees have therefore been seeking authority to dispose of some. For various reasons they were reluctant to act on the permission obtained from the Legislature in 1901, and in the summer of 1911 a suit was instituted with a view to obtaining a decision from the courts that the Legislature had the power to authorize the trustees to make the change.

New York State has ever been more rigid than other States in its limitations upon perpetuities, and here is one which in effect has been a conspicuous instance of perpetual restriction upon the alienation of lands situated in an active business center. Knowing the State traditions on the subject, the trustees wished to fortify their position against successful attack for all time by obtaining the judgment of the court, as well as the consent of the Legislature. Decisions have been obtained, favorable to the change, from the Supreme Court, the Appellate Division, and now finally from the Court of Appeals, which this week handed down an opinion to the effect that the trustees are authorized to administer the trust in such manner as will more effectively accomplish the intention of the testator.

This will be welcome news to the owners of property in mid-Broadway and thereabouts where the inability or unwillingness of the trustees has long been regarded as a great hindrance to the progress of the community. And manifestly it will be for the benefit of the Sailors' Sung Harbor trust if it can now so use the estate as to derive a greater income from it, and at the same time be relieved of the criticism of being in part responsible for a deadening influence in the neighborhood. Of late years the character of the section in which most of the investment property is situated has been changed in the natural order of things from residential to busIness uses, and a majority of the buildings, which once were dwellings, were long ago altered into stores and lofts of an inferior type. The altered buildings served for a time but are now physically inadequate as a class to the normal present-day demands of the kind of business which desires to continue in that vicinity. Another handicap to the property has been the higher insurance rate which lessees have had to pay, in comparison with lower rates accorded to the owners and occupants of the new fireproof buildings uptown.

Under the new policy now fully authorized the estate will dispose of some of its holdings and with the funds so obtained will erect from time to time a new building on an old site. This will eventuate in a double improvement and perhaps in time lead to a reversal of the migration which has for some years militated against real estate in that zone. In spite of all the untoward circumstances which the trustees have had to contend with, the estate presents an example to investors of the intrinsic merit of real property as an income paying investment for what Wall street terms a long pull. The real and personal property which Captain Randall left in 1801 has grown in value from $45,000 to more than $20,000,000, producing a gross income in 1911 of $560,000, notwithstanding that out of the annual income the trustees have maintained meanwhile the splendid institution on Staten Island known as Sailors' Snug Harbor. There have been years of plenty and years of scarcity for this estate as well as for others, but it is plain that, taking the poor years with the good, real estate continues to offer as ever the best as well as the safest way of investing money both for the present and the future.

—The proportion of women to men in downtown business pursuits is now about 20 per cent., an increase of 5 per cent. in a decade.

Better Times Ahead.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

Having had a long and varied experience as a real estate lawyer and as a Tax Commissioner who devoted a great deal of time to hearing appeals from assessed valuations on real estate, a word at this juncture or state of affairs in the realty world may not be out of place. While I do not take a pessimistic view, by any means, it is meet and proper to see things at every angle and just as they are at present.

Values based on actual sales are difficult to arrive at, as the prevailing prices have been low. Values determined by returns, results or rents are to be differentiated, as one is indeed fortunate who has rented for a long term of years at a good rental from an owner who is competing against new structures, whether for business or residential purposes. Values have fallen and so have rents, from 34th street south to Chambers street, and from Fifth avenue and Broadway to the North River. Tenants have left the old drygoods and manufacturing district, to stay away "forever and a day," as the old buildings became obsolete, and the new ones are attractive, and fire-insurance rates are very materially less.

Would that I could foretell who is to fill the vacancies in deserted blocks. Mr. Editor, can you, with all your optimism, predict? If there could be united action on the part of property owners generally in a down-going district, and if improvements of a substantial and telling character would be made to meet the demands of tenants,—then and then only could tenants be obtained and held. Is it not the rule that estates have been unable to sell many of their holdings, and so had to be contented, though unsatisfied, with an income of about three per centum? I can point out many instances in Manhattan where no income is obtained. Broadway on both sides from 32nd street way down to Chambers street has been badly hit and hurt for some years past, and further reductions are imminent.

Lenders are timid, as foreclosures are so numerous and common. Owners are obliged to extend the payment of their mortgages on the best terms obtainable. No one save the plaintiff appears in the auction room. Deeds are very frequently given by mortgagors to avoid foreclosures, and more particularly where they are on the board. Mortgagees are watching and waiting, and nursing along the owners in many instances, rather than take the property and see the owner move out and have to look for new tenants. These are the conditions confronting the greatest number today. Why befog the issue? Why not seek remedies to correct this state of things? Capital must be attracted to real estate, and it cannot be unless it is rendered safe and sound in the investments offered. It cannot be questioned that one-half of one per centum has been added to the interest rate for some time past. Money has been diverted from real estate mortgages to corporation bonds of all kinds.

Your publication can aid much by discussion and agitation. Like Moses, lead the realty people out of the wilderness.

CHARLES PUTZEL,
Woolworth Building, May 5.

Where our correspondent stands he can see only the shadows of the real estate situation. Fewer applications for reduction of assessments were made to the Tax Board last year than during the year before, and only about one-half as many in 1913 as in 1911. In every line of business there has been a declension for well known causes, and the real estate market has been no exception. What the market is waiting for now is a stimulus, and that will come soon from several sources, notably from anticipation of the developing power of the new rapid transit system now under construction, in a large measure also from the new oversea commerce via the Panama Canal, and in some degree, later on, from the new inland trade which will come to us from the New York State Barge Canal.

Through all the years of receding activity no one has doubted the inherent soundness of real estate values. Every day financiers of large means are changing their investments from rails and industrials to real estate. No one ever questions the safety of well buttressed real estate bonds and mortgages, or the safety of reasonably fortified real estate equities. It is only the slenderly margined holder in ill-advised locations who is worried in such times as these—when the course is nearly run, when the unfavorable conditions are nearly all discounted and when values have reached their lowest ebb.—Editor.

Condemnation Procedure.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

I have read the very interesting article in your issue of May 2 by Benno Lewinson concerning improvements in condemnation procedure. The spirit of the article is to be admired, but I cannot see any good reason for burdening the Justices of the Supreme Court with the selection of real estate experts.

Following this suggestion, it would be necessary for the justices to personally examine all real estate experts before designating them to appraise, and inasmuch as there is no abuse by the present method of having the Corporation Counsel make these selections and compel the witness to prove his qualifications as an expert before the commission, there is nothing to be gained by any change in the present method.

Mr. Lewinson also suggests that these experts to be selected by the court should be recommended by the Real Estate Board. It is not necessary for a real estate man to prove his qualifications as an expert to become a member of this board. He merely has to pay his dues and be of a character satisfactory to them.

The members of the Real Estate Board of New York are doing very good work in behalf of the taxpayers of this city, but before leaving this selection of expert witnesses in condemnation to them, they could be of a great deal of assistance in helping the court select experts if they would make strict rules concerning members of their board who go into court in these proceedings and appraise the properties to be condemned at unreasonable, excessive values.

If the real estate experts called on in behalf of property owners would appraise the property at a fair market value, it would save a great deal of time consumed by the Corporation Counsel in cross-examining these witnesses to prove that the values are excessive. If the values placed upon the property to be condemned by the city's experts and the property owners' experts were close together, a great deal of time would be saved on cross-examination and thereby decrease the expense of the commissioners' fees.

In the Court House condemnation proceedings held last year, some members of the Real Estate Board appeared as expert witnesses and appraised as follows:

	Property owners' witness.	City witnesses.	Final award.
43 Centre street....	$319,000	$100,000	$135,000
142-52 Worth street.	536,000	241,000	279,000
121 Worth street....	114,370	60,000	68,500
27-5 Lafayette street	669,500	247,000	260,500

These are only a few instances out of the sixty-five parcels, but are enough to illustrate what I have mentioned.

You can imagine the great amount of time spent by the attorneys for the city and property owners in trying to reconcile by cross-examination the difference in these values.

There is, therefore, good work in store for the Real Estate Board to censure such of their members who knowingly swear to excessive values of property about to be acquired by the City of New York.

THE WEEK'S REAL ESTATE NEWS

Brokerage Sales, Auctions, Foreclosure Suits, Building Loans, etc., Together With Brief Personal Items.

Conditions Remain Unchanged.

Clearing House for Suburban Homes.

The New York Suburban Land Company, 30-34 West 33rd street, has instituted a listing system of real estate which embraces all the communities within the suburban zone. After an extended period of preparation an organization has been formed, with central offices at their headquarters and branch offices in many of the nearby towns and villages. Information, floor plans and photographs have been obtained about hundreds of properties which are offered for sale, and the plan is to create a sort of clearing house where a prospective purchaser may obtain information about property in any given section, with a minimum amount of trouble and expense. The New York City office will be open daily from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m., except Sundays when the hours will be 9.30 a. m. to 3 p. m. The suburban realty enterprise differs materially from other plans inasmuch as the originators act solely as brokers and are not interested personally in any particular location. Local brokers, who do not handle suburban realty are privileged to avail themselves of the facilities offered by the new enterprise.

Billboards Can Be Regulated, But Not Prohibited.

The provision of the Building Code of the City of New York restricting the heights of signboards erected within the fire limits when constructed entirely of metal, or of wood covered with metal, is held by the Appellate Division of the First Department to be a valid exercise of the police power of the municipality. This decision was rendered in the case of the Peopel ex rel Van Buren and New York B. P. Co. vs. Miller, 161 App. Div., March 6, 1914.

On the other hand, the Court of Appeals, the highest court in the State, has rendered a later decision in the case of the City of Newburgh vs. a local bill-posting company, that an ordinance prohibiting altogether the erection and maintenance of billboards, was invalid, in that it contravened the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, which forbids any State "to make or enforce any law which will deprive any person of life, liberty or property without due process of law."

In other words, billboards may be regulated by having their dimensions and method of construction defined by the municipality, but they may not be absolutely prohibited by ordinance.

Court House Site Uncertainties.

The Real Estate Board believes that the general layout of the new court house site and the streets and blocks around it can be decidedly improved upon, but that the first thing to do before considering any present plans of modification is definitely to determine the precise nature of the subsurface of the site. In a communication prepared by a committee of the board and addressed to the Court House Board and the Borough President it is said:

"Any proposition which contemplates a building such as the proposed new Court House, without knowing the character of the material in which the foundation is to be laid, is obviously a mistake and the cost of making borings is a small item compared with the proposed cost of the improvements; and we cannot understand why these borings were not made before the land was acquired.

"The commission estimates the building will cost $10,000,000, or rather it was stated the cost would be kept within $10,000,000,. This was divided as follows: $7,000,000 for the building; $2,000,000 for foundations and $1,000,000 for contingencies.

"In discussing the matter with an authority, a member of your committee understood this estimate, $10,000,000, covered only the bare building—without any ornamentation, no statuary, no frescoed ceilings, no interior decorations, no furniture or court equipment. What this may add to the cost is most difficult to say. Door hardware for single pairs of doors in the interior of the Hall of Records cost $350 a set—the same price that single mahogany desks cost in the same place."

The Northwest Corner of the City.

The northwest corner of the Bronx was the old Manor of Philipseburgh, and when the Commissioners of Forfeiture sold the sequestered estates of Colonel Frederick Philipse in 1785, Capt. John Warner of the Revolutionary army became the purchaser of a large farm extending half a mile along the river. A part of the farm came into the possession of Edwin Forrest, the play actor. He called his place "Font Hill," and erected upon it a handsome castellated stone residence, intending that after his death it should become the home of aged actors. The Forrest mansion is now one of the buildings of Mount St. Vincent de Paul.

Immediately south of Mount St. Vincent is Riverdale, which is partially located on the old farm of George Hadley, bought from the Commissioners of Forfeiture in 1785. In 1843 about one hundred acres were acquired by William G. Ackerman, and ten years later a syndicate bought a large part of the Ackerman purchase and laid it out as a village. The construction of the New York Central Railroad first made the property accessible from the city for daily commuters. The highest point of land in the Borough of the Bronx is in Riverdale. There is no store in Riverdale and no village in the ordinary sense of the word.

South of Riverdale was the farm of William Hadley, extending from the river to the Albany post road. Hadley acquired it in two parcels; one from Colonel James Van Cortlandt, grandson of the first of the name, in 1761, and the other from the Commissioners of Forfeiture in 1786. The two parcels, comprising 237 acres, were bought from Hadley's executors in 1829 by Joseph Delafield, and the property remains with his descendants to this day. South of the Delafield property lies Hudson Park, which was laid out by a land company in 1853, on a farm formerly belonging to Samuel Thomson, and south of Hudson Park is the bold promontory now known as Spuyten Duyvil Neck.

PRIVATE REALTY SALES.

A $1,300,000, 12-story apartment house at the corner of Seventh avenue and 58th street, bought by a large investor in Manhattan real estate, and a 12-story apartment house on Park avenue, just north of 53d street, purchased by a Californian, figured as the most important transactions of one of the dullest weeks of the current year. Most of the business involved unimportant and commonplace holdings, and nearly all of the larger deals involved an element of trade. The seeming lack of ready cash and the apparent unwillingness of buyers to expend any large outlay has been the most conspicuous feature of the trading for many weeks, buyers appearing to prefer an exchange of equities. The more interesting sales of the week concerned a plot in East 43d street, purchased by the owner of abutting property; a Fifth avenue and 42d street corner, and Washington Heights apartment houses.

The total number of sales reported and not recorded in Manhattan this week was 29, as against 30 last week and 25 a year ago.

The number of sales south of 59th street was 14, compared with 8 last week and 10 a year ago.

The sales north of 59th street aggregated 15, as compared with 22 last week and 15 a year ago.

The total number of conveyances in Manhattan was 184, as against 143 last week, 19 having stated considerations totaling $795,867. Mortgages recorded this week number 107, involving $2,651,983, as against 87 last week, aggregating $2,832,037.

From the Bronx 14 sales at private contract were recorded, as against 24 last week and 14 a year ago.

The amount involved in Manhattan and Bronx auction sales this week was $960,285, compared with $1,103,393 last week, making a total since January 1 of $15,699,772. The figures for the corresponding week last year were $968,690, and the total from January 1, 1913, to May 10, 1913, was $21,534,433.

B. N. Duke in $1,300,000 Deal.

Benjamin N. Duke, the tobacco manufacturer, added to his extensive New York City real estate holdings by purchasing this week from the Paterno Construction Co., Dr. Charles V. Paterno, president, the 12-story apartment house at the southwest corner of Seventh avenue and 58th street, on plot 100x100. The deal was negotiated by A. C. & L. A. Marks, the sellers being represented by Stoddard & Mark. The structure, which was held at $1,300,000, was completed last autumn, from plans by Gaetan Ajello, and has a total rent roll of about $125,000 a year. Dr. Paterno bought the site of the building in June, 1912, from Franklin Pettit, who previously acquired the land from the estate of Rolph Marsh, by whom it had been held nearly half a century.

Out-of-Town Investor in Deal.

Clarence Payne, of California, has purchased for investment from the Montana Realty Co., E. Clifford Potter, William H. Chesebrough and Benjamin Mordecai, the 12-story apartment house at 383 to 387 Park avenue, located 25 feet north of 53d street. The building, which was erected by the sellers in 1912, from plans by Albert J. Bodker, is fully tenanted, with a rent roll of about $70,000, and has been held at $650,000. In part payment Mr. Payne gave 63 and 65 West 36th street, four and five-story buildings on plot 50x98.9. The brokers were R. E. L. Mordecai and Robert C. Knapp. Messrs. Potter and Chesebrough were among the pioneers in restoring Park avenue south of 59th street, and have done much to make it a choice residential section.

Joseph Milbank Enlarges Holdings.

Thomas Kelly, represented by George J. Gillespie, sold to Joseph Milbank, owner of the Transit Building, the two old 4-story dwellings at 6 and 8 East 43d street, on plot 41x100, adjoining the 17-foot dwelling at 10 East 43d street, also owned by Mr. Milbank. On this 58-foot frontage a 10-story building will be erected, to be connected with the Transit Building by an arcade in the street level floor. Special attention will be given also to a large interior court between the two buildings, protecting the light in the fullest measure to both. The building will be ready for tenants early in 1915. The Transit Building was the pioneer office building in 42d street, has always been well tenanted, and is now fully rented. The 43d street plottage was held at $300,000. The brokers in the deal were Homer Foot, Jr., and Douglas L. Elliman & Co. Title passed last Monday.

Oceanic Co. Sells a Corner.

The Investors' Estates Corporation, controlled by Nathaniel McCready, which holds an 84-year lease on the land occupied by an 8-story building at the northeast corner of Fifth avenue and 42d street, plot 50x115, has acquired title to the site from the Oceanic Investing Co., a syndicate of English capitalists. The sellers acquired the corner from Robert E. Dowling three years ago, at a reported price of $1,100,000. It was for many years the site of the old Langham Hotel.

Heights-Jersey Exchange.

W. J. Rich Development Co. has bought from the Picken Building Co., William H. Picken, president, the two 6-story apartment houses "Cliffwood" and "Westwood," occupying the block front on the west side of Fort Washington avenue, between 179th and 180th streets, each on plot 100x115. The properties have been held at $550,000. In part payment the buyer gave six private dwellings and several lots at Hillsdale, Bergen county, N. J. Several weeks ago the Rich Development Co. bought a block front of apartment houses on Audubon avenue from Brown Bros., also giving in part payment property at Hillsdale.

Big Brooklyn Transaction.

J. S. Bailey & Co., of Boston, operators of a chain of five and ten cent stores, have purchased through Joseph P. Day, for about $750,000, the property of the Central Branch of the Brooklyn Young Men's Christian Association, with a frontage of 20 ft. in Fulton street, 125 ft. in Bond street and an additional frontage in Hanover place, containing in all a total of 19,840 sq. ft. The new owners will improvve with a business structure from designs by Parfitt Bros., for occupancy. The deal was negotiated by D. V. Eskell of Mr. Day's office.

Modern Improvements

Isn't it true that ofttimes some small modern improvement goes a long way towards selling and renting your houses?

Take for example the plan that has recently been adopted by some builders of placing in newly built apartment houses electric washing machines and outlets in the kitchen for electric ironing and cooking.

Does any one doubt, all other things being equal, that these apartments are the ones that will be sold or rented first?

Families of today are educated to demand the comforts and conveniences of electric service, and they are quick to see the advantage of living in an apartment that will minimize the drudgery of housekeeping.

We have other ideas along these same lines. Drop us a line and we will talk them over with you.

AUCTION SALES OF WEEK.

Except where otherwise stated, the properties offered were in foreclosure. Adjournments of legal sales to next week are noted under Advertised Legal Sales.

* Indicates that the property described was bid in for the plaintiff's account.

The Auction Market.

Better demand for properties at public auction was manifested last week in the Real Estate Salesroom, 14-16 Vesey street, and in a number of instances parcels went to outside interests. Two special sales were held last Thursday, one at the stand of Joseph P. Day and the other by M. Morgenthau, Jr., Company. Among the buyers at Mr. Day's sale were Hugh J. Smyth, who paid $55,100 for the southwest corner of Seventh avenue and 28th street, and $46,000 for the northwest corner of Eighth avenue and 33d street, William Lustgarten who bought a 26th street tenement for $15,300, and Catharine Marrone who bid successfully with $30,450 for a seven acre tract in Eastchester road.

Among those who acquired property at Mr. Morgenthau's stand were the following: The Yen Realty Co., which paid $45,000 for a dwelling in West 52d street, and Henry P. Wall, who obtained the vacant plot at the northwest corner of Lexington avenue and 120th street for $48,000. The twelve-story hotel at 33 West 53d street, offered by Joseph P. Day at foreclosure, was sold to Robert McGill for $199,225.

Out of a total of forty-two offerings this week, parties-in-interest obtained twenty-two, four were either adjourned or withdrawn, and sixteen went to outside bidders.

For the coming week tenements and apartment houses comprise the bulk of the offerings. The most important sale of the week will concern the big apartment house at 50 Central Park West to be sold by Henry Brady as a result of an action brought by the Republic of Panama against the Apartment Holding Company to recover $729,907.

BUILDING MANAGEMENT

THE NEED OF FIRE-PUMP PROTECTION AND THE BEST KINDS OF PUMPS TO HAVE

BY EZRA E. CLARK*

Conducted by Raymond P. Roberts, Building Manager ot American Real Estate Co.

THE argument is being advanced today that because 90 per cent. of our fires are being extinguished with perhaps a few sprinkler heads, rarely requiring the service of a fire pump, insurance interests are demanding supplies of water far more generous than is reasonable, and that much smaller supplies and smaller pipe connections would amply suffice to give reasonable protection. This logic is attractive to the man who pays for the equipment. But fires have a way of proceeding along illogical lines, and it is the wise man who holds himself prepared for the illogical and the unexpected condition, even for the worst conceivable condition, the doubtful 10 per cent.

In this paper the term fire pump is used in its restricted sense, i. e., a pump that is installed in a fixed position for fire purposes. In this sense there are three or four distinct types, generally acknowledged, rotary, duplex, centrifugal and the power pumps.

Type of Pump.

The type of pump to be selected should be determined by the character of power available for the purpose. Naturally the most reliable source of power at any situation would be chosen, and then a pump selected that can best be driven with that power. This should be the general rule. Every type of pump, however, has its own limitations, and these must be kept in mind when studying the whole problem. The natural selection would be a pump that can run at or near the speed of the prime-mover.

Duplex Pumps.

Where steam is the most reliable source of power the duplex "Underwriter" pump is usually the choice, because of its record of proved value. It is also much the cheapest of any steam-driven fire pump of acceptable reliability, selling for approximately ten cents a pound. In spite of its numerous parts, liable to derangement, this pump has been so thoroughly boiled down, so to speak, that with present day construction it is proving to be one of the most reliable of fire-protection appliances. The steam-turbine driven centrifugal pump is, of course, available for those who are willing to pay the price, but it costs approximately twice as much. Its main advantage over the duplex is its simplicity of working parts. Its disadvantages lie in the fact that a pressure of 100

*Engineer and Inspector Factory Mutual Fire Insurance Company. This article is condensed from a paper delivered before the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, 29 West 39th street, New York.

THIS paper calls attention to the need of fire-pump protection, and its relation to the business man, to the valuable service given and to be given by the fire pump, and to the development of the so-called Underwriter fire pump and the essential constructional features of each type. The suitability of each type for the character of power available is discussed and the importance of a proper installation to secure a fire pump's best service pointed out.

to 125 lbs. of steam is required for good results, whereas, with a duplex pump, 50 lbs. of steam is ample for ordinary fire pressures. The outfit is also subject to the same limitations as to suction lift as all centrifugal pumps. When the steam turbine centrifugal has become standardized and its price made more nearly competitive with that of the duplex, no doubt it will receive a much wider introduction as a fire pump.

As steam began to supplement and in cases supplant water power in mills, steam-driven pumps were installed to help out or replace the rotary. At first the single cylinder pump was used, but the advent of the duplex pump marked the beginning of a better machine for fire purposes. The duplex type of fire pump is so well known that it seems hardly necessary to describe it, full information as to construction being available in published specifications. This pump as first made for the trade lacked several features demanded for fire protection, and frequent failures in the field resulted. Improvement was plainly needed. When the development of the Underwriter type of duplex pump was undertaken by Mr. John R. Freeman in the early nineties much opposition was encountered. Pump builders did not fully sense the importance of some of the features that were demanded.

The old trade duplex pumps were found with steam and water passages restricted, but these have been enlarged in the Underwriter type, and a higher speed thus made possible. The trade pumps were iron fitted and rapidly became rusted through neglect, so that they could not be started; the Underwriter pump is brass fitted wherever corrosion is liable to seize the working parts.

Electrically Driven Pumps.

be made to conform to the speed of the standard motor and all intermediate gearing avoided. The direct-connected motor and pump form thus the simplest possible arrangement. It has, however, certain limitations which will be noted later, and there may exist conditions which some form of power pump electrically driven would meet with better satisfaction.

Their Best Field.

Comparatively few power pumps are in use as fire pumps, owing to their higher cost. Their best field is where a constant service pump of good efficiency is needed, that can in the emergency be used for fire purposes. The triplex type of power pump is much to be preferred to the single or duplex forms, owing to its steadier discharge pressure, and as it is usually built in the vertical form the floor space required is the minimum. A strong point in favor of the triplex power pump as compared with a centrifugal is its higher efficiency, running as high as 80 to 85 per cent. for outside packed plungers as against the usual 65 to 70 per cent. for the centrifugal. That type of triplex pump employing one centrally located driving gear is much to be preferred to those having two overhung gears. Experience has shown that the central gear drive will better insure an even distribution of power, and thus avoid undesirable stresses on gear teeth and possible breakage. A notable example of the central gear triplex power pump may be found in the high-pressure fire service station in Philadelphia, where seven such pumps are operated by gas engines, and have given excellent satisfaction with a minimum of repairs.

The centrifugal pump is comparatively a newcomer in the fire pump field. It is distinguished from all others in being a velocity pump—the pressure varying directly as the square of the peripheral velocity of the impeller—for any given quantity of water. The electric motor is no doubt responsible for its coming so rapidly into favor. The constant speed motor direct-connected to the pump makes the simplest and cheapest arrangement and affords a fairly wide range of capacities and pressures. The variable speed motor or steam turbine, costing a little more, would place the pump more nearly on a par with the steam duplex as to range of pressures, and, the author believes, would make the preferable outfit. Its greater cost and complication is the general objection to it.

There are two types of centrifugal fire pumps built, one with the simple cylindrical case, known as the volute pump, and the other being provided with a diffusion vane casting or chute case. The diffusion vane type, sometimes called the turbine pump, employs a series of gradually enlarging passages that permit a more gradual change of the velocity of the water into pressure than does the volute, which results in some slight gain in efficiency. This, however, is not an essential part of an acceptable fire pump, and as the volute type of pump (Fig. 3) is much simpler in construction and yields efficiencies that are satisfactory (60 to 70 per cent.), this type of centrifugal fire pump is being generally adopted. This type also lends itself better to the horizontal division of casing, which is preferred to the circumferential division, as it permits quicker and better access to the interor for overhauling or cleaning.

The simplicity of the centrifugal, having but one moving part, appeals to every engineer. There are no valves to choke up, no plunger to wear out, no valve motion or gears to break, and no dangerous pressures possible even with all outlets closed, unless specially provided with a variable-speed prime mover. The discharge is steady, smooth, devoid of shocks, and more nearly approximates that from a gravity supply than any other pump. But it has its limitations, which should be fully realized and considered in making an installation. Unless provision is specially made for a variable speed, its maximum working pressure is usually not planned to be very much above 100-lb. pressure, running for the smaller flows in some cases up to 130 or 140 lb. So that the water pressure needs of a situation should be carefully studied before deciding on this form of pumping outfit, and if higher pressures are needed, either a special form of impeller should be substituted or a variable speed provided.

A centrifugal has no power to exhaust the air from a suction pipe, as has the rotary, duplex, or other displacement pump. For this reason, the suction supply should come to the pump under enough head to flood the pump casing, thus insuring its being primed. If a lift is unavoidable, then it becomes necessary to provide a suitable foot valve and a generous supply of priming water, enough to fill completely the suction pipe and pump casing. This feature, of course, limits the centrifugal to situations where there are easy suction supply conditions.

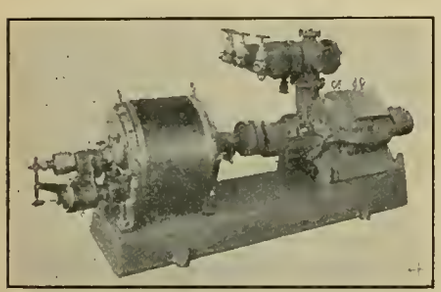

FIG. 4. STEAM TURBINE DRIVEN CENTRIFUGAL FIRE PUMP.

In cost the centrifugal pump with bedplate is but little more than the duplex per pound, but the addition of driving motor brings up the price very materially, so that the outfit combined costs 15 to 16 cents per pound, and weighs about the same as a duplex pump. For a given type, the speed of a motor determines its size and influences the total price of outfit. It may roughly be stated that the centrifugal pump and motor costs 50 per cent. more than the duplex. There is a wide difference, however, in the weights of the same size pump among different manufacturers.

Installation.

In a brief paper like this the details of a pump's installation cannot be properly reviewed, and yet the success or failure of a fire pump depends very much on its being properly erected and connected up. Briefly, it may be said that a fire pump must be so located as to be safe at all times from the breakage of its pipe connections due to the falling of floors and machinery, and safeguarded from any influence such as smoke, fire or flood that might drive away the operator. It should be accessible at all times for operating and overhauling, and not blockaded by miscellaneous storage. It must permit of practicable pipe connections, the suction pipe receiving first consideration, and the steam and discharge pipes so run as to be safe from damage and always be in commission. The exhaust should go direct to atmosphere, and not be tied up with other pipes.

The suction supply should preferably be practically inexhaustible, such as a river or lake, and a suitable intake, properly screened, provided. Where a stored supply only is available, it should be large enough to supply the pump for two hours, more or less, depending on conditions. No cast-iron rules can well be established, as the insurance engineer having jurisdiction is expected to weigh conditions, and secure a reliable pump service without expensive or complicated refinements. Full details as to pump installation have been covered in the several publications and specifications which from time to time have been developed in the Factory Mutual Inspection Department.

It will perhaps be of interest, and not altogether without value, to look a bit into the future and try to discern what is to be the development of the fire pump. It is not at all unlikely that the steam turbine centrifugal will gradually displace the duplex pump, as its design becomes simplified and standardized, and its cost lowered. Where steam is not available, we shall find the electric-driven centrifugal, or the gasoline-diven rotary, and as fast as its development permits, the gas-turbine-driven centrifugal will possibly win recognition and receive adoption. To whatever extent insurance interests adopt these new appliances, it will be done with any eye single to their proved value, as regards simple and rugged construction and reliability of performance.

Committee Reports at Duluth.

At the convention of the National Owners and Building Managers' Association, to be held in Duluth July 14-17, the following committees are slated to make reports.

—For a city of 2,098,000 people, extending over an area of 106 square miles, Vienna enjoys a remarkable immunity from serious fires. The total losses for the last year amounted only to $355,000, arising from 1,062 fires. In the first half of the same year New York City's losses are reported as $5,820,000 from 8,455 fires.

STANDPIPE GATE VALVES.

Fire Commissioner Robert Adamson Modifies Recent Order for Removal of Gate Valves.

FIRE Commissioner Robert Adamson issued an order a short time ago which called for the removal of gate valves in standpipe lines. The object of this order was to prevent the shutting off of these valves by carelessness or with malicious intent, resulting in rendering the line useless in case of fire. A committee from the New York Building Managers' Association waited upon the Fire Commissioner to remonstrate against this order, with the argument that when gate valves were removed, if any leak should occur in the standpipe system, it would be impossible to prevent damage caused by the emptying of the tank. On the other hand, with the gate valve present, a minimum amount of damage might be sustained by its being shut off as soon as a break occurred.

VALVE WITH SEAL ATTACHED.

A suggestion was made to the Commissioner to permit the gate valves to remain strapped with flexible wire and seals attached to this wire, these seals and wire to be furnished by the owners of the building and sealed with a punch to be retained at fire station nearest the building and allowing the fireman to make inspections when he inspects the building and repunch a new seal in the event of its being necessary to break the original in case of emergency. A sign could then be placed near the seal to read as follows:

> Do not break this seal, except in case of emergency, under penalty of the law.
> By order of
> ROBERT ADAMSON, > Fire Commissioner.

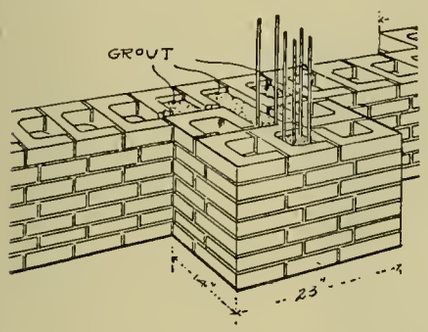
This suggestion was placed before the Commissioner during a visit of the committee, and later by letter, asking him to take the matter into serious consideration. Commissioner Adamson realized the strength of the argument advanced by the Building Managers' Association and in a recent letter from him he rescinded his former action and ordered the change in the regulation by the following order:

> "In cases where gate valves are used under tanks in standpipe lines, provided they are sealed open with an approved lead seal, and a notice posted requiring the superintendent or engineer of the building to immediately notify the commanding officer of the nearest fire company when it is found necessary to break the seal."

"This action on the part of the Fire Commissioner," said William M. Shackford, of the New York Building Managers' Association, "has created a favorable impression among real estate interests who are working for a closer harmony between real estate owners and public officials."

—The action of the Public Service Commission in approving the route for the extension of the Fulton street elevated line to Jamaica means that all points in southern Nassau County will be brought nearer to Park Row in point of time by joint trolley and elevated service.

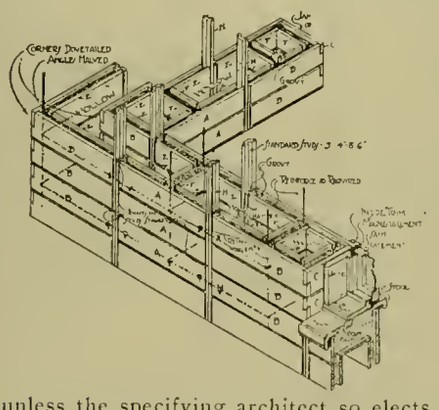


USEFUL APPLIANCES

Novelties, New Applications of Familiar Devices and the Trend of Invention, Designed to Aid the Architect, Builder and Building Manager, Described Without Regard to Advertising Consideration.

A New Type of Construction.

A NEW form of construction is being introduced in the West that promises to have many applications in building construction throughout the country. Through the courtesy of A. Warren Gould, an architect of the Washington metropolis, and the Pacific Builder and Engineer, the Record & Guide is privileged to present a description with illustrations showing the application of unit concrete brick construction which was followed in actual construction at Fourth avenue and Seneca street, Seattle.



There are two distinct modes of construction; one, unit brick; and the other, unit concrete sectional construction. The former consists of concrete units equaling in bulk several bricks in usual wall construction, but so shaped as to give a face representing brickwork of ordinary appearance. At the same time there is furnished a hollow wall of remarkable strength and lightness, the face of the wall being of character and color of the best work produced by the use of pressed face brick.

The other, or sectional construction, is the more novel and interesting, as a large variety of walls and roofs can be constructed by the use of the same molds. The finish may be in color and texture to suit the individual taste. The economic advantages are identical with those of other types of fireproof construction. The cuts illustrate the application of both types. The Washington Unit Brick & Tile Company, of Seattle, is the manufacturer of this novel building commodily invented by F. McM. Sawyer, a Los Angeles architect.

More closely described, the unit brick is made up in convenient dimensions, less bulky than the familiar concrete building block, and yet not in such small units as the common or face brick size, unless the specifying architect so elects. Ample furring space is provided to ensure positive insulation against heat and cold, and at the same time affording absolute freedom from deadly wall dampness. But its great advantage seems to be that the brick as laid up in the wall gives an automatic bond which eliminates the use of tie-rods, frequent headers or mortar bonds. Furthermore, the bond is said to be uniform in all parts of the wall. It is claimed that the bearing strength of these units is nearly equal to that of the ordinary sandlime brick.

Waste space in walls may be eliminated by running flues, ventilator ducts, wires, steam pipes water pipes or soil pipes through them. Thus concealed it is a simple matter to cut out a row of these brick in order to get at the pipes, and after the repairs have been made, to cover up the defect in the wall by using unit bats that will match the remaining half of the damaged unit brick. The brick can be used in conjunction with any kind of front brick facing. A bricklayer can set up, it is claimed, an equal area of wall with greater ease in a given time than he can in an ordinary brick wall.

Compression tests at Columbia University by James S. Macgregor on a built-up column of unit concrete brick set on end resulted in an ultimate strength of 1,785 pounds per square inch. Another compression test on a rectangular portion after transverse test revealed an ultimate strength of 2,910 pounds per square inch.

An absorption test was made on the other half of the same brick employed in the same compression test. The specimen was dried thoroughly and weighed. It was then immersed to within one-half inch of the upper surface. When removed from the water and weighed at successive intervals, the percentage of increase in weight showed, after soaking 30 minutes, an increase of 1.81; after 2 hours, 2.56; after 4 hours, 2.88; after 24 hours 3.59 and after 48 hours 3.83 per cent. The transverse test showed a modulus of rupture of 531 pounds per square inch.

Hollow Shelf Refrigeration.

OWNERS desiring to incorporate a distinct novelty in their projected apartment houses, private residences, hotels and similar buildings where ice bills run up to large monthly figures, will find in a refrigerator ice-water system being introduced into this territory something that will conduce largely to the success of their enterprise. The system, in a word, utilizes the water flowing from the melting ice and employs it in procuring further ventilation on the same principle that a smokeless boiler utilizes smudge-smoke, the waste product of the coal, by reburning these gases thus obtaining a 99 per cent. combustion from the fuel instead of only 33 1-3. The hollow shelf system of refrigeration utilizes 99 per cent. of the refrigerating power of ice instead of only one-third. Ice water is valuable refrigeration gone to waste. This system conserves it.

The cut shows the salient features of the device that does not employ chemicals, salt or ammonia in its operation. This shelving, furthermore, can be installed in any refrigerator regardless of size. The system is being installed here by the Efficiency Metal Products Company, Inc., 220 West 42nd street.

Solving a Ceiling Problem.

IN the new Jefferson Theatre building, just being completed in Philadelphia, stringent building laws presented a rather difficult problem to the construction of the auditorium ceiling. In that city it is required that the structural steel of such structures be protected with 3 inches of concrete. This is usually accomplished by making the ceilings, which hang below the structural steel work of the roof, of a 3-inch concrete slab.

This slab can be constructed in the usual manner with wood forms and the slab reinforced with rods or expanded metal, but the unusual height of the auditorium made this type of construction both inconvenient and expensive. After inspecting various types of self-centering materials, the Bureau of Building Inspection finally approved 1 inch, No. 26 gauge Rib-Trus plates, manufactured by the Berger Manufacturing Co., Canton, Ohio, for spans not exceeding 3 feet. The construction calls for plates resting on the flanges of angles or "T," which are bolted to the chord of trusses or other main bearings. Over the Rib-Trus is placed 3 inches of cinder concrete, and the bottom of the plates are plastered to form the finished ceiling.

New Way of Teaching Drawing.

A NEW way of teaching free-hand drawing is being introduced by Anson Kent Cross, of 1020 Commonwealth avenue, Brookline, Mass. Glass is used instead of paper. The students draw by eye alone. When the sketch is as perfect as it can be made, it is held before the object to see if it will cover it in all details. This is accomplished by the use of a small spirit level in the frame. When this spirit level shows the glass to be level, comparison is made with the object, and if it thoroughly conforms to the subject, it is considered perfect. The illustration shows a sketch made of one of the transparent drawing glasses after only a few months' practice.

Repair Pipe Without Excavation.

IN this age of invention, ingenuity and higher economics in building maintenance and construction, it is not surprising to have money saving propositions put up to owners and managers. But the announcement that all kinds of underground piping and conduits can be repaired so as to make them watertight without the necessity of excavating is somewhat startling. Buildings in London have this sort of service at their disposal.

The illustration shows a piece of ordinary vitrified tile sewer pipe repaired by a process perfected by the Rapid Drain Repairing & Construction Co., of Stanhope Terrace, Gloucester Gate, London, N. W. By the use of patented machinery this company makes fractured drains permanently water-tight without incurring the expense and inconvenience incidental to excavating. The pipes are first chemically cleansed and then liquid cement is forced into all cracks, fractures and leaking joints, after which all the cement not actually used in filling in defects is removed and the pipes are left with a clean, true bore, as serviceable and with as full capacity as they had originally. The method is inexpensive.

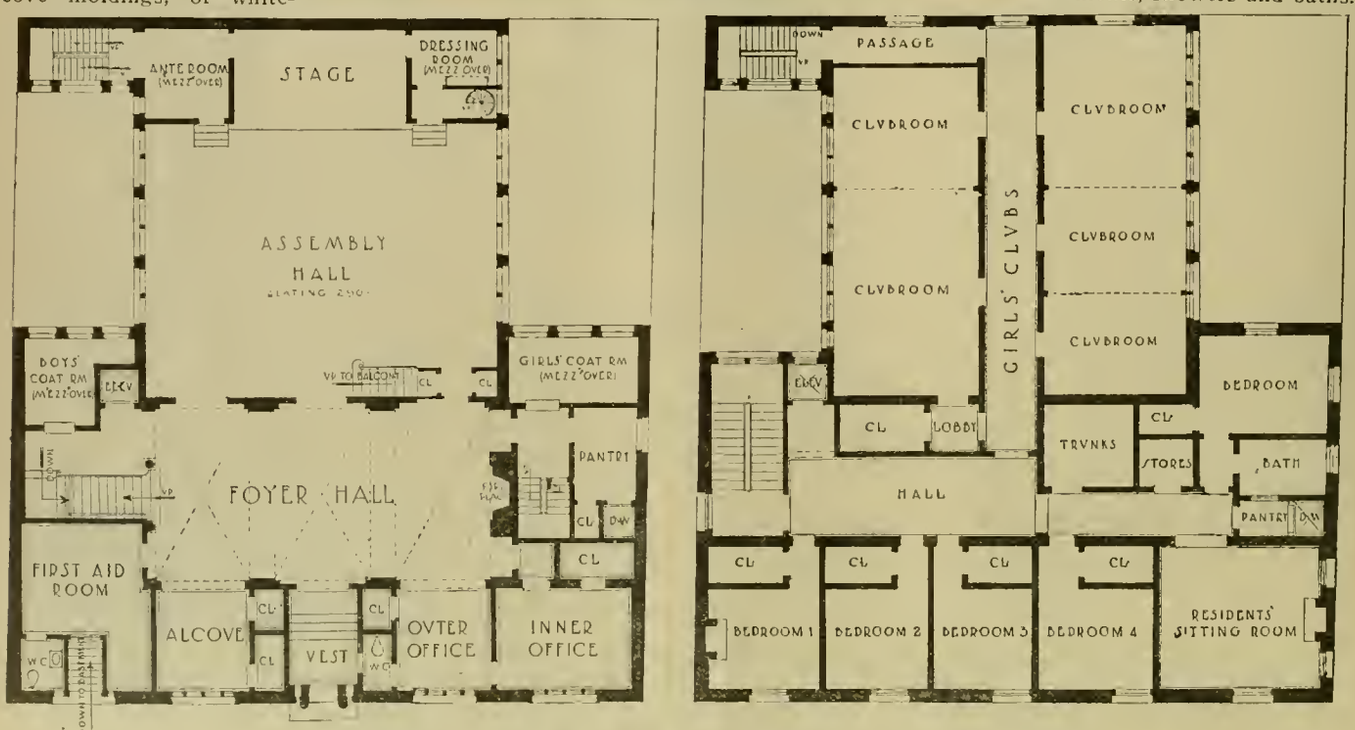
CURRENT BUILDING OPERATIONS

Settlement House For Barrow Street—To House the Various Activities, Social, Educational and Philanthropic Societies in This Section of the City.

MANHATTAN will be justly proud of a new settlement house that is to be typical of the progressive spirit of the community which it is to serve. In style it will be a dignified Georgian Colonial structure of Harvard brick with either marble or limestone trimmings, or a harmonizing nature. The structure will be situated at 27-31 Barrow street, one of the oldest thoroughfares in Greenwich Village, at the intersection of the new Seventh avenue extension now being built, and will contain all the physical comforts that experts have been able to devise, within the appropriation of approximately $180,000.

The purpose of this building is to house the various activities, social, educational and philanthropic of the Greenwich House Settlement, surrounding this extremely long neglected territory of the Borough of Manhattan. Architecturally, the exterior is to be modeled upon the type of the old architecture of Greenwich Village, to preserve a domestic effect and to avoid as far as possible the appearance of a public institution. The detail of the interior will follow very closely the character of the exterior in style, and this interior is treated in a very broad and simple manner. The woodwork throughout will resemble such as is customary in hospitals, very simple in design with cove moldings, of white-wood, finished in white enamel paint.

The height of the building will be eight stories in the rear and four in front, with a steep mansard roof, the ground dimensions being 75 by 80 feet. The basement contains a carpenter shop for instruction in manual training, the kilns for pottery made at the settlement, laundry, storage, heater and coal rooms, kitchen, cold and storage rooms and janitor quarters.



On the first floor is the large foyer hall covered by a vaulted ceiling and lighted by the large arches across the front; also the first aid room, a small neighborhood clinic and offices, boys' and girls' coatrooms, and at the rear is the assembly hall with a balcony affording a seating capacity of nearly three hundred for the use of meetings, entertainments and gatherings.

On the second floor, opening on to an ornamental iron balcony along the front, are the residents, drawing-room and dining-room used for smaller gatherings, as well as the exhibition-room intended for the flourishing art department of the settlement, a balcony, pantry and boys' toilets.

The third floor is equipped with an art department itself and glazing-room together with the living-rooms, study and baths for the head residents, Professor and Mrs. Simkhovitch. There is also arranged on this floor a small flat to be used in teaching the elements of proper housekeeping in surroundings no different in size from their own to the young girls of the tenements.

The fourth floor is divided into five girls' clubrooms, four bedrooms, baths, and sitting-rooms. The fifth floor is given up to boys' clubrooms, council-room and common room. The sixth floor has a large gymnasium, residents' rooms, girls' locker and baths, boys' locker and baths and office for the physical director.

On the eighth floor is a large sun-parlor stretching across the front, nine bedrooms with large press closets and a bath. The roof will be laid out with an enclosed playground, and the entire construction is to be fireproof throughout. The equipment includes one electric passenger elevator, one dumb-waiter, a steam heating plant, best electric fixtures and iron stair-cases with marble treads and risers. An innovation that will be appreciated is the splendid toilet arrangements, showers and baths.

INTERESTING SETTLEMENT HOUSE TO BE ERECTED IN BARROW STREET.

Delano & Aldrich, of 4 East 39th street, the architects of this complete enterprise, have had previous experience in the wants of a modern building of this character, for they have designed other structures of this type in this vicinity and elsewhere. The working drawings have not yet been started and it is yet indefinite just when building operations will be undertaken, owing to the fact that only half of the funds necessary have been subscribed. Preliminary estimates will be received by the architects within a few days.

The properties were accumulated through Pepe & Brother, who bought them for the society from Louis Malavita and Anterio Giordano, who previously purchased them from the owners, James A. Lowe, Kate Masterson and Liugia Ranazzotti.

The society has for its president, Herbert Parsons, of 52 Williams street. Dr. E. R. L. Gould is chairman of the building committee, which also includes Miss Clara Spence, William Demerest and Mrs. V. G. Simkhovitch.

Bronx Y. M. C. A. to Cost $300,000.

Louis E. Jallade, 37 Liberty street, architect for the new association building which the Young Men's Christian Association, 215 West 23rd street, contemplates erecting at 160th-161st streets and Washington avenue, the Bronx, will in all probability be ready to call for bids from general contractors about May 15. The exterior will be of brick and limestone, four stories, with ground dimensions of 200 x 75 feet. Every part of the building will be strictly fireproof. The estimated cost is $300,000. Officers of the association are: William Fellows Morgan, president; Samuel Sloan, treasurer, and Harry M. Orne, secretary.

Edison Co. to Start 39th St. Station.

The New York Edison Company, 130 East 15th street, now plans to start operations on its large convertor station at 117-119 West 39th street, sometime before July 1. Bids are to be taken for the construction about June 1, and the contract will be awarded soon after. The building is to cost approximately $250,000, will be six stories in height, 50 x 100 feet in size, of brick and steel. William Weissenberger, Jr., 55 Duane street, is the architect. Contract for the foundation has been placed with the Kennwell Contracting Company, of 12 Elm street.

New Fourth Avenue Loft Building.

Frederick Zobel, architect, 35 West 39th street, is preparing preliminary plans for a store and loft building to be erected at the northwest corner of Fourth avenue and 28th street for Robert Zobel, builder, 35 West 39th street. The new building will be twelve or sixteen stories in height and will be built of brick, limestone and terra cotta. The owner will build, but it has not been decided when work will be started.

New York Architects Win Competition.

Tracy & Swartwout, architects, 244 Fifth avenue, were selected as having presented the most satisfactory plans for the proposed George Washington memorial to be erected at Washington, D. C. The memorial will cost in the neighborhood of $2,000,000 and plans were submitted in competition by many of the leading architects of the country. The plans will now be submitted to the National Fine Arts Commission for approval.

Business Building for Sixth Avenue.

Albert Joseph Bodker, 62 West 45th street, is preparing preliminary plans for an eight-story store and loft building with ground dimensions of 60 x 125 feet, to be erected at 874 Sixth avenue. The name of the owner is, for the present, withheld. Bids will probably be taken by the architect about June 1. The last owner of the property on record is the Estate of David W. Bishop, 14 Wall street.

Plans for Remodeling Post Office.

Oscar Wenderoth, supervising architect, at Washington, D. C., will soon start plans for remodeling the post office building in City Hall Park, for which the Government is to spend approximately $300,000. A. B. Fry, Custom House, is engineer.

TRADE LITERATURE

Factory Heating.

The new Stevens Duryea plant at East Springfield, Mass., is heated by a very unique method by the use of unusually large heating coils without the use of a vacuum. The system which was provided by Warren Webster & Co., Camden, N. J., is a semi-modulation system, involving the Webster Sylphon automatic trap at the return end of each coil and an automatic sylphon regitherm controlling balanced steam supply valves admitting steam to the coils. It is said that this instrument does its work with precision under all sorts of varying weather changes. The system has proved effective and satisfactory during the two winters it has been in use.

A Portfolio of Lighting Helps.

The National X-Ray Reflector Company of 6 East 29th street, this city, has issued an elaborate portfolio catalogue describing in detail the method and type of installations recently installed in prominent buidings. The catalogue is accompanied by a set of twenty-four detail drawings with half-tone inserts showing types of installations, all bound in cloth and board. Only a restricted number of these catalogues have been issued to architects.

New Pomeroy Catalogue Out.

The S. H. Pomeroy Co., successors to Voigtmann & Co., 282 East 134th street, announces the issuance of its 1914-1915 catalogue which is full of information of value to architects and prospective owners facing window, sash and transom problems in building construction. Since the company began the manufacture of fire windows in 1897 the company has introduced twenty-six varieties of window construction, some of which are in use in the largest buildings in the city. The company specializes in high grade products all manufactured under the label of the Underwriters' Laboratories.

March Doorways.

The Richards Wilcox Manufacturing Co., of Aurora, Ill., in sending out the March edition of doorways announces that while the mailing list for this little interesting magazine is already large, it will be glad to add to it the name of any architect who does not now receive it. The publication is sent out gratuitously. It keeps the architect, builder and dealer in monthly touch with the development and improvement of sliding doors.

BUILDING MATERIALS AND SUPPLIES

GLASS MANUFACTURERS PREPARING TO MEET BELGIAN COMPETITION IN THIS MARKET—COMMERCIAL SIZES OF COAL CRAMPED

Effect of New Standard of Buildings on Construction—The General Market.

WITH a slightly firmer tone in common brick prices, a strengthening of sentiment in structural steel and an improvement in the demand for Portland cement, even though prices had to be shaded to bring it about, the week's movement of building materials in the wholesale market was such as to inspire greater confidence in the construction field. Building operations, some of which were planned long ago, are moving ahead and others are about to come out.

There is likely to be trouble in the window-glass department, due to the activity of Belgian manufacturers in trying to gain a foothold in this country. At a meeting of the American manufacturers in Pittsburgh endorsement was given to the price-cutting campaign now being waged by domestic interests on the Pacific coast, and the threat was made that if foreign glass continues to under-sell the Eastern market the same tactics would be followed here as in the West with the idea of protecting the local market from the inroads of foreign producers. Current quotations are 90-20 per cent. on single thick and 90-25 on double thick, wholesale to dealers with A quality still scarce.

Since investors take their cues from the railroads and the iron and steel industry, the low volume of steel tonnage handled by the U. S. Steel Corporation, with the general policy of conservation advertised by the railroads since the first of the year, has had its effect upon financial interests, which have been slow to encourage building speculation. The result has been that only self-financed operations, such as factories, specialty buildings, loft and residences have been able to move on their plans, some of which have been filed for half a year or more.

But since the Steel Corporation is showing a disposition to hold fast to current quotations, with the apparent idea of letting the smaller mills fill up on small profit margins, while they wait for the larger business and larger profits that now appear to be on their way, there is an increasing tendency on the part of prospective builders to take advantage of the low prices prevailing everywhere in the building material department with the exception of hardwood, crushed stone and sand, by coming into the market for material and going ahead with their long deferred building operations.

There is another factor that may operate toward an increasing volume of plan filing and speedy operation. Out in Chicago this week there was in session the National Fire Protection Association. One of the important matters before it is a proposition to change the standard of so-called fireproof construction. In fact, the word "fireproof" is to be discontinued as a description of a type of building construction, and the word "fire resistive" substituted. No wood is to be permitted, whether in construction or furnishing of "fire-resistive" buildings, save only in table tops. If this recommendation is adopted, general changes in building codes throughout the country will ultimately result for the reason that the National Board of Fire Underwriters have approved, through its consulting engineer, Ira H. Woolson, of the measure, and instead of old style "fireproof" buildings enjoying special insurance rates, it is quite probable that still lower rates will be made on "fire-resistive" buildings with the result that codes everywhere will have to be changed to meet the better type of buildings. Ultimately this new standard will be made to conform to tenement houses.

Plan filings for new buildings in the five boroughs this week compared with last week show big gains.

WINDOW GLASS.

Manufacturers Take Action Against Inroads of Foreign Interests.

IF the architect or builder who has been searching in vain for an answer to the question, "What is the matter with the glass market?" had been present at the meeting of twenty-five American manufacturers in Pittsburgh this week he would have learned that the American producers of window glass are worried over the activity of the Belgian manufacturers of this commodity in the American market.t He would have heard endorsed the action of the American Window Glass Company in making very low prices to distributors on the West Coast and a strong intimation that if the importers on the Atlantic seaboard continue to wage a price cutting war the same tactics would be adopted here. In other words, it is not the intention of the American glass manufacturing interests to surrender the field to foreign producers. It was stated that stocks in the hands of American manufacturers are in such shape that it would be a simple matter to carry the necessary surplus to meet the expected demand during the summer and fall.

Current quotations on window glass in this market is 90-20 per cent. on single thick, and 90-25 per cent. on double thick, from jobbers' lists with A quality glass on light supply.

COMMERCIAL COAL.

Steam Sizes in Lower Grades Accumulating—Cold April Upsets Calculations.

WHEN the New York building managers close up their accounts for the year they will find that their expenditures for coal have been heavier than in many former years, owing to the cold weather in the latter part of April and the first part of May. Incidentally, the demand for coal today is much heavier than distributors had expected, and the supply is not quite so free, with the exception of steam sizes in lower grades. These sizes have been accumulating until this week, when they began to move out, partly as substitute material, until the supply of better grade coal could be replenished. Barley coal has been especialy troublesome in this particular, but it is in better demand now. In the upper anthracite porta all sizes are firm on circular.

The bituminous trade reports little spot demand. As many steam consumers have ordered contract deliveries cut down, the operatars affected by the central Pennsylvania suspension have not been obliged to come into the market heavily to take care of obligations, most of them having had a large tonnage on cars when the shutdown occurred.

All loading ports are still congested, though the amount of demurrage coal at piers has been reduced to some extent during the last few days. The men have voted to return to work at the old schedules, but the companies aver that no matter what the decision of the men is the mines will not resume operations until June 1. This will keep prices up and the supply low. Some are now making future contracts where it is possible to do so.

CEMENT COMPANY EXPANDS.

Lehigh Portland With Its Subsidiaries Now Has Output of 12,000,000 Barrels.

ALL the real estate, personal property, including stores, of the New Castle Portland Cement Company, located at New Castle, Lawrence County, Pa., have been purchased by the Lehigh Portland Cement Company. It has also purchased the New Castle & Butler Railway Company, an industrial line having connections with various industries at New Castle. The mill of the New Castle Portland Cement Company has four kilns with an annual capacity of 800,000 barrels, and the real estate consists of 1,000 acres, containing shale and limestone. The Lehigh Company has two plants at New Castle, which have been in operation for several years. They have an annual capacity of 200,000 barrels. This additional plant, therefore, will give the Lehigh Company a capacity of 1,000,000 barrels.

With its new purchase the Lehigh Portland is now the owner of twelve mills. Five of these, at West Coplay, Ormrod and Fogelsville, are in Lehigh County, three at New Castle, two at Mitchel, Ind., one at Mason City, Ia., and one at Metaline Falls, State of Washington. The total annual capacity of the company is 12,000,000 barrels. The deal was authorized several weeks ago by the stockholders of the New Castle Company and is said to involve $1,200,000.

Kittanning Interests Incorporate to Handle Clay Products Here.

WILLIAM A. SIMPSON of Kingston, N. Y.; David F. Oliver of 314 West 177th street, and Edward Doyle of 155 East 85th street, are incorporators of record in papers filed at Albany this week, incorporating the Kittanning Face Brick Company for $300,000. The papers were filed by James F. Mack, an attorney of 293 Broadway. The charter gives the company the right to manufacture and deal in fire brick, fire clay, face brick, tile, terra cotta and other clay products. The company contemplates the erection of a plant at East Mosgrove, Pa. It has no connection with the Kittanning brick interests represented here by Fredenburg, Lounsbury & Houghtalling, Inc., whose plants are at Cowanshannock, Pa., just outside of Kittanning; and at East Brady, Pa.

STRUCTURAL STEEL.

Optimists Look for June Rally—Larger Discount on Pipe.

STEEL, the barometer of all building materials in this territory, is strengthening in tone, as indicated by the belief among optimists in the trade that June will bring a change for the better. This belief rests upon the expectations of many that the Interstate Commerce Commission will grant the prayed-for rate increase, which will give immediate stimulation to building construction everywhere.

At the same time it was learned in the steel trade this week that some of the larger companies had declined to take reasonably large orders at further concessions in prices, being disposed to make a stronger stand for remunerative returns. Th esmaller mills are anxious to keep their mills employed and are not, at present, taking such a determined position.

Mill advices show that April ingots were produced by all companies to the total of 1,700,0.0 tons, of which only a little over 1,500,000 tons were cast by the U. S. Steel Corporation. Upon this basis the total production of rolled products was about 1,300,000 tons, of which about 785,000 tons were produced by the subsidiaries of the U. S. Steel Corporation. Total orders were estimated at about 830,000 tons, of which 500,000 were taken by the corporation, indicating a decrease in unfilled orders by all companies close to 470,000 tons, a possible decrease of 280,000 tons from March totals.

The National Tube Company announced a reduction of price of 2 inch line pipe on May 1 by increasing the discount one point, or $1 per ton.

COMMON BRICK.

Backward Weather Responsible for Sluggish Demand.

COMMON brick showed practically no gain either in unloading or wholesale selling this week, due to backward building weather. There were better prices obtained for special or culled brick, however. Local top prices ran as high as $6 per M. and for Newark lightered brick of special quality approximately $6.25 per M. Sales in the wholesale market were approximately 700,000 below arrivals.

Official transactions for Hudson common brick covering the week ending Thursday, May 7, in the wholesale market, with comparisons for the corresponding period last year, and a comparjative statement of Hudson brick unloaded from barges for consumption here, follow:

SUB-SURFACE STRUCTURES IN NEW YORK

Assessed Values For Franchise Purposes Aggregate About $500,000,000 —About 3,800 Miles of Conduits and Mains in Manhattan Alone

By CHARLES N. GREEN*

PART I.

FEW people, including engineers, realize the importance of underground structures in our everyday life, and the need for making a more intelligent use of underground space. The reason is that the increase in the number and variety of public utilities has been so great and so rapid that they are now lying in confusion beneath the street surface in the congested districts of the larger cities.

As illustrating the importance of subsurface structures, I might say that the assessed value for franchise purposes of the utilities occupying the streets of New York City is about $500,000,000, and the companies owning these structures are capitalized at about twice this amount. This, of course, includes neither the water and $24,000,000 for sewer systems, which are municipally owned and operated, nor street paving, which is largely affected by structures beneath it.

In Manhattan alone there are nearly 500 miles of street, with over 1,400 miles of gas mains, over 900 miles of water mains, and nearly 500 miles of sewers of all kinds, and over 1,000 miles of trench for high and low tension electric service.

The laying and maintaining of street structures constitute one of the serious problems which confront the distribution department of all companies and bureaus that are compelled to use the streets for their distribution systems. The importance of these structures is only brought to our attention when something goes wrong—either our water supply is temporarily cut off, our sewers clogged, gas pipes are frozen, or some accident has occurred and our telephone, electric light or subway is temporarily out of commission.

The needs of primitive man were few, very few, indeed, and until he began to herd together in camps, little but his personal needs occupied his attention. When he began to build a permanent home, and his own tribe, clan, family or those with a common interest built near him, it became necessary to have adequate water supply, and to dispose of bodily and camp or town wastes. In his further development, the higher he rose in civilization, the greater became his necessities, both actual and those which contributed to his convenience and luxury, and after the water and sewers there followed artificial light, means of transportation for the community, heat, telegraph, telephone, refrigeration, pneumatic tubular despatch, compressed air or hydraulic pressure for ventilation or power. It was a wise town which anticipated its future needs both in the general plan of its streets and in their width. The lack of such foresight has inspired the present day and generation with the idea of city planning as a measure tending to economy, convenience and beauty.

Water was the first necessity, and we find the Greeks and Romans building extensive systems of water supply long before the dawn of Christianity. European and American cities have followed in later times much the same plans used by the Greeks and Romans. The supply of water for New York City was first from wells, but about the year 1800 pipes were laid by the Manhattan Water Company to supply the city with water. These pipes were logs of wood, bored out and reinforced at each end with an iron band driven into the end of the log.

DO YOU appreciate the extent and scope of the sub-surface improvements in New York City? The entire municipality is honeycombed with pipes and wires, all having their uses, and playing a vital part in daily life. The Record and Guide publishes today the first installment of an article by Charles N. Green dealing with this subject and showing the construction of these various improvements and their growing needs. Millions of dollars have been invested by private corporations as well as the city in sub-surface work. One of the difficulties encountered is that not only must present-day requirements be complied with but provisions must be made for years to come, in order that the highways will be undisturbed. The engineering difficulties encountered are also dealt with in Mr. Green's article.

First Water Supply.

In most cases the municipality has built, owned and operated its own water and sewer systems, but there are many places where both are still owned and operated by private companies. The reverse of this condition is true of nearly all the other public utilities.

The first gas mains were laid about 1823. The gas and water pipes of this early date had shallow hubs and were cast horizontally, differing from the present day practice. Some of this old pipe is still in service in the city. The water pipes are still laid with poured lead joints, which until recently was also true of gas pipes. Gas pipes now are more generally laid with lead wool, which makes a joint that is less liable to leak. Water pipes 20 inches and larger in diameter should be laid with air cocks at high points, and a blow-off at low points; gas mains should drain to drips which are pumped out periodically.

The first sewers were built about 200 years ago, but nearly all of them have been built since 1835. They were built in the center of the street, so that they could be easily reached from either side, unless the streets were so wide that the laterals cost more than enough to balance the cost of another sewer. In the case of water and gas mains the cost of house service is so much greater that in most instances mains have been laid on both sides of the street.

Franchises were granted to so many gas companies, each restricted to a small area, and in most cases overlapping or covering the same territory, that in some streets there were, ten years ago, five or six companies owning mains on both sides of the same street. Today it is not uncommon to find three companies in the same street, each with mains large enough to supply the total demand. Besides these service mains there are in various streets large supply or distribution mains and pumping mains. These only feed the service mains or run from the works to a holder, or from holder to holder, and serve to maintain the required pressure.

Advent of the Horse Car.

Horse cars were the first public conveyances occupying a permanent position in the streets. Whether or not the rails consisted of strap iron on wooden stringers, I do not know, but such construction was used in some cities. Sometimes the ends of the straps would become loose, curl up, and perhaps run up through the bottom of the car, to the great inconvenience and danger to passengers. The next development was, I believe, the cable, with a great deal of underground construction for sheave-pits, etc. Then the overhead trolley superseded many horse car lines, and the underground trolley superseded the cable. The underground trolley was, I believe, first used in this country in 1895 and 1896. It had formerly been used in Budapesth, but has been modified to suit climatic conditions here. Its underground construction is simpler than the cable railway. In the construction of the Broadway subway a wheel-pit was encountered at Houston street which extended from the cable building to the east side of the easterly track, thus taking up more than half the street. This pit was about 20 feet below the street surface to the floor, and was used as a wheel-pit to turn the cables coming from the basement of the cable building which was used as a power house.

The latest development has been the storage battery cars, but the street work of the track does not differ materially from that used for horse cars. There are in the city many miles of track on which cars are not operating for passengers, but solely to hold down the franchise. They occupy space which could be used to far better advantage.

Steam Pipes Installed.

About 1880 the first steam pipes were laid under the streets of New York. These pipes are of wrought iron and vary from 4 to 20 or 24 inches in diameter. Originally they were laid in wooden logs, and later in a brick conduit with a wooden cover and the space around the pipe filled with mineral wool. In the modern form the pipe is covered with air cell covering. The conduit is built of hollow tile and the space filled, as before, with mineral wool. Instead of a plank top, half a sewer tile is used, making an arched roof. On account of the need of expansion joints, valves, etc., and to prevent radiation of heat to the street surface, these mains are placed deep in the [illegible] about 15 miles of these steam mains in Manhattan, and I believe none in the other boroughs.

*Lecture delivered at meeting of American Society Engineers, Architects and Constructors, in United Engineering Building, May 12.

Then there are the elevated roads. The foundations for the supporting columns are large and restrict the area available for other structures.

Pneumatic tubes were first laid in the city about 1898. They are laid in pairs, and usually 8 inches in diameter. The pipe is cast iron, bored true throughout, and has hub and spigot joints corked with lead, except at bends, where flanged pipe is used. Bends are counterbored and made in arcs of 22½, 11¼, 10, 7 and 5 degrees, with a minimum radius of 8 feet. Particular attention is paid to the radius of bends, as it is here that trouble occurs most frequently, and it is for this reason that the pipe is flanged to provide for easy removal. Sometimes an air pipe is laid alongside the mail tubes, to reinforce the pressure at points along the line.

The carriers for 8-inch tubes are of sheet steel, 7 inches in diameter by about 23 inches outside length; the forward end is a stamped steel cap with a circular buffer of felt; the rear end is a dished lid, hinged and locked. Bearing rings of cotton duck and vulcanized rubber are held to the body by steel rings soldered on. They weigh about 20 pounds empty, and the outside is tinned; they carry from 200 to 600 ordinary letters, and weigh when filled about 30 pounds.

Wear on Carrier Rings.

When carrier rings wear down one-quarter of an inch a new set is put in. In New York City a set of rings lasts about nine months. The carriers travel from 12,000 to 15,000 miles on one pair of rings, and wear out on the average two pairs of rings before the carrier is scrapped. The speed of the carriers in various cities where mail tubes are in use is from 25 to 30 miles per hour as a maximum, with a minimum of 15 to 25 miles. The carriers are operated under pressure. Vacuum system would theoretically require less power for operation, but practical difficulties make the pressure system preferable. Speaking roughly, about three pounds per square inch per mile of tube is necessary for the mean velocity in 8-inch tube, but the initial pressure per mile of tube increases with the length of tube, so that three pounds is only correct for the first mile or two miles; 12 pounds is about the maximum initial pressure required in any mail tubes, and many of them run as low as 6 or 8 pounds.

MONIED INTERESTS TO VIEW BRONX

"BANKERS' DAY," now an annual event in the Bronx, will be held under the auspices of the North Side Board of Trade on Thursday, May 21. It has been the custom in the past to invite presidents of the banking institutions in Manhattan to take a trip around the Borough and to look over the present-day advantages and see where future expansion is possible and probable. At the present time those most interested in the welfare of the Borough are endeavoring to locate new industrial concerns within its boundaries and to this end much stress is being laid upon the unusual water-front advantages, as well as the facilities at hand for shipment of goods by rail.

NEW TERMINAL.

Thousand-foot piers are now being constructed in the Bronx and in the course of a short time it will be possible for ocean-going steamers to reach New York, by means of the Long Island Sound, and dock at the piers of the Bronx Terminal Corporation, in the Hunt's Point section. When this is an accomplished fact it should tend to revolutionize the movement of ocean freight traffic, for another new and important method of handling shipments will be provided and the present congestion relieved to a considerable extent.

An enormous amount of freight is annually landed in lower Manhattan and then carted to the upper sections of the city, but when the new order of things is put in operation this will be reversed and hundreds of thousands of dollars will be saved annually.

In addition to the docks, piers and warehouses, the development of the Bronx Terminal Corporation embraces more than two hundred acres of industrial properties, situated directly back of the water-front improvements. Railway connections will run from the piers through the industrial properties, accommodating the manufacturing plants and connect with the railroads, such as the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, the New York Central Railroad, also by means of the New York connecting bridge with the Pennsylvania Railroad, and by lighter with all of the New Jersey railroads.

This is probably the most important industrial undertaking now actively being developed in New York and will add several millions of dollars annually in new payrolls and give employment to thousands. As this development is entirely new, the most modern terminal equipment can be provided, industrial buildings of the newest type can be constructed and handling charges of freight reduced to a minimum.

Living conditions for employees are also attractive. The American Bank Note Company has its plant located in this locality and affords employment to several thousands. The new industrial improvement is accessible for employees for a five-cent fare from Manhattan and all sections of the Bronx. Employees can find find the most modern type of apartments at reasonable rentals in this section, or for those who prefer to own their own homes there much undeveloped property is available toward the northern section of the city, with adjacent parks, public golf links and bathing beaches. These advantages have been recognized and manufacturers who have an international market for their products have already perfected plans for the construction of their plants on these properties just as soon as the piers are completed and the railroad connections are made.

BUILDING THE 1000-FOOT PIERS.

The New York connecting bridge will be ready, in all probability, next year, and it is hoped to have at least part of the thousand-foot piers completed for use at the same time. Some of the largest ocean-going, freight-carrying vessels will then immediately dock at the new location.

One of the important problems to be faced in any section where industrial development is desired is the labor problem, but in this respect the Bronx is particularly favored. It has been estimated that the borough is supplying about twenty per cent. of its toilers to manufactories located outside its limits, while with the influx of new concerns these artisans could be employed locally, the advantages of which are self-evident. In many new sections where industries are located the labor must be imported and owners find great difficulty in obtaining sufficient help of the right calibre, but fortunately for the Bronx this condition does not exist, and this in itself should be a great help in the upbuilding of its waterfront.

The creation of the new terminal in the Hunt's Point section will be the means of bringing into use a large tract of land which has heretofore lain idle. Several years ago several auction sales of lots located in the vicinity were held and these owners should eventually reap the benefit of the improvement. So large is the undertaking now in course of construction by the Johnson-Kahn interests that several years will elapse before it is completed, though the owners hope that before long enough of the work will have been completed so that some vessels of size can use the location for the loading and unloading of their cargoes.

While announcement of the project was first made some time since, still there were a number of preliminary details to be arranged before active work could be started. After all the surveying and laying out of the project had been completed, then the War Department had to be consulted and consents obtained, for the work extended out into the water for some distance. Only when these details were completed could the work be started.

LOOKING ACROSS BRONX KILLS.

23rd STREET AND THE CHELSEA SECTION

A Once Deserted Thoroughfare Entering Upon a New Career —Many Public and Private Improvements in Old Chelsea.

By JOSEPH W. CUSHMAN

FEW cities in the world have been able to show as rapid and radical changes as has the City of New York. Even in this wonderful city few sections have known the changes that have been seen in the vicinity of 23d street.

Only thirty or forty years ago, this was an exceedingly high-class residential district. It was composed of splendidly built private houses. The sidewalks of both 22d and 23d streets were shaded by trees from river to river. One of the first houses to be altered for business was the Nathan House at 12 West 23d street, which, after the celebrated murder, stood vacant for many years. It was finally remodeled and occupied by the Adams Express Company.

Stern Brothers moved from Sixth avenue and occupied a location in the middle of the block. Their store was constantly enlarged and improved with the growth of their business. At this time, in the early 80's, there were few shops even on Fifth avenue —and many will remember Colonel DeLancy Kane's coach the "Tally-ho" starting from the old Hotel Brunswick at Fifth avenue and 26th street.

The success of Stern Brothers brought many other shops to this section. Property became very valuable and the district grew into a high-class retail shopping center. A full lot would rent on a ground lease at $25,000 per year.

An Adverse Combination.

The sudden development of the uptown movement left 23d street at first temporarily somewhat deserted. These vacancies, in combination with high taxes, various necessary alterations and the orders of the new Factory Department, including new spring styles in fire escapes, have proved a great hardship. Owners, however, are now encouraged by the outlook.

The number of leases already made in an unusually dull season is a hopeful indication of what may be expected under ordinary conditions. The new subways, with stations at 23d street on both the Broadway and Seventh avenue lines, will make the district unusually accessible. The extensions of Sixth and Seventh avenues southward will also aid materially in this development.

The Chelsea Neighborhood Association has been doing excellent work in encouraging the development of the quieter streets in the western section as a residential neighborhood. Chelsea Park is now well lighted and policed. The public schools are being brought up to date, with gymnasium classes for both sexes.

Chelsea may proudly boast one of the finest baths in the city when the new building at 409 West 28th street, facing Chelsea Park, opens its swimming-pool, gymnasium, baths, roof-garden and running track to the public during the summer. The structure will cost $170,000, and will be fitted out to accommodate conveniently both sexes.

For the Young People.

The Board of Education will shortly establish at Public School 56, 18th street, west of Eighth avenue, a girls' afternoon athletic center, the first in Chelsea, where 1,300 girls will have an opportunity to build up healthy bodies. Evening recreation centers are being established, and many other activities are contemplated to keep the young off the streets, especially at night, and to interest them in the general civic welfare.

It is probable that this improvement for residential purposes will continue in the quieter streets adapted for this purpose. The modern apartment houses already built are occupied by a good class of tenants, and as long as this class of construction is profitable it is likely to continue.

The growth of 23d street itself as a wholesale center for specialties, laces, china, glass, etc., is apt to continue, and gain increasing force. The standing of the many firms that have already leased quarters in this vicinity, and the fact that they have been so long established in old quarters, assures a permanency for the new neighborhood that it never possessed in the past.

SEVENTH AVENUE, NORTH OF 23D STREET, SHOWING THE NEW ADDITION FOR THE NATIONAL CLOAK COMPANY.

23d Street As a Wholesale Center.

The rapidity with which this change is coming, as well as the high-class character of the firms who have already located and others who are still negotiating, is most encouraging for the other owners and tenants in 23d street. It is our opinion that this movement will extend both east and west, as well as north and south of 23d street.

The large office buildings of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. and the Fifth Avenue Building have already identified Fifth avenue and 23d street with high-class business corporations. Other corporations and firms needing larger amount of room or buildings of their own will be compelled to seek quarters somewhat further from this center. It is likely that parties making leases at present will be able to secure very much better terms than they will a short time from now.

Twenty-third street began as a residential center of the highest character. It then became a retail section, second to none. With its largely increased accessibility it would seem safe to judge the future from the past and predict for this street a career as a wholesale and business center that will surpass even its own brilliant history.

The former Horner furniture building, at 63 to 67 West 23d street, vacated a year ago for the new offices in 36th street, near Fifth avenue, has been remodeled and occupied by one of the large toy importing firms of the city, the Strobel & Wilken Co., formerly of 591 Broadway. S. Herbert & Co., importers of cut glass, have moved to 35 and 37 West 23d street. The chinaware and glass importing house of Lazarus & Rosenfeld, long situated at 60 Murray street, has leased the old McCutcheon building, at 14 West 23d street, in addition to a portion of the 22d street building, in the rear. The 22d street building is held on a long leasehold. Space in the Dutton and Putnam publishing houses has been leased for a long term by the Arnold estate to the wholesale lace firm of Loeb & Schoenfeld. The Sixth Avenue and Twenty-third Street Corporation, of 415 Canal street, has also leased from Ida M. Powell the southeast corner of 23d street and Sixth avenue, and the Exide Battery Depots (Inc.), of 19th and Allegheny avenues, Philadelphia, have leased 527 to 541 West 23d street from the McKeon Realty Company. L. D. Block has leased and is already occupying the old Scribner building, and the long-established firm of Calhoun, Robbins & Co., who deal in notions and novelties have leased the Lord & Taylor old building. The new Masonic building at Sixth avenue and 23rd street, has also recently been erected and is already on an excellent basis, with many most desirable tenants. Since May 1 the conditions in 23rd street, between Fifth and Sixth avenues, show material improvement.

Bronx Street Encroachment.

In December, 1913, the Board of Estimate passed an ordinance rescinding permits and licenses for building encroachments of all kinds, news stands and encroachment signs over the building line in 149th street, between St. Ann's avenue and Third avenue. The Local Board has now adopted a resolution recommending to the Board of Estimate that the resolution be rescinded in so far as it affects 149th street [illegible] block between St. Ann's [illegible] Brook avenue.

BUILDING LAWS UNDER REVISION

Rumors Concerning the Office of Building Superintendent Refuted —New Billboard Ordinance—Factory Laws to be Scrutinized.

RUMORS concerning the office of the Superintendent of Buildings in the Borough of Manhattan have been current for several weeks. They are to the effect that Borough President Marks intends to appoint a certain architect to fill the position vacated by Mr. Miller. As the rumors come ostensibly from sources connected with the building trades, they would constitute a serious matter, if true, in view of the attitude taken by the trades last fall. From the President of New York Chapter of the American Institute of Architects, Mr. Robert D. Kohn, the Record and Guide has received the following note, which can be accepted as an authoritative and final statement of the truth of the matter, and of the Borough President's intention:

"It seems to me that the architects, engineers, builders and others interested forcibly expressed their views with regard to the administration of the Building Department during the recent campaign. Any such action as that to which the rumor refers would, therefore, be a disinct backward step, if it were to be taken without conference with the Joint Committee or some other body representing all those directly interested in the administration of the Building Department in this borough.

"When these rumors first reached me I took it upon myself to deny them, privately. I felt certain they had no foundation in fact. When it seemed likely that Mr. Miller would have to retire from the Building Department in order to devote all his time to the Building Code, I thought it was generally understood that he was to retire for a limited period and return to his original position as soon as this work was completed. One of those directly associated with Mr. Miller's administration might properly have been appointed to the position temporarily. It seemed, however, that the Borough President preferred to leave the vacancy unfilled.

"This, I am sure, is Mr. Marks' point of view. I am certain that it is not now, nor has it been the intention of the Borough President to appoint any one to the position of Superintendent of Buildings until Mr. Miller can return. It is his desire that Mr. Miller do so return to the position which he held before his resignation for the work on the Building Code at the earliest possible date. President Marks has stated that only his appreciation of the overwhelming importance of Building Code work influenced him to spare Mr. Miller from the Manhattan Department. I trust that this statement will set the rumors definitely at rest.

"ROBERT D. KOHN,
"President New York Chapter A. I. A."

New Billboard Ordinances.

Alderman Curran, the majority leader of the Board of Aldermen, has given up the effort to regulate billboards by ordinance, on the grounds of public heauty. As such regulation would be of doubtful validity, he has abandoned the ordinance which he introduced some weeks ago, and has this week substituted another based on the principles of public safety, health and morality. Mr. Curran has devoted much time and study to the subject, which has proved to be an unexpectedly big one. At the outset he wished to respond in his official capacity to a very evident public desire for some curb upon a line of enterprise that had perplexed the city fathers as well as annoyed esthetic tastes. But cities have tried not only to prohibit but to regulate billboards from the esthetic standpoint and have failed after long legal fights. Cities can by ordinance regulate billboards for reasons of public safety, health and morality, but cannot prohibit them, under the U. S. Constitution. New York proposes to try a different method—the method of voluntary co-operation and general consent, which may be even stronger than an ordinance. By so doing the city will take a step which no other city has yet taken.

Conferences have been held in which the Mayor's Billboard Commission, the Citizens' Union, the Real Estate Board, Supt. R. P. Miller, Chairman Hamilton of the Building Committee, and the City Club have participated. The conferees faced frankly the legal dificulties and resolved to ask the co-operation of the billboard companies in favoring the appointment of a voluntary outdoor advertising commission with the hope of bringing about greater consideration for public beauty and propriety. A letter addressed by Secretary Binkerd of the City Club to the billposting and outdoor advertising companies brought a cordial acquiescence from the O. J. Gude, the Van Beuren & New York Billposting Co. and the New York Edison Company.

Synopsis of the Billboard Ordinance.

The pending ordinance provides for three kinds of signs and billboards: ground signs, roof signs, and signs on the walls. Ground signs must all be constructed within the building-line; must not be over 12 feet high, except that when the face is constructed of metal they may be erected to a height of 24 feet. The owners of such signs must assume all the duties of the landlord so far as concerns the maintenance of sanitary conditions of the law and the removal of snow from the sidewalk in front of the sign.

Roof signs must be constructed so that there will be a clear space of 7 feet above the roof between the upright supports of the sign. They must not obstruct any openings to the roof or interfere with any of the fire escapes. They must be constructed entirely of metal and capable of resisting a wind pressure of 30 lbs. per square foot of surface. If they have a solid face they are limited to 31 feet in height above the roof level. If of open work, like electric signs, the limit of height is 75 feet on fireproof buildings and 50 feet on non-fireproof buildings.

Signs on walls must not obstruct windows or interfere in any way with the means of ingress or egress from the buildings. They must not project above the cornice of the buildings, except that signs at right angles to the building may be carried not more than two feet above the cornice or parapet wall.

Existing signs which obstruct windows or interfere with the means of egress are declared unlawful and must be removed within 60 days after notice from the City, otherwise the City may remove them.

Permits must be obtained for all new signs from the Bureau of Buildings, and if illuminated with electricity from the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity as well.

License fees of $2.00 are imposed on all ground signs. The fees for roof signs are $5.00 if they have solid faces and $10.00 if it is an open-faced sign.

Yearly inspection of signs is provided for.

All signs must be registered with the Bureau of Buildings and the owner's name and address must be attached to the sign.

Any unsafe signs must be removed or made secure within ten days after notice from the Bureau of Buildings, excepting that when there is immediate danger the sign must be removed or repaired at once.

Existing signs cannot be enlarged or altered unless made to comply with all the provisions of the ordinance.

The provisions of this ordinance do not in any way rescind or interfere with the present ordinance regarding the licensing of electric signs.

A hearing on this ordinance will be given at the Aldermanic Chamber, City Hall, on Monday, May 18, 1914, at half-past two o'clock.

The voluntary commission on outdoor advertising is likely to be composed of the president of the Architectural League, the president of the Real Estate Board, the president of the Municipal Art Society, the president of the Mural Painters of America, and a representative from each of the advertising corporations named above.

Duplication of Inspection—A Hearing Appointed.

Next Monday at 10:30 in the Aldermanic Chamber, City Hall, the New York State Factory Investigating Commission will give a public hearing, particularly to consider to what extent there is a duplication of inspection of manufacturing and mercantile establishments in this city, by different city and State departments, and what remedies shall be adopted therefor. The following pertinent question will be taken up:

"Shall there be a permanent conference board of the heads of city and State departments making inspections of buildings in New York City, which shall meet at regular intervals, the object of which shall be to reduce by working agreement the multiplicitv of inspections, so far as that is possible and desirable, and to prevent the issuance of conflicting orders against the same premises?"

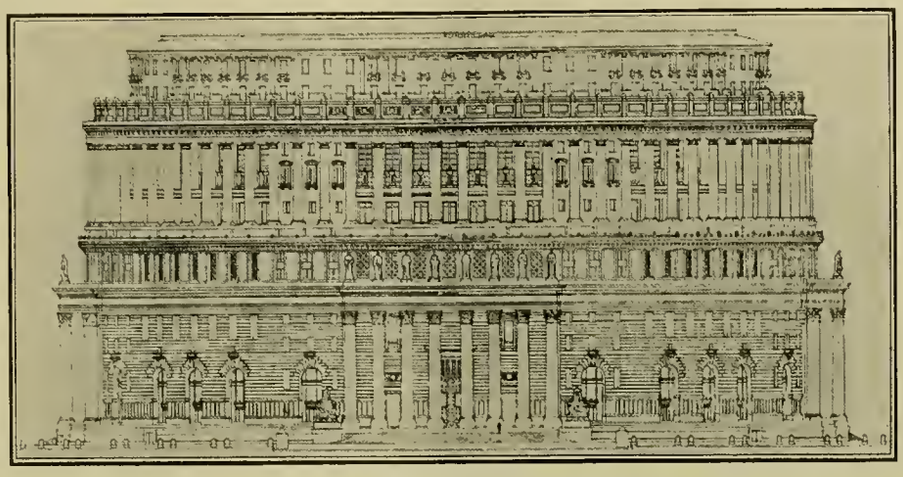
A still more pertinent question would be: Shall a number of the city and State departments making inspections of buildings in this city be consolidated, with the object of reducing the number of inquisitional inspections, mitigating the annoyance to tenants and owners and saving expense to the city?

More Inspections Imminent.

In view of the fact that the Factory Investigating Commission of the State is contemplating an extension of the Fire Prevention provisions of the Labor Law to mercantile establishments, which are defined as "places where goods, wares or merchandise are offered for sale," giving the State Department of Labor jurisdiction over their enforcement, the Committee on Fire Prevention and Insurance of the Merchants' Association has recommended that the association oppose this extension of the powers of the Department of Labor and advocate the enforcement of fire prevention laws solely by the Fire Department.

Welcomes the Advisory Council.

The Real Estate Board welcomes the Advisory Council of Real Estate Interests as a co-ordinating central body and will be pleased if it is of service to real estate. Says the R. E. Bulletin: "We trust this connection may serve as an added incentive to our own members to strengthen this board in building up our board membership."



NEW COURT HOUSE SITE WILL SAVE MONEY

By Avoiding Extra Foundation Expenses and Damages to Property By Closing Streets—Exterior of Building Only Slightly Changed.

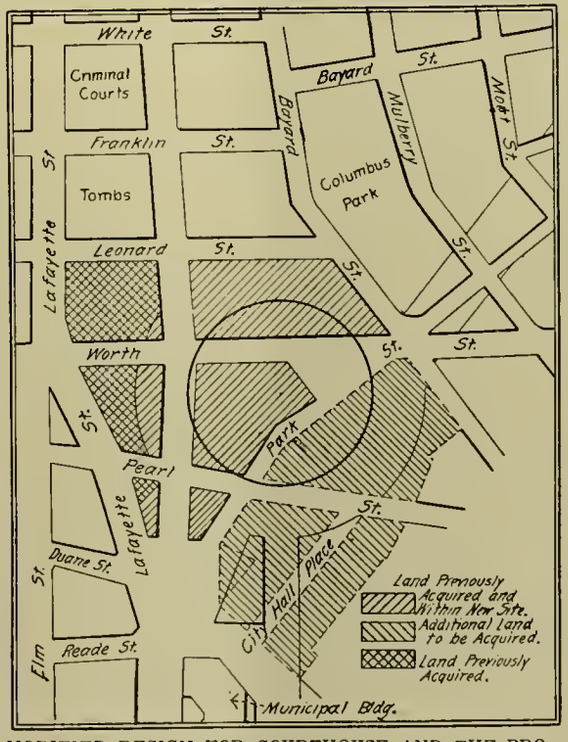
ONE MILLION DOLLARS will be saved to the city in cost of construction work at least by the change in the site for the New York County Court House which was publicly recommended this week by the Committee on City Plan of the Board of Estimate and supported by the subsequent publication of the second annual report of the Court House Board.

Although the delay in accepting plans was a source of regret, the additional time gained for studying the requirements bids fair to result in a remarkable grouping of public buildings and parks.

Lands for the site have already been selected by the Board of Estimate, and purchased. The city took title in August, 1913. The site in City Hall Park, which for economic reasons was recommended by the Court House Board, was not acceptable to the public and the Board of Estimate, and the present site was rather hastily chosen, without thought as to the nature of the foundation offered or of the cost of arching the subway.

For ten years there has been a dipute over the selection of a site for this building, primarily caused by the wide expanse of land desired by the Justices of the Supreme Court and the enormous cost of acquiring so much land in a prominent situation. Six sites were successively selected and disapproved. The present location was chosen by the Board of Estimate January 18, 1912. Under the Court House Acts, the Court House Board named, after an interesting competition, Mr. Guy Lowell as architect to prepare plans for the building, and the Supreme Court justices have concurred in the selection and approved the preliminary plans. Some changes in the interior arrangements have been made, at the suggestion of the judges, but the general design of the round court house is retained, except for certain modifications of the upper portion, including the elimination of one of the attic stories.

The members of the Court House Board are Edward M. Grout, Morgan J. O'Brien, L. Laffin Kellogg, E. Clifford Potter and Charles Steckler. Members of the staff are: Walter Cook, consulting architect, salary $10,000; E. P. Goodrich, consuling engineer, salary $7,500; Alanson T. Briggs, executive secretary, salary $5,000.



The property acquired as part of the court house site consists of six square or triangular blocks of land, the buildings on which are now being demolished. The final report of the commissioners of estimate and appraisal fixed the estimate of damage at $6,243,688.35. The awards were actually paid within fifteen months after the institution of the proceedings. Eventually the discovery was made that the site overlay the former Collect Ponds and offered a poor support for the foundations for the building, that the cost of the foundations would be excessive and that Worth and Centre streets would have to be closed, with resulting large damages to property interests.

The more the site was studied the more apparent became its deficiencies. When it became certain that readjustment of the streets within the area would be necessary a committee of architects comprising Messrs. La Farge, Flagg, Ford, Swartwout, Kendall, Magonigal and Brainard was invited by the borough president to suggest modifications in connection with the circular plan of the court house. This committee submitted a number of sketches to illustrate a considerable modification of the original site, the essential feature of which consisted in shifting the building to the east of Centre street and north to Franklin, the layout of a large park approach from the Municipal Building and a new broad diagonal street extending from the Municipal Building to the Manhattan Bridge Plaza.

These sketches were submitted to the architect and the consulting architect of the Court House Board for further consideration and as the result of further study the architect prepared modified sketches which combined all the advantages of a grouping of public buildings contained in the civic center plan and the additional suggestion of the committee of architects modified.

It is now proposed that in addition to the tract already taken the city acquire parcels in three other blocks to the eastward which would extend the bounds of the site over beyond City Hall Place and nearly to Park Row. It would take in space now occupied by the 12-storied Hallenbeck-Hungerford building and the Lupton building. It would add 165,612 square feet to the area in hand, making a total of 288,547, equivalent to 115 city lots. The average cost per lot of the present site was $85,295.

It is proposed to retain 1,221,935 square feet, costing $3,600,000, and buy $3,968,000 worth more, making a total investment for land of $7,568,500. Even at this figure it is estimated that the city will save, besides the one million in foundation costs mentioned above, a sum estimated by Mr. McAneny at $600,000, and by the Court House Board at $1,000,000, through not having to pay damages for street closings and changes in grades. By the new plan we get more land for less money than the other plan would have ultimately cost, but the net result is that the total estimated cost of the project is increased by the sum of $1,325,000. The chief considerations of the new plan are compactly stated by the Court House Board in its annual report issued this week, as follows:

MODIFIED DESIGN FOR COURTHOUSE AND THE PROPOSED NEW SITE.

Chief Considerations.

(1) The avoidance of making changes in the Centre street subway.

(2) The avoidance of the area in which the worst foundation conditions were to be expected.

(3) The avoidance of closing streets, and the consequent damage to property.

(4) The reasonable adjustment of street grades in the vicinity.

(8) The opening up of plazas north of the Municipal Building and providing convenient street connections.

(9) The creation of a circular plaza, in the center of which, as in a close, the circular building for the court house is placed, leaving a broad parkway all around it.

(10) The provision by the circular parkway for the maximum freedom of circulation between the irregular streets opening into it.

(11) The facing of the entrances of the court house so that vehicular traffic will not block the movement of people.

(12) The ownership and control by the city of all of the property fronting on the court house plaza.

(13) The reservation of the right to restrict the character and use of buildings facing on the court house square.

(14) A financial plan which will bring back to the city a return equivalent or greater than its expenditure.

(15) The various proceedings to be taken to carry out this programme under the statutory provisions.

Everything is backward this Spring, the weather as well as business.

The new law regulating building height does not prohibit towers, as some believe, but does insure good light and air through the setback provision.

A week rarely passes now that some financier from Wall Street does not cast an anchor to windward by either investing in a New York real estate equity or a bond and mortgage of large dimensions.

Building projects in Brooklyn have run two million dollars in value ahead of the record of last year to the corresponding date, and in Queens over one million dollars ahead. Perhaps the first of the great real estate revival has reached the suburbs. The real estate market in Brooklyn and Queens has also taken a decided turn for the better.

While the suggested limitations upon the heights of buildings are not in reality very much different from the average practice of the time, still to some extent they would tend to spread out the city more evenly and to level up values more equitably. One of the drawbacks to real estate is that the city has developed too much within small areas.

The excess of new legislation from Washington has unquestionably been the main cause for the present depression in business throughout the country, financiers assert. Quite as plain is it that an excess of new legislation from Albany during the past five years has produced the untoward conditions from which real estate affairs in this city are suffering. Notwithstanding, the State Legislative Factory Investigating Commission keeps busy inventing new bills to make new places for inspectors.

The Decline of Broadway.

Broadway was long considered to be the leading thoroughfare in the most populous and wealthiest city of the Western Hemisphere. Certain parts of that avenue now present a most extraordinary spectacle. The whole district between Canal and 14th streets, which is for the most part improved with tall mercantile buildings, is in a somewhat depressed condition and real estate values have of late years had a tendency to shrink rather than expand. The section from Union square to 34th street wears if anything a still less fortunate aspect. Ten years ago most of the best stores in this city were situated on this part of Broadway. Now they have all with one or two exceptions moved and many houses are entirely vacant. Tall loft buildings are gradually replacing the old retail stores, but there is so much vacant property that the process will be slow and the change will prove expensive to property owners.

North of Greeley square conditions are better, in that no change for the worse has taken place, but on the other hand neither has any change for the better. This part of Broadway as far north as Long Acre square has for the most part been improved with second-rate buildings and has never been the scene of any business activity of a high class. During the last ten years, when so many handsome buildings have been added to the stock of New York City, none of them has been erected on these centrally situated Broadway blocks. From 42d street north the thoroughfare makes a better showing. Many fine buildings have been erected, large accessions of new business have been obtained, and the property owners on these streets have shared in the general prosperity of the city and contributed to it.

In spite, however, of this exception Broadway has on the whole undoubtedly fallen from its former high estate. It is no longer the thoroughfare upon which the most interesting and characteristic of the business activities of New York City take place. In the vicinity of Long Acre square it presents a spectacle at night which is extraordinarily different from that presented by any similar amusement district elsewhere in the world, but in all its other phases Broadway has ceased to be specially metropolitan. The heart of the financial district is at the intersection of Broad and Wall streets rather than the intersection of Broadway and Wall street. In the mercantile district lower Fifth avenue and Fourth avenue contain a larger number of good modern loft buildings than does Broadway. As for the retail trade, that branch of business has almost entirely deserted Broadway—its former favorite thoroughfare. Certain important dry goods and department stores are situated on Greeley square and may be said to transact their business on Broadway, but the characteristically metropolitan retail trade has all been transferred to Fifth avenue. That avenue, in spite of the fact that it is shorter than Broadway and that it lacks the advantage of being a transverse thoroughfare, presents a far more entertaining spectacle during the daytime than Broadway ever did. Both in its architecture, in its business and in the variety, and the bustle of its life, Fifth avenue is becoming worthy of its increasing reputation as the most interesting street in New York City.

Is there any special reason for the passing of Broadway? Could its decline in business distinction have been prevented by any action on the part of the municipal government or its property owners? Probably not. For the most part the shifting of business has been the result of conditions which have been beyond control by the existing or the immediately preceding generation. The great trouble with Broadway was its lack of breadth. It was not wide enough to accommodate an increasing amount of street traffic. What with its surface cars and its narrowness any large amount of vehicular travel could not move along Broadway, and the difficulty would be increased by the fact that it is intersected, not merely by the cross-town streets but by other avenues. Nevertheless, in case the Broadway property owners had behaved differently twenty years ago it is probable that the thoroughfare would have lost less than it actually has lost. When the first Rapid Transit Commission proposed to lay out the first subway along Broadway the property owners combined and defeated the plan. The consequence is that there will eventually be three subways on Broadway instead of only one, and that the business of that thoroughfare south of 42d street unquestionably suffered a severe loss. Doubtless even if the first subway had been built as originally planned, Fifth avenue would still have come up very much as it has come up; but, on the other hand, it is almost equally certain that Broadway would not have gone down to the extent that it has gone down. That thoroughfare was the natural route for a rapid transit service, and when it was deprived of its convenience as a line of travel it lost the source of its peculiar prosperity.

The New Court House and the Federal Government.

The change in the plans for the site of the Court House, which is proposed by the committee of the Board of Estimate, is unquestionably an improvement on the present plans. It has several very considerable advantages. The whole lay-out of the neighborhood is adapted to the circular plan of the Court House, and the result will undoubtedly be an increase of effectiveness in the appearance of the building. The city will acquire at approximately the same net outlay an additional area fifty-seven per cent. greater than the area already condemned. The additional area acquired will enable it to exercise much more complete control over the whole neighborhood. If the city, the State or the Federal government does not need all of the additional property acquired, some of it can be eventually re-sold under proper restrictions. Finally, the future laying out of a diagonal street to the Manhattan Bridge Plaza will give an extremely useful line of access and egress to the large traffic which comes or goes across the Manhattan Bridge. After the Court House is erected the city will have a unique building, situated in unusually appropriate and effective surroundings. An extremely unattractive district will be converted from a near slum into a convenient and handsome plaza—in which the citizens of New York can take pride as a symbol of intelligent public spirit. The only difficulty is that for the present no other buildings are likely to be added to the Court House. The city doubtless needs a new Criminal Courts Building, but it can scarcely afford to pay for one until real estate values begin to feel the effects of the operation of the new subways. The State is not purposing any immediate building operations, and Congress has rejected almost without consideration the proposal to construct a Federal Court House in the neighborhood of the County Court House. The Government has appropriated money for additional room for the Federal judges in the Woolworth Building, and it proposes to spend $300,000 in altering the existing postoffice. The spending of additional money upon such an ugly and inconvenient structure as the present postoffice is the poorest kind of economy. In the end it will have to be abolished and a convenient and sanitary modern building substituted for it. But Congress is always reluctant to spend much money in the city which contributes enormously to the national income, and New Yorkers will have to stand on their hopes that the City Hall Park will cease to be defiled with such an architectural excrescence and that the Federal Government will help in a perfectly legitimate way to make their new Court House plaza worthy of its name.

Building Height Limitation and Land Values.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

It is too bad that the question of limiting the height of buildings, as well as regulating or limiting the style of buildings in the City of New York, was not given consideration many years ago.

By the construction of these abnormally high buildings incalculable harm has been done, but "better late than never," and it is yet time to stop further damage; and now that thought is ripe, let action be prompt.

It has been suggested that to limit the height of buildings would be to deprive the land owner of the full use and benefit of his land and that the value of land would be depressed. This is not so, as impartial and disinterested consideration will prove.

Another fallacy is the suggestion by trades unions that to limit the height of buildings would be to reduce the demand for labor. The limiting of the height of buildings will increase land values in a far greater proportion than the decrease which may result in a comparatively few instances.

Localities where the so-called skyscrapers may be a profitable structure from an investment standpoint cover but a small area in the Borough of Manhattan. In fact, I believe it is a serious question if these buildings of over a normal height, say of ten or twelve stories, are a profitable investment in any case, unless erected for some special purpose, other than renting to a large number of tenants in floors or offices. It is generally assumed, I believe, that buildings such as the one the Equitable Life Insurance Company is now erecting are erected not so much as a real estate proposition, but more as an advertisement. The Woolworth Building, I believe, is almost entirely vacant above the seventeenth floor.

As for the depreciation in value of land available for this purpose, it is safe to say the present values would never have been reached had these "towers of Babel" never been permitted. The titles to lands so affected by a limit on the height of buildings has mostly been held by the present owners for a great many years and no serious injury would be done. At the most paper profits might be partly eliminated. As I said before, this would occur only in a small area and affect very few. On the other hand, we should consider the much greater benefit resulting from such limitation.

The land owner who is damaged by the erection of these towers would no longer be deprived of the light and air for his smaller building to which he is justly entitled and with which the law of nature has endowed him. Life and property in a building eight or nine stories high is much safer.

The occupants of a twenty-four story building covering a lot fifty feet in width by a hundred feet in depth, if buildings were limited to eight stories, would require land one hundred and fifty feet in width by one hundred feet in depth. Note the natural increase in demand for land, which is purely simple mathematics. Will such increase depress or improve values? Land values are fixed not by legislation, but by the old-fashioned law of economics, supply and demand, which after all creates all values. What is a single lot worth in the most valuable section of the city, if a skyscraper is erected on each side of it? The owner could probably get very little for it.

A great many other reasons in favor of limiting the height of buildings could be advanced. I believe, though, these are sufficient, and I am afraid of tiring the reader. As for the effect on labor. Labor need not fear. The same law of supply and demand applies to it. If buildings and housing are in demand the required supply will be constructed and labor employed accordingly. The labor must be employed just the same, whether the housing is produced within an area principally contained in length and breadth on the face of the earth or in height up to the sky.

When the enormous territory on Manhattan Island, still covered with old tumble-down shanties in many sections, is once improved with buildings of normal height, and all the vacancies in buildings now existing are occupied, it will be time enough to provide dwellings or places of business up in the sky.

An Architect's Objections.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

While so much is being said about the construction of skyscrapers, I should like to give my opinion on the subject. I am in great favor of limiting the height of the buildings in proportion to the width of the street, or square, on which the building is to be erected. I would suggest that all plans for buildings which are to be built on important streets of the city should be passed by the Art Commission. I would also mention that this is done in all the important and best cities of Italy, and only two years ago certain persons in Milan, Italy, tried to file plans with the city for a skyscraper; but the plans were disapproved by the Art Commission, because the building would not be aesthetical. Skyscrapers are horrible from the artistic standpoint, especially those built on narrow lots.

From the engineering standpoint, I note that all the skyscrapers have a steel skeleton and that it is this material which supports the load. The brick, stone and terra cotta form only an enclosure for the building. Everybody knows that when steel is not very well protected it corrodes and loses its strength. In a building where there are many plumbing and heating pipes the steel is likely to be injured by leakage of pipes; and as there are electrical currents in the building for lights and telephones, the steel is apt to disintegrate on account of electrolysis, due mostly to the unavoidable current of induction, and I see great future danger to this kind of construction.

If the work for all the skyscrapers could be performed by high-class architects and civil engineers, who would take care that all the steelwork is protected, I should not foresee such great danger, but unfortunately, I notice that the construction of tall buildings is going into the hands of speculative builders, who buy the plans from a draughtsman, for so much per set, then they sublet the work per lump figure to the cheapest contractors, and I see enormous dangers that are likely to result from buildings erected in this way.

Speculative builders have in mind when erecting a building, only the sale of the building. They give no thought to whether the building is properly constructed or whether it will improve the appearance of the city. Construction of such important buildings should be entrusted only to competent architects and engineers (for there are many in America), who should be responsible for at least twenty years.

From the real estate standpoint, I have noticed that whenever a skyscraper is erected among a large number of smaller buildings, invariably all the tenants of the smaller buildings adjoining move into the newly erected skyscraper, leaving the smaller buildings almost vacant. Thus, while the owner of the skyscraper makes a great deal of money on rents, the owners of each of the smaller buildings are compelled to suffer subsequent losses, due to having their tenants vacate their buildings. As matters stand at present there is no equilibrium for owners of real estate. If the height of buildings was restricted, this would not be the case.

I am writing this from a disinterested point of view, and have no personal aim other than to express my opinion on such a widely discussed topic.

N. SERRACINO.

—The plan of the Heights of Buildings Commission seems to be is opposed only by those who misunderstand it. The hearings to begin next Tuesday afternoon at City Hall should dispel that misunderstanding.

TESTING A FIRE ORDER.

Owners of Many Factory Buildings Waiting for a Court of Appeals Decision.

The Court of Appeals has been asked to decide in a test case which was submitted this week whether a certain property owner of this city was justly convicted of a misdemeanor when he refused on the advice of counsel to obey an order issued by the Fire Commissioner to install automatic sprinklers upon his premises. In other words, did the Fire Commissioner have authority to the extent of ordering the arrest of a property owner who failed to obey one or more of the multiplicity of fire laws.

Acting on the opinion of Judge Edgar M. Cullen, late chief justice of the Court of Appeals, that the Commissioner exceeded his authority, the defendant determined to carry his case to the highest court. The cause was argued this week by Carlisle Norwood for the defendant-appellant, and the city was represented by Assistant Corporation Counsel Alexander C. MacNulty. The building affected by the order of the Fire Commissioner is twelve stories high, is used in whole or part for manufacturing purposes, and conformed at the time of its erection, only a few years ago, to all the building laws. When the defendant was served with the order the number of occupants was 526, of whom 188 were on the eighth floor and the floors above. The owner of the building and the nominal defendant in the action is Charles Kaye.

An amendment made to the City Charter in the year 1911 provides that any person who shall wilfully violate any order of the nature referred to in this case is guilty of a misdemeanor. Under section 775 of the charter the Commissioner is empowered to require in writing the installation as prescribed by "any law or ordinance" of automatic sprinklers. Counselor Norwood contends that there is no valid law or ordinance of that nature, and Judge Cullen (acting in his private capacity) agrees with him. Assistant Corporation Counsel MacNulty asserts, on the contrary, that the justification of the order from the Fire Commissioner to Mr. Kaye is contained in section 762 of the charter, or in the ordinance of December 19, 1911, both reading the same, as follows:

> "The owners and proprietors of all manufactories . . . office buildings, warehouses, stores and offices . . . shall also provide such fire hose, fire extinguishers . . . and other means of preventing and extinguishing fires as said Fire Commissioner shall direct."

The defendant claims in part that the ordinance is invalid, while plaintiff takes the position as regards this particular claim that it makes no difference whether the ordinance is valid or not, for if the ordinance is void, it did not repeal section 762 of the charter, and the fire-order which defendant has disregarded is, therefore, founded upon a law instead of an ordinance.

This is a test case; for, following the example of the defendant, many other owners of dangerous factory buildings have refused to comply with orders of the Fire Commissioner requiring the installation of automatic sprinklers, and the prosecution of these offenders has been postponed pending the determination of this appeal.

There are approximately 5,000 factory buildings in this city having an aggregate daily occupancy of over 500,000 people. Two-third of these toilers are women.

—Frederick Law Olmsted says the "obvious unfairness of creating by law a valuable monopolistic privilege" (that of maintaining existing buildings at excessive height) can be avoided by the simple expedient of taxing the special privilege, "if it is really of substantial value." Question: Is it a special privilege to derive an income of 3 per cent. from a skyscraper, when a building of normal dimensions on the same site would earn double the income rate?

R. E. BOARD PROTESTS.

Adopts Formal Resolutions Against Oppressive Labor Laws.

The Real Estate Board has passed the following resolutions:

Whereas, The existing labor laws and charter provisions for fire prevention are in many particulars unnecessary for the proper protection of life and needlessly burdensome to owners of real estate; and

Whereas, Orders issued by the State Labor Department and the Fire Department are in many cases conflicting, bewildering owners and causing needless duplication of expense; and

Whereas, Needless conflict exists between orders issued by the State Labor Department, the Fire Department and other departments of this City; and

Whereas, This condition is depreciating the value of real estate. restricting its marketability and driving manufacturers out of the City and State of New York.

Resolved, That it is the sense of this board that the duty of enforcing all fire prevention laws in the City of New York should be vested solely in the Fire Department, and that existing laws, while retaining provisions proper and necessary for the protection of life, should be so modified as to relieve property owners of needlessly burdensome requirements and unnecessary expense.

Resolved, That the President of this Board appoint a special or sub-committee to make a careful study and analysis of laws relating to fire prevention; to confer with the Labor Commissioner, the Fire Commissioner, the Borough Presidents or such other officials as may be necessary; to secure the views of such experts as this Board may sanction; this committee to report to this Board prior to the session of the Legislature of 1915 recommendations for the amendment of the existing labor laws.

Resolved, That the Board of Governors authorize such committee through the President, to employ counsel to assist and advise in making such analysis.

The Real Estate Board has also adopted a resolution saying that whereas, the New York State Factory Investigating Commission contemplates extending the fire prevention provisions of the labor laws to include mercantile establishments, whereby the enforcement of such provisions would devolve upon the State Department of Labor, that the Real Estate Board is opposed to such extension of the power of the State Labor Department and advocates the enforcement in New York City of all fire prevention laws by the Fire Department of the City of New York, which now has ample power for that purpose.

Two Important Hearings.

Two important hearings will be held at City Hall on Monday, at which real estate interests should be well represented. In the morning the State Factory Investigating Committee will hear objections to the new factory laws, and in the afternoon the Building Committee of the Board of Aldermen will hear what is thought of the new billboard ordinance.

Fulton Street Widening.

By general consent it would be a great advantage to have Fulton street considerably wider than it is, but the cost which prevents similar improvements elsewhere would be extremely heavy also in this case. The latest plan comes before the Board of Estimate from Chief Engineer Charles R. Ward of the Brooklyn Topographical Bureau.

It calls for the acquisition of a 20-foot strip on the north side of the street, between the Flatbush avenue extension and Rockwell place, where the Public Service Commission already holds a large area of ground acquired for subway purposes, and of a 10-foot strip on the south side of the street, between Rockwell and Ashland places, where the Public Service Commission likewise has a margin of land.

This widening, Mr. Ward points out, would make Fulton street 100 feet wide, between the Flatbush avenue extension and Rockwell place, and 90 feet wide between Rockwell and Ashland places. It would permit the laying out of two 19-foot sidewalks, two 23½-foot roadways and one 15-foot space for trolleys in the middle of the street.

LOCAL IMPROVEMENTS.

Van Courtlandt District.

The Local Board of Van Courtlandt has adopted the following resolutions: For paving with bituminous concrete on a cement concrete foundation the roadway of East 191st street, from Bathgate avenue to Hughes avenue, adjusting curb where necessary; total estimated cost about $4,900. For regulating, grading, flagging, etc., in Grand avenue and in Harrison avenue, from the northerly line of the property of the Jerome avenue Realty Company to West 181st street. The work to be done in Davidson avenue has been provided for under petition No. 989, now pending before the Board of Estimate and Apportionment. For paving with granite blocks on a sand foundation (preliminary pavement) Exterior street, from the existing pavement at the south side of 151st street to Jerome avenue, setting curb where necessary. For laying out a change of line of West 252nd street, between Goodridge avenue and Fieldstone road, so that the south line of said street will coincide with the south line of Heaton place, as shown on the map of the Griswold Estate.

Chester District.

The Local Board of Chester has adopted the following resolutions:

For acquiring title to the lands necessary for White Plains road, from the present southerly terminus to the bulkhead line of the East River.

For constructing sewers and appurtenances in Rhinelander avenue, between Cruger avenue and Wallace avenue; Wallace avenue, between Rhinelander avenue and Bear Swamp road; Bear Swamp road, between Wallace avenue and Bronx Park east; Bronx Park east, between Bear Swamp road and the summit north of Mace avenue; Bronx and Pelham Parkway north, between Bronx Park east and Olinville avenue; Olinville avenue, between Bronx and Pelham Parkway north and the summit north of Mace avenue; Waring avenue, between Olinville avenue and the east side of White Plains road; White Plains road, east side, between Waring avenue and Mace avenue.

For regulating, grading, flagging, etc., in Matthews avenue, from Bronxdale avenue (Bear Swamp road) to Bronx and Pelham Parkway south, at a total estimated cost of about $3,700.

For acquiring title to the lands necessary for Thwaites Place, between Bronx Park east and White Plains road.

For acquiring title to the lands necessary for Digney avenue, from East 233rd street to East 237th street.

To have the title vested to Fort Schuyler road, from West Farms road to Eastern boulevard. The Board of Estimate and Apportionment on January 30 adopted a resolution directing that the title to the whole of Fort Schuyler road from the easterly terminus of the land acquired for West Farms road at Westchester Creek to Morris Lane shall vest in the City of New York on March 2. Recommendations made by the acting corporation counsel that the resolution be amended in so far as it affects damage parcels 103 and 104 of the opening proceeding. On February 20 the Board of Estimate and Apportionment rescinded its resolution of January 30 which fixed March 2 as the date when title was to vest in the city. The matter of change of lines of Fort Schuyler road between Coddington avenue and Whittemore avenue was on the calendar of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment March 27 and May 1 was the date fixed for a hearing thereon.

An Encroachment Case.

It is the duty of a real estate broker to inquire as to the terms of sale and as to matters affecting the general character of the property placed in his hands for sale, but the owner is not bound to inform the broker of encroachment unless asked, and it is not misrepresentation, either wilful or inadvertent, for him to remain mute when he is not asked.

This is the substance of an interesting decision affecting real estate brokerage transactions handed down by the Supreme Court, Appellate Term, First Department, with Justices Guy, Seabury and Bijur sitting.

An action had been brought by Frank E. Wiggins against the estate of Charles E. Coddington to recover brokers' commissions for procuring a purchaser for real property at 128-130 West 47th street, belonging to the defendant. Judgment had been entered in favor of Mr. Wiggins in the city court and the defendant appealed. The Supreme Court ordered a reversal of the judgment and a dismissal of the complaint. The opinion of Justice Guy with which the other justices concnrred outlines the facts in the case. It reads:

"Plaintiff solicited of defendant's counsel an opportunity to sell the property, which defendant agreed to, fixing the price at $75,000. Several offers of purchasers at a less price and on unsatisfactory terms were presented by plaintiff and rejected. During all these negotiations nothing was said about encroachments. Plaintiff asked defendant to reduce the price to $68,000, and asked for a memorandum of sale at that amount to show to a prospective purchaser. Defendant prepared and gave to plaintiff such a memorandum, showing encroachments by a neighboring building to the extent of five and one-half inches at one point. Plaintiff's proposed purchaser refused to purchase solely because of the encroachments as shown by the memorandum. Plaintiff claims that he produced a purchaser ready and willing to purchase defendant's property on the terms previously fixed by defendant, which did not refer to encroachments. The court charged in effect that mere silence as to the encroachments, on the part of the prospective seller, might be a misrepresentation and charged that the jury 'may infer wilful misrepresentation by silence.'

"In this the learned trial court erred. The broker is an expert in such matters, and it is his duty to inquire as to terms of sale and as to matters affecting the general character of the property. There is no duty on the part of a real estate owner to inform a broker of encroachments unless he is asked about them. It is not misrepresentation, either wilful or inadvertent, for him to remain mute, when he is not asked, and when he is under no duty to volunteer or speak. So far as appears the defendant had a good, marketable title to the realty and its appurtenances, which he offered to sell. No terms but the price had been determined before the delivery to plaintiff of the memorandum of sale.

"The plaintiff broker was not entitled, under such circumstances, to his commission until he produced a purchaser who reached an agreement with the owner upon the price and terms upon which a sale could be made, or until the minds of the owner and proposed purchaser met not only upon the price but upon the essential terms of an agreement to purchase. . . . The plaintiff failed to produce such a purchaser and has not made out a cause of action. The judgment must be reversed, with costs, and the complaint dismissed, with costs."

The attorneys in the suit were E. Powis Jones of Jones & Carleton for the appellant and Charles Trask, for the respondent.

PRIVATE REALTY SALES.

With the exception of a $1,000,000 deal resulting in the accumulation of a site for a new hospital in Stuyvesant Park and several transactions involving high class mercantile structures in East 24th street, East 19th street and West 29th street, the week's trading confined itself in the main to inconspicuous properties. There was no indication from the week's business of any revival of interest, although in several instances quick re-sales showed a professional element in the trading. There was, however, no center of buying activity and no particular class of purchasers predominated, nor did any particular section of the city show active tendencies. All branches of the market were quiet, the limited number of leases and the purchases of nearly all the auction offerings by plaintiffs reflecting the general weakness of the situation.

The total number of sales reported and not recorded in Manhattan this week was 26, as against 29 last week and 42 a year ago.

The number of sales south of 59th street was 11, compared with 14 last week and 12 a year ago.

The sales north of 59th street aggregated 15, as compared with 15 last week and 30 a year ago.

The total number of conveyances in Manhattan was 169, as against 184 last week, 12 having stated considerations totaling $425,136. Mortgages recorded this week number 101, involving $2,620,366, as against 107 last week, aggregating $2,651,983.

From the Bronx 17 sales at private contract were recorded, as against 14 last week and 18 a year ago.

The amount involved in Manhattan and Bronx auction sales this week was $1,443,991, compared with $960,285 last week, making a total since January 1 of $17,143,763. The figures for the corresponding week last year were $814,958, and the total from January 1, 1913, to May 17, 1913, was $22,349,391.

New Million Dollar Hospital.

Beth Israel Hospital, now in Jefferson street, has purchased 12 Livingston place from Charles Nunan, 13, 14, 15 and 16 Livingston place, from the Rutherfurd Estate, and 332-334 East 17th street from Mabel Minaldi, a plot containing about 14,000 square feet, on which a new hospital building will be erected at an estimated cost of about $1,000,000. No architect for the project has been selected and it is possible that the designer will be decided upon by competition. The new building will be from 12 to 16 stories in height and will include every convenience for the care and comfort of patients, and all the latest appliances known to medical and surgical practice. Joseph H. Cohen is president of the hospital. The committee on site, which selected the plot, is composed of Isaac L. Phillips, chairman; Meyer Vessel, vice-chairman; Abraham Nelson, secretary, and Morris Asinof, Harry Fischel, Leon Kamaiky, Samuel G. Lamport, Reuben Sadowsky, Julius Schwartz and Louis S. Stroock. The sale was negotiated by the Lewis H. May Co. and J. Edgar Leaycraft & Co., the latter firm representing the Rutherfurd estate.

Loft—Apartment Deal.

M. & L. Hess, Inc., sold for the 20th Street Realty Co., John LaSpinna, president, the new 12-sty. mercantile building 115-125 West 29th street, with a frontage of 92 feet, to the Vulcan Realty Co., Aaron Coleman, president. The building, which was erected last year, was rented from the plans and is fully tenanted. The purchasers give in part payment the 6-sty.
